Sales Tax For District Gets Backing Of McGrath

Chairman of Senate Committee Wants Further Study of Levy on Advertising

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) yesterday threw his weight behind the proposed 2 per cent retail sales tax for the city.

The announced support from the Senate District Committee chairman came as Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West completed final revisions on the revenue measure. It is expected to be introduced in the House and Senate Monday.

Senator McGrath said he would support the recommendation for the sales tax because "there was no foreseeable, attainable alternative."

The Senate District leader withheld final commitment on certain details of the bill, which has been kept closely under wraps pending West's submission of the final draft.

Studies Advertising Tax

"I want to consider further the question of applying the sales tax levy to newspaper, radio and television advertising," said McGrath. He pointed out that in radio advertising, particularly, much network advertising originates outside the District."

This situation, he said, could discriminate against local radio stations, adding that the same might hold true on national magazine and newspaper advertising.

McGrath indicated that the same reasoning might also apply to any tax on magazines purchased outside the District for resale locally.

The sales measure—focal point of the Commissioners' revenue-raising proposals to bring the city budget into balance—has been considered by the joint Senate-House District Fiscal Subcommittee during the past month.

Follows Maryland Pattern

Designed to conform as closely as possible to the Maryland sales tax, the District bill would exempt food for home consumption, medicine and several other items.

Senator Lester O. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate District Fiscal Subcommittee, said he expected West's final revised draft would go into the Senate and House hoppers "just about as is." He declined to reveal any details of the legislation.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), chairman of the House District Fiscal Subcommittee, is expected to file the measure on the House side.

Meanwhile, Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) arch foe of

New Helicopter Loops the Loop, Sets Speed Mark

By the United Press

The fastest helicopter in the world is now being tested by the Navy, the Piasecki Helicopter Corp., manufacturer, announced last night.

The company said the twin-rotor, streamlined helicopter, which carries seven, has attained a speed of 131 miles an hour, breaking the world's record of 124.315 held by a British Gyrodyne.

Piasecki disclosed the craft, the XHJP-1, had performed the first known helicopter loop. This was done by chief test pilot Jim Ryan, Green Bay, Wis., while testing the gravity forces which the ship could withstand. He was making dive tests and, applying full controls on one run, found the ship's nose up in a vertical position. He decided that to recover he had to continue through a loop.

Charles Bartlinsky recovers in Children's Hospital

A 7-year-old boy who disappeared from his home Thursday was found in a semiconscious condition early yesterday morning under a neighbor's front porch.

"Teddy" Bartlinsky, who lives at 1509 17th st. nw., was found by his neighborhood playmate, Catherine Brooke, 10, under her porch at 1631 P st. nw. about 9:30 a. m.

He was huddled in the leaves and dirt under an old piece of dress the children used for playing house. His tear-stained face was swollen and frostbitten and his lips were bleeding from continual biting. When he was found he was too weak to move or talk.

According to his mother, Mrs. Charles Bartlinsky, he left home Thursday morning for the John Quincy Adams School. When he failed to return late in the evening she became worried and went

Job Analysis Started by D. C. Officials

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A penetrating analysis of what each person in the employ of the District government is doing and whether he should continue doing it has been started by District personnel officials, it was learned last night.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, who is chairman of the District Personnel Board, said his staff has begun a long-range survey of the 18,000 District government positions so "that we can put our finger on any one job."

He explained that during the manpower shortage of World War II, some department heads, attempting to provide needed services, assigned additional duties to workers, then put through requests for salary for the employes on the basis of the added work.

Later, when the labor market improved, they filled existing vacancies and thus maintained larger, more highly paid staffs than were ever authorized by Congress or the Commissioners, Fowler said.

The current program is an attempt at attaining several modern personnel practice objectives, as well as to force a "shakedown" of overloaded departments.

First steps are to bring classification cards on each worker up to date. These are summations of just what duties are performed by each person and are used in job evaluation as a basis for determining salary levels.

Next are the development of organizational, functional and flow charts. The first of these shows the lines of responsibility between members of each department; the next indicates what services the department attempts to provide and the third shows through what sections such work must move.

In the case of large organizations such as Gallinger Hospital, this is being supplemented by drafting of operational charts. These show where services are

Majority Vote Gag on Senate Debate Fails

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Apparently defeated in advance in its effort to limit Senate debate by vote of a simple majority, the Administration yesterday warned it would hold Senate night sessions next week.

At the end of the sixth day of filibuster by Southern Democrats yesterday, Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois told the Senate that 44 of 54 Democrats had expressed themselves as favoring cloture on debate by a two-thirds majority. Earlier, a meeting of 22 Administration Senators disclosed that 15 insisted on a two-thirds vote to end filibusters. Lucas told reporters after the meeting that "six or eight" felt debate should be curbed by a "constitutional majority."

President Truman has asked, and Lucas has introduced a resolution providing for, cloture by a majority of Senators present. That could be as few as 25, a majority of the quorum of 49. A constitutional majority would re-

Truman Leaves For Vacation in Key West Today

President Truman leaves today for a 13-day vacation at his favorite resort, the United States Navy submarine base at Key West, Fla.

The President, accompanied by a small staff group, is scheduled to take off at 8:30 a. m. in the Flying White House, the DC-6 Independence, for a three-and-a-half-hour trip to Boca Chica Naval Air Base, just outside Key West.

Mr. Truman will remain in Key West until March 19, when he will fly back in time for the annual dinner of the White House News Photographers Association that night.

Hersholt to Give Rich Store Of Andersen Books to Nation

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The internationally famous Jean Hersholt collection of first editions and manuscripts of Hans Christian Andersen are eventually to become the property of the Library of Congress.

This has been disclosed to The Washington Post by the Danish-born American actor known to millions in his role of "Dr. Christian."

From his home in Beverly Hills, Calif., Hersholt told The Washington Post that his collection of the works of the Danish author of immortal fairy tales "will go to the Library of Congress upon my death, or as my testament states, at such time as my wife decides to ship it to the library, provided, of course, that she outlives me."

At the Library of Congress, officials, who knew of the possibility of the collection going to the national library but had no definite knowledge until now, were gratified "beyond words."

Librarian of Congress Luther Evans for some years has been cooperating with Hersholt to see that he obtained copies of every edition in English of Andersen's work, and for that reason knows the extent of the collection.

Dr. Evans did not know of Hersholt's plan, however, until

Truman Asks Tighter Rein On Services

Change of Military Establishment to Dept. of Defense Is Recommended

By The Associated Press

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to give his Defense Secretary the full authority he needs to direct the frequently feuding armed forces.

To bring this about, he recommended that the service unification law be changed to set up the present National Military Establishment as a full-fledged "Department of Defense."

In a special message to Congress—where lawmaking currently is slowed down by a Senate filibuster—he urged "prompt consideration" for his recommendations.

This urgency sprang from two things:

1. The President's assertion that it is essential to have an effective and workable organization in a world of long-range bombers, guided missiles and atom bombs.

2. The fact that within a month a new Defense Secretary, Louis Johnson, will succeed James V. Forrestal. The outgoing Secretary has complained of insufficient authority over the three elements of the unified military establishment, the Army, Navy and Air Force.

While Mr. Truman did not mention this point, one of the basic troubles of the defense establishment is that it existed chiefly as a coordinating agency of government. It has not been a true department of government, with the department chief having full authority over all units in it. Nor does it have, as other departments, an undersecretary and assistant secretaries to help administer the Secretary's directives.

Mr. Truman obviously had these points in mind when he recommended converting the National Military Establishment into a regular executive department. In line with this, he also recommended creation of the positions of undersecretary and three assistant secretaries.

In general, Mr. Truman's report was in line with the recommendations of the Hoover Commission, which investigated the national security organization. However, the proposal for converting the NME into a regular Government department went beyond the recommendations of the commission.

The President made no reference to a suggestion by the commission that the civilian secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force be demoted to the status of Undersecretaries of Defense for Army, Navy and Air. There have been reports on Capitol Hill that this recommendation was deemed politically inexpedient. He said:

"While the Secretary of Defense, as the head of the National Military Establishment, ought to be ultimately accountable, under the President, for its administration, he is specifically limited by this act in the degree to which he may hold the military departments responsible to him. The departmental secretaries are specifically authorized to deal directly with higher authority. Furthermore, the key responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense have been assigned by this statute, not to

Not to Accept West's State, Reds Warn

German Restitution Policies of U. S. Are Attacked in Sokolovsky Letter

By Wes Gallagher

Berlin, March 5 (AP).—The Soviet Union served notice tonight it will not recognize nor accept the western German state now being formed under the guidance of the United States, France and Britain.

The notice came in a letter from Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in Germany, to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor. The letter bitterly attacked the United States' restitution policies in Germany and gave no indication there will be any softening of Russia's cold war against the West.

After listing scores of Soviet claims against properties in western Germany, Sokolovsky gave the warning about the proposed western German state.

The Soviet commander gave no indication as to how Russia proposes to deal with the western German state.

Turning down an American proposal which he said provided for the transfer of restitution functions to consulates to be established in the occupation zones, Sokolovsky said:

"The Soviet authorities cannot accept such a proposal, since it constitutes an attempt to force them to approve the transformation of occupation zones into separate state units and the establishment of a western German state.

"The Soviet authorities, consistently advocating the unity of Germany and the formation of a democratic sovereign state, categorically oppose any proposals aimed at the splitting of the country."

The letter claimed the U. S. has blocked Soviet attempts to obtain their lawful properties in western Germany.

The letter, released by the Soviet news agency, said the situation regarding restitution is "completely inadmissable."

Sokolovsky stressed that the Soviet got back properties worth only 80,000 marks in 1948 while other nations, mainly those of the Western bloc, had received properties worth 174 million marks.

"These facts show," the letter said, "that such unsatisfactory results were caused by efforts of American authorities to prevent

Behind-Scenes Senate Battle Is Waged Over Labor Bill

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A fierce behind-scenes struggle over control of the new labor bill is going on in the Senate.

Republicans are saying — and some are even boasting—that the Administration lost the ball when it voted out the Thomas bill Friday without a single amendment.

Many Democrats, including stanch champions of both the Administration and labor, privately concede there's hardly a chance of pushing the Thomas bill through the Senate as is, or with but a few minor amendments. Union legislative representatives on Capitol Hill are similarly glum.

However, there is still a small band of Fair Deal Democrats in the Senate who are preparing to fight for the Administration's—and organized labor's—bill repealing the Taft-Hartley Act and replacing it with an "improved" version of the New Deal's Wagner Act.

This core of Fair Dealers say the fight is just beginning. They say that with the Thomas bill reported out of committee, the big unions and their political auxiliaries are now in a position to arouse support for the legislation all over the country.

Organized labor, the Fair Dealers predict, will now initiate a tremendous campaign to stir up public sentiment for the new labor legislation, just as the unions went all out for Truman and, with few exceptions, the Democratic candidates for Congress.

If necessary, according to the band of grim optimists, the President himself will take off to the whistle-stops—just as he did so successfully in the campaign—to put over the labor bill and the rest of his Fair Deal program.

The President himself hinted he would tour the Nation on behalf of his legislative program if the Eighty-first Congress proved to be balky.

Between the crusade of organized labor and the personal campaign of the President, enough public pressure will be put on the Southern Democrats and middle-of-the-road Republicans to squeeze the Thomas bill, perhaps with a few amendments but fundamentally unchanged, through the Senate, so reason the Fair Deal diehards.

And so far as the House is concerned, the Fair Dealers believe the Administration has the situation completely in hand.

Gromyko Made Deputy To Vishinsky

U. N. Veto Specialist Promoted in Shift At Foreign Office

By R. H. Shackford

London, March 5 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union promoted Andrei Gromyko, former Ambassador to Washington and chief Soviet United Nations delegate, to first deputy foreign minister tonight.

The 41-year-old Gromyko, who personally cast 24 of the 25 vetoes made by Russia during his two years in the U. N., succeeds Andrei Vishinsky, who last night took V. M. Molotov's place as foreign minister.

Gromyko's appointment was announced by Radio Moscow. No further details were given. Nor did Moscow make any further reference to Molotov's release from his duties as foreign minister.

However, western Europe expected that Premier Josef Stalin may give Molotov even more power in the Soviet Union as his top deputy. Some observers believed Stalin might even make Molotov premier again.

Moreover, most diplomatic experts on Russia were convinced

Truman Indicates That He Won't Run Again in 1952

President Truman made it clear last night that he expected to leave the White House after his present term.

In an impromptu talks at the twenty-sixth annual dinner of the White House Correspondents' Association at the Statler Hotel, Mr. Truman said that he liked everything about the White House, except the second floor.

That, he said, was about to fall down.

"But we hope to have that remedied by 1952," the President said, "so that the next man can go in without any trouble."

Establishment of an Air Force counterpart of West Point and Annapolis has been approved by the Administration, it was disclosed yesterday.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal announced that legislation to create an Air Academy will be sent to Congress shortly, and aides indicated the plan had been cleared with the White House.

At the same time, Forrestal appointed an eight-man top-level board to review the present methods of training candidates for officer rank in the armed forces and recommend a single system of basic education for young officers.

Education should emphasize "teamwork" between the services, he told the new "Service Academy Board."

Midwest May Get Vast Atomic Plant

The Atomic Energy Commission is considering construction of a giant experimental station "somewhere in the Midwest," officials disclosed last night.

They said the plant would "compare in size with the atomic plant at Hanford, Wash."—now the commission's largest installation. Its cost was estimated at "several hundred million dollars."

No decision has been reached on where the plant will be built. AEC officials said "half a dozen sites" are under consideration, including areas in southeastern Idaho and Montana. It would require "about three or four hundred thousand acres." The Hanford plant covers slightly more than 400,000 acres.

Rakosi Charges Vatican 'Plot'

13 Hungarians Are Sentenced For Black Mart Money Deals

Budapest, Hungary, March 5 (AP).—A workers' court convicted 13 persons today of black market money deals in an alleged political conspiracy with Josef Cardinal Mindszenty and sentenced them to prison.

Simultaneously, Communist Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi charged diplomatic documents proved the Vatican had plotted to form a "union of Catholic countries" as a Danube monarchy. He said in a speech that efforts to reach an agreement between the Roman Catholic Church and the Hungarian government failed "because the Vatican placed their interests at the disposal of American imperialism."

(The Vatican has refused to negotiate church-state differences with Hungary until Cardinal Mindszenty is freed and freedom of religion is guaranteed in Hungary.)

Among the 13 convicted today were Msgr. Imre Boka, the Cardinal's former treasurer, and two other Roman Catholic priests. Monsignor Boka's sentence was fixed at four years' imprisonment, loss of political rights for an additional five years, and a fine of 1000 florients ($83).

The heaviest sentence—eight years—was imposed on Dr. Gabor Horvath, former secretary to Duke Paul Esterhazy.

The court rejected efforts of six defendants to withdraw pretrial confessions that they said were drawn from them by police intimidation.

FBI Grabs Pair on Bus After 9-Mile N. Y. Chase

Justice Department Analyst Under Bail Of $20,000; Russian Is Employe of U. N.

(Pictures and Related Stories on Pages 3 and 4)

By John London
Post Reporter

A sultry-eyed Washington Government girl and a Russian United Nations employe were charged yesterday with stealing and receiving United States secrets after a melodramatic pursuit by FBI agents through 9 miles of New York streets.

Seized as they converged for a clandestine rendezvous on a 3rd ave. bus were:

Judith Coplon, 27, of 3685 38th st. nw., a Barnard College graduate employed in the foreign agents registration section of the Justice Department, and Valentine A. Gubitchev, 32, a stocky, married Russian engineer who has been working on plans for the permanent U. N. headquarters in New York.

Announced by Clark

Announcement of the dramatic arrest was made here by Attorney General Tom Clark. He said FBI agents found in Miss Coplon's purse a flat package containing typewritten summaries of information taken from confidential documents involving security data and restricted information.

Exactly what was in the abstracted documents found in Miss Coplon's purse was kept secret, as were most other details in the bizarre affair.

However, the Justice Department indicated they were actually planted and valueless. Officials also said that Miss Coplon had been under surveillance for some time, as a result of suspicion cast upon her by a routine loyalty check.

Held in $20,000 Bail

Miss Coplon, a 5-foot brunette, described by associates as having superior intellect, was held in $20,000 bail. The double-chinned Gubitchev was held in $100,000 bail by Federal Judge Simon Rifkind.

After arraignment on the technical charge of conspiring to commit an offense against the United States by removal of Government records, and to deprive the Government of the "faithful and impartial services" of Miss Coplon, the pair were returned to jail where they had spent the night.

The arrest of the Russian was protested here by Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin who demanded immediate release of Gubitchev, a former employe of the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

International complications were deemed sure to arise over the question of whether Gubitchev should receive diplomatic immunity because of his U. N. status.

The case also promised to provide ammunition for those who have warned that spies and sabo-

The embargo applies to American, British, French and Soviet sectors of the blockaded German capital.

A department official said the action was taken because of transportation difficulties.

The action followed conferences between Postal, Army and State Department officials, John Gillen, top assistant in the International Mail Division, told a reporter.

Since the Russian blockade interrupted train service in and out of Berlin, United States parcel post packages have been shipped by boat to Gdynia, Poland, and forwarded by Polish authorities into Berlin.

The Postoffice Department said the Polish postal officials have now advised them that transportation difficulties will make a continuation of this forwarding service impossible.

Menshikov Known as Incessant Talker, Left Bad Impression With UNRRA Staff

While Mikhail Alekseevich Menshikov was in Washington as a deputy director-general of UNRRA he made a definite impression on his coworkers—bad.

"He was not cooperative and he was not fair-minded," a former UNRRA associate said yesterday of the man who has become minister of foreign trade in the shake-up within the Soviet government.

The associate said he had also met A. I. Mikoyan, whose job Menshikov has inherited in the upheaval, and would prefer to deal with Mikoyan.

Some more impressions of Menshikov:

"He was not very brilliant, but he would carry out an assignment with great tenacity. You could never feel that he would take the objective viewpoint of a problem.

Soviet Principles Paramount

"Sometimes UNRRA officials would take stands that were at variance with the official viewpoints of their own countries. But not Menshikov. Russian principles were always paramount with him."

Menshikov was appointed one of the three deputy directors-general of UNRRA at headquarters here in January, 1944.

There were reports his appointment had been "dictated" by the then Russian Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko. The Russian Embassy indignanty denied the reports.

As for Herbert H. Lehman, then director-general of UNRRA, he was amused and told reporters there was no truth to the reports.

Talked Incessantly

Menshikov is 46, blonde and probably could be called handsome. While in Washington, he attended some social functions of UNRRA but he hardly qualified as a social gadabout. At gatherings, he talked incessantly, but not always brilliantly or charmingly.

At one cocktail party given by Lehman, Menshikov attended with his wife. While the Menshikovs were with one small group, an UNRRA official directed a few words to Mrs. Menshikov in English.

"She doesn't speak much," interrupted Menshikov bruskly.

"Oh, well," replied the UNRRA official, "I'm sure you speak enough for the whole family."

Menshikov remained with UNRRA here until late in 1946 when he resigned his post and returned to Moscow. Another Russian was named to succeed him.

M. A. MENSHIKOV
Red minister of trade

Assignment to Poland

One of his UNRRA assignments took him to Poland to negotiate with the Polish government for establishment of an UNRRA commission in that country.

Not much is known about Menshikov before his emergence as a top official of UNRRA. He was born in the Voronezh district of Russia. He attended the Moscow Economic Institute and was graduated in 1920 at the age of 18 and received an advance degree as an economist.

After leaving UNRRA, Menshikov signed a trade pact between Russia and Egypt at Cairo, the first agreement ever signed by the two countries. The agreement provided for barter of Russian grains for Egyptian cotton.

He became first Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade in a Soviet shakeup of vice ministries in September, 1948.

Isolationism May Explain Red Shifts

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

A new Russian isolationism may lie at the heart of the Kremlin policies which brought about the replacement of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov by his fast-talking deputy, Andrei Vishinsky.

This possibility emerged yesterday out of speculation stirred among Washington officials and diplomats by the startling Soviet development.

It could mean either a softening or toughening of Russian policy toward the West—either Soviet moves for a truce in the cold war or the opening up of new political battlefronts.

If Russian policy is to be softened, American officials are convinced that it will be done gradually. They said it will probably show up in negotiations over long-standing controversies such as the Austrian treaty, Berlin blockade and related German problems, and rearmament and atomic controls in the United Nations.

More Information Available

But if the Russians do not not want a truce, their tougher policy will be manifested in their border countries, top officials here believe. It might show up in Iran, Finland and Turkey, and in what they do about the lining up of Norway with the Atlantic pact powers.

Washington officials emphasized that no accurate appraisal of the significace of the Molotov-Vishinsky shift can be made until more information is available. Neither can the parallel replacement of foreign trade Minister Mikoyan by his deputy be analyzed fully.

The same was true of the reported shift of Andrei Gromyko, deputy in the Russian foreign office, to be successor to Vishinsky as first deputy minister for foreign affairs.

However, it is believed here that if a new period of isolationism is at hand, Russia's world relations may follow lines of the prewar decades rather than the 10 years Molotov held power.

This would mean that the Foreign Office would be overshadowed in real foreign relations by the Cominform. This is the old Communist international in new postwar dress.

While the issues have never been too clearly known, it is believed there has been rivalry between the foreign office and the Cominform since its creation a year and a half ago. The Cominform was set up to fight the Marshall Plan in the open in eastern Europe and under cover in western Europe. It could readily expand to become the real undercover instrument by which Soviet operates throughout the world toward Russia's long-range objectives. It may be that already.

American and other western diplomats here believe the following points are probably true with respect to the Soviet shakeup:

1. Molotov and Mikoyan, top-level political figures in Russia for a quarter of a century, were members of the controlling politburo. They probably continue in power.

2. Molotov may have been moved into a spot from which he can be prepared to take over Stalin's duties increasingly. Mikoyan may be given some other responsible position.

3. The successors to these two top flight men in the foreign policy and foreign trade ministries are regarded by Russian observers here as "technicians"—that is, men accustomed to take orders rather than to make basic policy. Gromyko is regarded in the same light.

4. If the Russians themselves share the western view that Vishinsky and the new foreign trade minister have much less prestige and influence than the men they replaced, then the conclusion is that the importance of the Foreign Office and the trade ministry are being minimized by the Politburo.

These points lead to the speculation that the Soviet government may be turning in upon itself, leaving direct handling of its foreign ministry to men of lesser stature than it employed during the past 10 years.

Several other pieces fit into this kind of pattern. One is that the Soviets a year ago reached the outer limits of Communist expansion as fixed by the area of their military power.

Meanwhile, the United States and other western powers have constructed a rough wall of armies and policies to block further Soviet-Communist expension.

Having pushed up to that line the Russians were also confronted with a steadying of political and economic conditions in the western countries. This has made increasingly difficult the efforts of Communist agents to overthrow western governments from within.

Observers See No Change in Soviet Policy

By Henry Shapiro

Moscow, March 5 (U.P.).—Foreign observers said today they do not believe the Soviet cabinet shuffle will bring any change in Russian foreign policy.

There was no official Soviet comment on the appointment of Andrei Vishinsky to succeed V. M. Molotov as Foreign Minister and M. A. Menshikov to succeed Anastas I. Mikoyan as Foreign Trade Minister.

Moscow newspapers tended to belittle the significance of the change by publishing the brief official announcement without comment on the back page.

There was nothing in the official announcement to indicate that Molotov and Mikoyan are not retaining their deputy premierships or their membership in the all-powerful Soviet Politburo, which determines policy.

They are among the oldest members of the Politburo, outranked in seniority only by Premier Josef Stalin himself and Klementi Voroshilov.

Foreign observers cited two facts:

1. The structure of the Russian state and the Communist Party is such that Soviet policy is not made by single individuals but by the collective group of the central committee or the Politburo under Stalin's supreme leadership.

2. Vishinsky and Menshikov have been the right hands and skillful, able lieutenants of their respective chiefs, Molotov and Mikoyan, and in no sense whatever can they be said to represent different policies or political lines.

Certain foreign observers here ventured a guess that Molotov and Mikoyan were released from onerous administrative duties, which can be easily managed by their trusted deputies, so as to enable them to devote all their time to matters of top level policy.

The Moscow press ignored altogether the Norwegian government's announcement that it had rejected Soviet overtures for a Soviet-Norwegian nonagression pact.

Moscow newspapers did, however, headline Washington and London dispatches on Norway's stand with the Atlantic pact nations.

St. Laurent Asks Realism

Montreal, March 5 (AP).—Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent said today a person would have to lack the "most elementary realism" to consider another war an impossibility.

"There is no doubt that war is avoidable—I am sure that if we follow our present firm policy we can avoid war," he said. "But one would have to be lacking most elementary realism to consider war an impossibility."

St. Laurent made the statements in a speech at a Richelieu Club luncheon.

In the speech, largely devoted to an outline of Canada's reasons for supporting the North Atlantic alliance, the Prime Minister blamed Russia for the current international unrest.

Christian nations have not lost hope that the United Nations will work, but pending that time they are conscious of the necessity for them to assure their own security through regional pacts, such as the North Atlantic pact, he said.

Italian Reds Call for Pact Discussions

Rome, Italy, March 5 (U.P.).—Italian Communists today called for an immediate parliamentary debate on the Atlantic pact as a split among the right-wing Socialists gave them the breach in government solidarity they had been hoping for.

The right-wing Socialists called a special party congress in June to settle a leadership split over the Atlantic pact, and there were signs the dispute might lead to a cabinet crisis if the party decided to abandon the pro-Western government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

The split played directly into the hands of the Communists who are campaigning in the provinces to stir resentment against the Atlantic pact.

De Gasperi has had almost a year of unshaken political control following defeat of the Communists at last year's general elections.

Pietro Nenni, leader of the pro-Communist Socialists and often a spokesman for Communist policy, announced he would present a three-point formal demand Monday for an immediate debate on Italian adherence to military pacts.

Rumors were current again that Foreign Commerce Minister Cesare Merzagora, an independent, was seeking to resign. Liberal Giuseppe Perrone-Capano quit as undersecretary for education.

Many non-Communists have objected to the Atlantic pact in favor of a "strict neutrality guaranteed by the United Nations" despite De Gasperi's repeated declarations that such a policy would be "suicide."

The right-wing Socialist directive council voted 8 to 7 against taking part in any international pacts containing military obligations.

The vote was a defeat within his own party for Vice Premier Giuseppe Saragat.

The decision meant that party participation in the government will be indecisive until the congress meets.

15 Bulgarian Churchmen Will Learn Fate on Tuesday

By Richard Kasischke

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 5 (AP).—Verdicts in the treason trial of 15 Bulgarian Protestant ministers are to be returned at 3 p. m. (8 a. m. EST) Tuesday. All begged the court's mercy in final pleas today.

A motion picture crew filmed the scene as the ministers, four of them weeping, again expressed repentance and asked for a new chance to work for the Communist-controlled government.

They face possible penalties ranging from 10 years imprisonment to death on charges of seeking to overthrow the government, spying for the United States and Britain and dealing illegally in foreign currency.

The No. 1 defendant, the Rev. Vassil Ziapkov, made the longest and most emotional plea, crying:

"If you were a fascist court I would not expect from you other than simply a verdict, but since you are a people's court I expect something more than a punishment, a chance to repair my errors. I am starting a new life. My old life ends today. Up to now, I have been serving foreign gods. Please help me to become a hero of the Fatherland Front (the government). If you give me the gift of life, I shall dedicate my life to faithful work for the Fatherland Front."

The prosecution has demanded death for Ziapkov, 48-year-old Congregationalist, and three others on the supreme council of the United Evangelical Churches of Bulgaria.

West's State Unacceptable

the restitution of Soviet property looted by the Nazis.

The letter claimed United States authorities in Germany have sabotaged activities of the Soviet restitution mission by not permitting the Russian mission to inspect German factories, archives, museums, and art galleries in its efforts to pin down Soviet properties there.

The communication said most of the Soviet applications for return of Russian property have been turned down by American authorities under several pretenses, even in cases when the Germans had said Soviet property was in their hands.

that Vishinsky will continue unabated Russia's side of the East-West cold war.

Gromyko has been serving as one of several deputy foreign ministers in relative obscurity since he was relieved last spring as Soviet permanent delegate to the U. N.

It was believed he headed the American section of the Soviet Foreign Office. Last November, Radio Moscow announced that Gromyko had been awarded the Order of the Red Banner of Labor for "outstanding services to the Soviet state in the diplomatic sphere."

But apart from that, little has been heard of him since he left the U. N. at Lake Success.

The first tip Gromyko had moved up in the Soviet Foreign Ministry shuffle came when Moscow reported that both he and Vishinsky had attended a reception in honor of a northern Korea delegation visiting Moscow. A little later Moscow broadcast the formal announcement of his promotion.

Moscow said the Korean reception was the first attended by Vishinsky in his new capacity as Foreign Minister. He stood at Stalin's side receiving the Koreans, the broadcast said.

The dark and handsome Gromyko, who drew large female audiences during his appearances in the Security Council at Lake Success, was just a second-level diplomat in the Soviet Embassy in Washington when he was catapulted into fame with the appointment as Ambassador in 1943.

He was born near Minsk of peasant descent, but left farm life in his early 'teens to attend the Soviet Institute of Economics. He was sent to Washington in 1938 and rose steadily from counselor to Ambassador in five years.

As Ambassador, he represented the Soviet Union at the Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences, and became permanent delegate to the UN at its foundation.

Gromyko created the greatest furor in the early tempestuous career of the U. N. in the spring of 1946 when he walked out of the Security Council to protest its refusal to postpone debate on Iran's complaint against alleged Soviet interference in its domestic affairs.

Henceforth, to "pull a Gromyko' became standard U. N. slang for any kind of a walkout.

The Soviet government has still to explain what, if anything, lies behind the noncommittal announcement over Radio Moscow last night that Vishinsky has replaced Molotov and that M. A. Menshikov had replaced foreign trade minister, Anastas I Mikoyan.

Diplomats believe that a possible change in Soviet tactics is the most they can hope for.

There is no sign of any weakening of Western determination to proceed with such projects as the North Atlantic Security Pact.

Belief that Stalin has marked Molotov for bigger tasks found support in an urgent report sent the British Foreign Office by Sir Maurice Peterson, British Ambassador in Moscow.

The report, it was learned, described Molotov's release as a promotion to help Stalin rather than a demotion. Peterson pointed out that Molotov remains "No. 2" man—second only to Stalin—in the Soviet Union, retains his deputy premiership and is still a member of the Politburo.

Diplomatic quarters took the view Mikoyan's departure from the foreign trade ministry did not mean his eclipse. Like Molotov, he remained a member of the Politburo and a deputy premier.

It has been normal procedure to keep key men in the Politburo while shifting them in and out of government ministries.

For example, L. P. Beria, chief of the secret police, was relieved in 1946 as minister of internal affairs. But he remained a member of the Politburo and a deputy premier and his power never has diminished.

In what is now regarded as the remote possibility that the Politburo has decided to soften its policy toward the West, these sources added, it would be natural to let some individual of lesser stature in the Soviet hierarchy than Molotov make the change. Vishinsky is not a member of the Politburo.

[An informed source, close to Britain's Foreign Office, said he believed Molotov was about to become a sort of super-director of Russian policy, or "general supervisor of foreign policy," the Associated Press reported.

[Georges Bidault, former French foreign minister who has negotiated with both Molotov and Vishinsky, said, "My reaction is not good. I fear that optimism would be foolhardy."

[Paul Reynaud, wartime premier of France, took an optimistic slant. He said Vishinsky's appointment "may be considered as the sign of a change in Soviet foreign policy at which the friends of peace can only rejoice." He speculated that Molotov was relieved because of "a certain number of disappointments" over his policies.]

Girl Seized by FBI Called 'Gossipy'

By James F. Donovan
United Press Staff Writer

Judith Coplon is a gossipy little thing.

Around the Justice Department which 1 covered, she was chatty and vivacious. She seemed ever-ready to exchange pleasantries and small talk with other girls in the department's internal security section.

But she was known as a hard worker, too. Sometimes, she was still on the job when other workers on the first floor of the Justice Department Building had quit for the day.

Miss Coplon is an analyst in the internal security section. She has been in Government service for five years.

Scarcely 5 feet tall, Miss Coplon has dark, laughing eyes, long, dark hair and white, even teeth which flashed often as she smiled.

She is the girl who was arrested by the FBI in New York Friday night on charges of conspiring to give secret United States Government information to a staff member of the Soviet delegation to the United Nations.

Miss Coplan worked in that office of the internal security section where the registrations of foreign agents are kept. In her work she was in contact frequently with the State Department.

The Justice Department claims she was only a minor employe. But she was important enough to have her own office, with her name on the door.

The alien registration records are public property. It was Miss Coplon who helped newsmen in examining the file of Secretary of State Dean Acheson's law firm when the question of its connection with a Polish purchasing commission came up after his nomination.

Affable and smiling, she went to great pains to explain to newsmen just what each of the complicated documents meant.

Unlike most women employes of the security-conscious Justice Department, she gave her opinion freely of many of the Justice Department officials.

She had a great respect for the FBI.

Accused Girl Recalled As Just Good Neighbor

If earthy-looking Judith Coplon really was a spy for a Russian agent, she played that sinister role to Mata Hari perfection.

In the eyes of associates and neighbors she appeared "unobtrusive . . . bright, yes . . . but very normal."

She was always conservatively dressed, poised and pleasant.

That's the way she is remembered by a former neighbor, Roger B. Garlock, 6212 Greentree rd., Bethesda. Garlock used to live next door to Miss Coplon in an apartment house at 2634 Tunlaw rd. nw., where she resided for about two years until last June.

Was Good Neighbor

"She was a very good neighbor, pleasant and sociable," Garlock recalled. "Occasionally she'd drop in to see us, sometimes we'd go over and chat with her."

Her conversation never ranged into politics or economics, Garlock said.

"If you mentioned an opinion about the state of the Nation or the chances of peace, she'd say in effect, 'That's too bad,' or 'That's fine'—and that was the end of it," Garlock, a mechanical engineer, said.

Often at night in her one-room, $55 apartment, sparsely decorated with modern furniture, she would tap away at a typewriter. Occasionally, the late clacking drove neighbors to complain.

They assumed she was typing notes or papers for school. A 1943 Barnard College graduate, she did graduate work in Washington at George Washington and American Universities in recent years.

She was a night student for a master's degree at American University from September, 1945, to January, 1948. She studied international relations. Her schedule included two courses on Russia.

After abandoning her plans to get an M.A. at American University, she registered for night classes at George Washington University Law School in February, 1948, but quit within a month.

Took Trip to Europe

Last summer she gave up her apartment at the Tunlaw rd. address and took a trip to Europe, according to Garlock.

She returned after about two or three months to pick up some things she had left at the apartment. She dropped in to see the Garlocks, told them she had " . . . a fine trip . . . a well-earned vacation." Garlock recalls she mentioned visiting Paris.

Miss Coplon had a "slender, tall and dark boy friend," Garlock recalled. Occasionally she had friends in to dinner; sometimes she went bike-riding on her days off from the Justice Department.

She was fond of good music and had a sizable collection of classical records. She also took a shine to the folksy singing of Burl Ives.

Since late July she has had a $34.50 room at McLean Gardens. Desk attendants and other roomers remember her only as "a quiet, pleasant person."

She wrote a paper on "Economic Planning in the Soviet Union" for a course at American University on Soviet government and politics during the fall of 1947-1948.

Viewpoint Objective

The viewpoint of the paper was "objective, pointing out the weak points as well as the strong points of Russian economics," her instructor said last night.

"When I heard about her arrest I got out the paper and read it again," the faculty member said. "There was no pro-Soviet indication at all."

"For example, when she wrote about the collectivization of peasant farms she pointed out that it was accomplished by many ruthless measures."

The paper, he said, was based on reading of "standard works by non-Russians, available in any library, which I recommended to her."

That Was a Year Ago

There was nothing in her writing or class discussion which led him to believe she was pro-Communist, he said. He added: "However, that was a year ago and I don't know whom she's met and how anyone may have changed her viewpoint."

"I knew at the time she was working with the FBI on something to do with some relations with the Soviet Union and she said she wanted to learn about Russian economics, which she didn't know much about before she took the course."

Another former teacher of Miss Coplon, Dean Pitman B. Potter of the graduate school, said he remembered her "as being on the liberal or progressive side."

"She was thinking things over but you wouldn't say she had a very strong slant, that she was definitely Red."

Dean Potter added that he recalled her as "a very mature person . . . but uncertain about basic assumptions," when she was a student of his between about 1944 and 1946. A good student, she was in the top 10 per cent, he said.

Father of Girl Accused by FBI Was 'Santa of Adirondacks'

New York, March 5 (AP).—The man who was Santa Claus to poor mountain children in the Adirondacks for more than 25 years was in a new role today—father of an alleged spy.

The one-time "Santa Claus of the Adirondacks," Samuel M. Coplon, is the father of Judith Coplon, Justice Department worker charged with conspiracy to commit espionage.

Now a paralytic invalid, Coplon was secluded in his Brooklyn home today while his 27-year-old daughter was arraigned and held in $20,000 bond.

His wife is invalided by a heart ailment.

Judith's brother, Bertram, who took over his father's toy business some years ago, said at the home today that the spy charge was "an awful shock to the family."

Young Coplon said he went to his sister's arraignment and was trying to raise bail from friends.

"I don't know where I'll get it but I'm going to get it," he said. "I told her to keep her chin up; that the family was behind her."

His father, a native of Troy, N. Y., gave $10,000 worth of toys to needy mountain children in 1935 on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his annual "Santa Claus" pilgrimage up State.

In recent years his illness had forced him to drop his Santa Claus role.

He began the yearly trip to the mountains with his crates of toys after he went to live at Johnsburg, N. Y., for his health following the Spanish-American War.

His son described Coplon today as "a rabid, conservative Republican" who once had been a party poll watcher at Albany, his wife's native town.

"But he never had any serious discussions of politics with my sister," Bertram said. "My sister probably voted the same way I did—we always voted for the man we thought best."

The family never had questioned Miss Coplon about her Government job, he said.

He said they never had heard of her speak of Valentine A. Gubitchev, Russian engineer arrested with her.

"I can't even pronounce his name," he added.

Girl Praised By Superiors

New York, March 5 (U.P.)—Judith Coplon, the 27-year-old Department of Justice employe arrested for allegedly stealing Government documents, was highly praised three months ago by two of her superiors in letters on file at her alma mater, Barnard College of Columbia University, it was revealed today.

Dean Millicent C. McIntosh, released a two-page statement describing her high intelligence, talents and pleasing personality.

Miss McIntosh quoted from two letters of recommendation sent to Barnard when Miss Coplon sought part-time employment there in research or writing.

One, from Laurence A. Knapp, chief of foreign agent registration of the Department of Justice reads:

"I found that she had superior talent in work of this character, which she coupled with a distinctly cooperative and friendly personality. In addition, she had an unusually broad background which lent to her judgment a scope and dependability not usually found in persons of equal age and experience."

The second letter, from Jesse M. MacKnight, chief of the analysis unit of the department, said:

"Miss Judith Coplon worked on my staff for the period 2/45 to 2/46 as an assistant political analyst. During this period she was responsible for preparation and review of materials in the French and Belgian fields. She showed herself as a capable and industrious and intelligent research worker. She devoted herself to her work and showed a considerable amount of initiative. Her language skills were more than adequate in French and good in German and Russian. She is the type of person who would be useful and valuable as a research worker."

Miss McIntosh said Miss Coplon's school average at Barnard was 92 plus and she was graduated with honors in history in 1943. She also cited Miss Coplon's extra-curricular activities as "exceptional," and quoted the faculty adviser of one student club as saying:

"She is a most generous and unselfish young woman, always industrious and extremely capable and dependable.

Nixon Demands Investigation Of Justice Dept.'s Fitness

A House spy investigator yesterday demanded a full-scale investigation to determine whether the Justice Department is qualified to protect this country against "Communist infiltration."

The demand was made by Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. It followed the arrest of a Justice Department employe in New York on charges of stealing United States secrets.

"In my opinion, this case shows why the department may be unfit and unqualified to carry out the responsibility of protecting the national security against Communist infiltration," Nixon said. He said the employe's activities should have been discovered years ago.

The Justice Department employe was pretty, 27-year-old Judith Coplon, who worked in the Foreign Agents Registration Section. She was arrested on a New York bus with Valentine A. Gubitchev, third secretary of the Soviet secretariat of the United Nations.

Meanwhile, another spokesman for the Committee on Un-American Activities said it may investigate charges that Soviet delegates to the United Nations have engaged in espionage activities in the United States. He disclosed the group will consider the question at a closed meeting Monday.

He said committee investigators already have made "preliminary" inquiries into the activities of U. N. delegates from the Soviet Union and satellite countries.

The spokesman, who asked that his name be withheld until the whole committee can consider the investigation, said an attempt may be made to bring Miss Coplon and Gubitchev before the group in executive session. He said the committee plans "to go as far as we can without interfering with the FBI." He added that some of the hearings probably will be public.

It was learned that Miss Coplon's name figured in a confidential report to Chairman John Wood (D., Ga.) of the House Committee on Un-American Activities on September 3, 1946. The report carried highly critical statements by an informant about the Foreign Agents Registration Section.

The informant, now a social science professor in a midwestern university, said he had worked with Miss Coplon as a "political analyst." He did not specifically criticize the Government girl but said there was a definite pro-Soviet attitude in the registration section.

He alleged that the section "condemned" anything that was "anti-Soviet." At the same time, he said, anything that was "pro-Russian" was "considered satisfactory."

Reports on pro-Soviet foreign agents often failed to reach the desks of responsible Government officials, the informant said. And prosecutions for failure of these agents to register were rarely pressed.

Nixon admitted there was such a report in the committee files. He said it indicated a "shocking, inexcusable laxity on the part of the Justice Department in screening its own employes for loyalty."

The committee attempted to press an investigation of the matter at the time but was blocked by Justice Department refusal to cooperate, he said.

Nixon said that the report showed the section to be responsible for keeping four Communist fronts from registering under the Foreign Agents Registration Act. Any statement that Miss Coplon was a "minor" employe is "ridiculous," he said.

Mother Won't Believe Charges

New York, March 5 (AP).—The mother of Judith Coplon sobbed "I don't believe it, I don't believe it," when she learned today that her daughter had been arrested on charges of conspiring to steal Government papers.

Reached at her Brooklyn home by telephone, Mrs. Samuel Coplon cried: "What's the matter, what's the matter with my daughter? Oh, tell me quick. Oh, God, God, please tell me."

Informed that Miss Coplon, 27-year-old United States Justice Department employe, and an employe of the Russian delegation to the United Nations were in Federal custody, accused of conspiring to remove United States documents, Mrs. Coplon cried:

"No, no, no. It's not so. I don't believe it. I don't believe it. I'll never believe it."

She then broke into an outburst of sobs. A woman who said she was Miss Coplon's aunt took the telephone.

Red Envoy Asks Engineer's Release

Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin yesterday demanded release of a Russian engineer held by the FBI in New York on charges of receiving stolen United States Government information.

The State Department informed him it is still studying the circumstances surrounding the arrest of Valentine A. Gubitchev, a Soviet employe of the United Nations Secretariat.

Panyushkin had no comment when he left the State Department after discussing the affair for a full hour with Undersecretary of State James E. Webb and Assistant Secretary Dean Rusk.

Gubitchev Is Not Entitled To Immunity, U. N. Says

Lake Success, March 5 (AP).—United Nations officials said U. N. immunity will not apply in the case of Valentine A. Gubitchev, an employe who was arrested today and accused of receiving stolen American secrets.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie ordered the suspension of Gubitchev, a 32-year-old Russian engineer connected with construction of the new United Nations headquarters in New York. He was an employe of the U. N. secretariat, drawing $6600 a year. He had been in this country since 1946, officials said.

Officials at Lake Success said the headquarters agreement on immunity—exemption from punishment—between the United States and the United Nations applies only to U. N. employes in the performance of their official duties. Wilder Foote, director of the U. N. press department, said specifically it does not apply to acts performed outside official duty.

The officials expressed belief that since Gubitchev was off United Nations territory at the time he was arrested in New York he could not be deemed to be on official duty and thus not immune.

They said his suspension from the U. N. would remove immunity now.

U. N. files show Gubitchev is married and has a 13-year-old daughter. His wife was reported in New York, his daughter in Russia.

24 Russians Working On U. N. Staff in U. S.

Lake Success, March 5 (AP).—United Nations records show 24 Russian and three Ukranian citizens are working among the 3038 U. N. employes at Lake Success and the U. N. headquarters in New York.

Text of Truman Message on Defense Act

Following are Mr. Truman's recommendations for changes in the National Security Act:

I, therefore, recommend that the National Security Act be amended to accomplish two basic purposes:

FIRST, to convert the National Military Establishment into an executive department of the Government, to be known as the Department of Defense; and, second, to provide the Secretary of Defense with appropriate responsibility and authority, and with civilian and military assistance adequate to fulfill his enlarged responsibility.

Within the new Department of Defense, I recommend that the Departments of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force be designated as military departments. The responsibility of the Secretary of Defense for exercising direction, authority, and control over the affairs of the Department of Defense should be made clear. Furthermore, the present limitations and restrictions which are inappropriate to his status as head of an executive department should be removed. The Secretary of Defense should be the sole representative of the Department of Defense on the National Security Council.

I AM not recommending the blanket transfer of all statutory authority applicable to the Departments of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force to the Secretary of Defense. Neither am I recommending any change in the statutory assignment of combatant functions to the Army, Navy and Air Force. I recommend, however, that the Secretaries of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force administer the respective military departments under the authority, direction and control of the Secretary of Defense.

To meet these additional responsibilities, the Secretary of Defense needs strengthened civilian and military assistance. This can be provided by the creation of new posts and by the conversion of existing agencies of the National Military Establishment into staff units for the Secretary. I recommend that Congress provide an undersecretary of defense and three assistant secretaries of defense.

The duties now placed by statute in the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board should be recognized as responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense. The Act should be amended to make possible the flexible use of both of these agencies, and of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as staff units for the Secretary of Defense. Finally, I recommend that the Congress provide for a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, to take precedence over all other military personnel, and to be the principal military adviser to the President and the Secretary of Defense, and to perform such other duties as they may prescribe.

IN MY JUDGMENT, these changes will make possible effective organization and management of the Department of Defense. They will provide a responsible official at its head, with strengthened civilian and military assistance, to undertake the immense job of aiding the President and the Congress in determining defense needs and in supervising the administration of our defense activities. These measures are essential to continued and accelerated progress toward unification. I am convinced that only through making steady progress toward this goal can we be assured of serving our major objectives, the most effective organization of our armed forces, a full return on our defense dollar, and strengthened civilian control.

I urge the Congress to give prompt consideration to these recommendations. From the standpoint of present and potential cost to the Nation, there is no more important area in which to work for improved organization and operations. Action on these recommendations will prove beneficial to the Congress, the American people, and the President by providing better means of assuring defense needs and administering the defense program. We should seize this opportunity to strengthen our defense organization which is so vital to the security of this Nation and the peace of the world.

teurs might gain access to this country and its security secrets via the United Nations headquarters in New York.

In a sketchy announcement of the arrest, the department stated that there had been previous "clandestine meetings" between Miss Coplon and Gubitchev.

"Continued investigation disclosed that Miss Coplon's activities on March 4, 1949, paralleled her activities prior to other meetings with Gubitchev, and, accordingly, her activities were closely scrutinized from the moment she departed from Washington at 1 p. m. Friday en route to New York City," the department release reported.

Apparently Miss Coplon suspected she was being shadowed from the moment she left Washington. Her caution was in the best tradition of a Hitchcock movie thriller.

At 7:23 p. m. she and Gubitchev appeared at their rendezvous point, 193d st. and Broadway—but they made no effort to communicate.

For an hour and a half "both these individuals avoided direct contact while they employed the usual techniques to detect surveillance," the official report states, cryptically.

Then, at 9 p. m., they suddenly dashed aboard a bus near 42d st.

They were seized by the G-men while the bus poked along under the Third ave. elevated in a dismal tenement section between 14th and 15th sts.—some nine miles from their original meeting place.

After apparently being questioned throughout the night by FBI agents, the two defendants were led before Federal Judge Rifkind for arraignment at 11 a. m., and were placed at separate tables in front of the bench.

Miss Coplon, hatless, and wearing a black dress, a black coat with a blue collar and a single strand of pearls, appeared baffled by the whole proceedings.

She stared at the ceiling and looked at the judge once or twice. She was solemn until she left the courtroom—and then she broke into a big grin.

The judge asked her:

"Did you expect to have counsel here?"

She looked around the room and replied: "My counsel does not seem to be here."

The judge then called the case of Gubitchev. He asked the Russian:

"Are you represented by counsel?"

"Yes, sir," Gubitchev replied, "but I don't see him in court. I expect him later."

The judge recessed court until the attorneys appeared. When the session was resumed, Special Assistant United States Attorney Raymond P. Whearty requested high bail. Referring to Gubitchev, he said:

"This man has no ties in America at all, and I need not point out the gravity of these charges."

Whearty asked bail of $50,000 for Miss Coplon, but her attorney, Bertram J. Adams, won a reduction to $20,000 by declaring:

"In the prevailing hysteria in connection with such charges as these, it might be difficult for my client to have a bonding agency write her bail."

"I certainly don't find myself involved in any hysteria," the judge replied. "However, the charge is of maximum gravity because of the nature of the possible penalties. The charge is one of conspiracy with an agent of a foreign government involving defense materials."

Rifkind said the attorney's argument that Miss Coplon was of a good family and reputation "is not a logical yardstick in this instance because the normal temptation to escape or flee or not to do so does not apply in this case."

Then the judge turned to Gubitchev who still was having trouble finding an attorney. Rifkind told him he could "waive examination at this time."

"Your honor," Gubitchev said in halting English, "I don't know the law, and I don't know what these terms mean."

Rifkind set March 16 for a preliminary examination and said that meanwhile Gubitchev could find an attorney. The judge then asked Whearty if he had suggestions as to the amount of bail.

"Mr. Gubitchev even now has permission to return home in June," Whearty said. "The Government feels that he is the chief offender in this case, and I ask bail of $100,000."

"What do you have to say?" Rifkind asked the defendant.

"I have no money like that," Gubitchev replied.

The judge said Gubitchev could apply for a reduction of bail when he obtains counsel.

"I want to say that you will have the privilege of writing to the court without censorship while you are in custody," Rifkind said. "That does not mean that your mail will not be censored—by that I don't mean things eliminated from it, but that it will be examined—but if you wish to write to me you may do so."

Gubitchev, who remained impassive throughout the proceedings, came to the United States in 1946 with architects planning the U. N. headquarters.

He is known as "Alex" to fellow employes in the U. N. planning section.

the Secretary, but to boards and agencies which derive much of their authority from the military departments themselves."

What this amount to, Mr. Truman said, is that the present law "fails to provide a fully responsible official with authority adequate to meet his responsibility, whom the President and the Congress can hold accountable."

The President also recommended—as did the Hoover Commission—that there be a "chairman" of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff is composed of the Chiefs of Staff of the Army and Air Force, the chief of naval operation and the chief of staff to the Commander-in-Chief. Much of the interservice quarreling has focused in the joint chiefs' organization. The Hoover Commission spoke harshly of the concentration of power in this group, saying they "are virtually a law unto themselves."

Mr. Truman proposed that the chairman be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. He said the chairman should "take precedence over all other military personnel" and be the principal military adviser to the President and Defense Secretary.

This appeared to indicate the chairman would be a military man rather than a civilian.

Mr. Truman last month announced temporary appointment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to "preside" over the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Eisenhower is on leave from his civilian job as president of Columbia University. The phrasing of Mr. Truman's message yesterday regarding the military nature of the chairman raised again the question of whether Eisenhower might be asked to remain as permanent chairman, should Congress approve recommended changes.

Woman Dies From Burns Suffered in Fire

Mrs. Lillie Robinson, 48, of 1124 Bladensburg rd. ne., died yesterday at Casualty Hospital from burns which police said she received at her home Wednesday when her dress was ignited by an overheated stove.

The dress became inflamed while Mrs. Robinson was bending over in bathing her grandchild, according to police.

She ran out to an outdoor pump in her yard to extinguish the flames and was aided there by neighbors. The child was unharmed, police said.

Air Academy Given Approval; Bill Due Soon

chairman. The heads of the Military and Naval Academies, an Air Force general and three other college presidents make up the body.

To some, the two actions appeared conflicting—inaugurating plans to eliminate "Franklin Field rivalry" and proposing a third academy before the educational study is begun.

But Forrestal declared that the need for an adequate supply of well-trai ed officers for the Air Force is "so pressing" that it was decided to push for an Air Academy at once

He said the National Military Establishment had concluded that West Point and Annapolis together cannot take care of the officer needs of the three services and that it will be cheaper to set up another academy than to expand the present two schools.

In his directive to the board, Forrestal asked them to report on:

1. The role of the three Government academies (Military, Naval and Air) and the "relationship that should exist between them."

2. How young officers not trained at such academies should receive their basic military education.

3. What proportion of officers should come from the academies and what percentage from civilian colleges.

He also asked for recommendations on whether the preesnt methods of selecting Cadets, Midshipmen and other officer candidates should be changed.

A spokesman for Forrestal said the Defense Secretary had written President Truman on December 15, stating that the National Military Establishment had concluded a third academy is needed and that it is planned to make the educational systems at the three schools alike for the first two or three years.

Rotation Suggested

Officials said the board is expected to consider other means for instilling teamwork in young officers. One suggestion is to rotate students between the three academies. An appointee to West Point, for example, might spend the second year at Annapolis, the third at the new air acedemy, and his final year back at West Point.

Another suggestion is to rename the schools "National Defense Academies" and operate them directly under the Secretary of Defense rather than the three services.

It was reported that the plan announced yesterday was recommended to Forrestal by General Eisenhower. One of "Ike's" jobs on his present assignment here has been to look into the question of changing the educational system to eliminate "narrow service loyalties."

Forrestal yesterday emphasized the new program for basic education of officers "must include imbuing them, at the outset of their career, with the understanding that the National Military Establishment is a single integrate instrument of defense."

Would Preserve Traditions

He told the board to "give full recognition to the fine traditions and splendid contributions to military leadership" made by West Point and Annapolis, but not allow this to interfer with their freedom in proposing changes.

The recommendations not only should aim at training officer candidates in the techniques of modern war, but also should give them a background of general knowledge comparable to that of graduates of civilian colleges, he said.

Pointing out that construction of an air academy will take several years, Forrestal asked the board to propose an interim plan for bringing enough properly educated officers into the Air Force. This year, 40 per cent of West Point's graduates and 7 per cent of the Annapolis class will go into the Air Force. Both the Army and the Navy, however, contend they cannot spare such men.

One reason for pressing the plan now is that 60 per cent of the regular officers of the USAF do not have a college educaton, one official stated.

No Site Chosen

No site has been chosen for the proposed new Air Academy, although many USAF officers favor putting it in the Southwest, where dry, fair weather prevails. Randolph Field, Tex., has its backers. Eight bills authorizing an air academy now are pending on Capitol Hill, with much rivalry over the question of location.

It is expected the academy would turn out both pilots and ground personnel for the Air Force, though final plans are not yet ready.

In addition to Dr. Stearns and Ike, other members of the board are President James P. Baxter 3d of Williams College, Mass.; President George D. Stoddard of the University of Illinois, President Frederick A. Middlebush of the University of Missouri, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent; Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, Military Academy superintendent, and Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter, USAF.

Churchill to Head Masaryk Memorial

London, March 5 (AP). — The United Nations Association of Britain announced today Winston Churchill will head a Jan Masaryk memorial fund.

Masaryk, late Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, was the first president of the World Federation of United Nations Associations.

Money will be raised in many countries, the announcement said, to finance a Masaryk center for international studies at Geneva, erect a memorial to Masaryk there and strengthen the work of the world Federation of U. N. Associations.

Underwater Blast Of 'A-Bomb' Scores

By The Associated Press

A simulated underwater burst of an atomic bomb theoretically caused heavy damage and sinkings yesterday in the Navy Task Force on Caribbean maneuvers.

Admiral W. H. P. Blandy announced the "atomic" strike with a mock bomb dropped from a Navy plane. The bomb carried a TNT charge and the resulting burst closely resembled the Bikini atom-bomb test in miniature.

Blandy says in his dispatch to Washington that:

"There was no doubt that some of the ships were to be ruled out of action as a result of the heavy damage or sinkings which the nearest ones would unavoidably have sustained."

The war games in the vicinity of Puerto Rico already have seen the use of mock A-bomb attack on the fleet. However, this attack was with a bomb which exploded in the air above the fleet.

Blandy said the bomb exploded underwater yesterday was dropped from an altitude of at least 20,000 feet. It exploded underwater near the center of the large force of nearly 60 ships a few seconds after the attacking bomber swept past overhead.

The technique in this attack was different from any previously tried with either live A-bombs or simulated nuclear-fission missiles.

At Bikini, in the only actual underwater shot ever made, the bomb was suspended in a "well" opened through the bottom of a medium-sized landing ship. Actual depth of the bomb at the time it exploded was never disclosed officially, but the assumption was it was not over 30 feet.

Today's experiment was made by dropping the "bomb" from a plane, somewhat in the manner used to plant marine mines, a technique widely used by both sides during World War II.

Forum Debates New Ways To Extend 'Economic Literacy'

By Fred M. Hechinger

Special to The Washington Post

New York March 5.—New ways to extend the American people's "economic literacy" were debated in a two-day forum at the Waldorf-Astoria under the auspices of the Committee for Economic Development.

The meeting reviewed the results of more than a year and a half of experimentation in the field of a growing mutual aid plan between educators and businessmen. Representatives of education and industry from 12 college centers throughout the country compared notes on their accomplishments and discussed future programs.

"CED believes that there is a need to lay a foundation for a broader understanding of our economy and the ways in which it can be strengthened," said James F. Brownlee of Fairfield, Conn., chairman of the CED business-education committee. Brownlee is the former vice president of the General Foods Corp. and during the war was deputy director of the Office of Economic Stabilization.

Hoffman Joins Meeting

Paul G. Hoffman, ECA Administrator, joined the meeting on its second day, and members recalled Mr. Hoffman's earlier statement of policy to be pursued by CED. "I think it is very important that we as a group think of ourselves not as 'right,' 'left,' 'conservative,' or 'radical,' but as 'responsible,' Mr. Hoffman had advised. At various points of the debate it seemed evident that this policy had been adhered to.

Showpiece of the group's achievements was the New York University Workshop on methods for improving economic education in high schools. Seventy-one secondary school administrators and teachers from 22 States had worked for three weeks with economists and businessmen. Out of it has grown a national Joint Council of Economic Education composed of members from the fields of education, labor, business and Government.

Conference members agreed that teacher training, textbook writing and curriculum planning are sadly lagging behind actual economic and social developments. One of the great needs, it was felt, is to present today's students with practical and comprehensible texts and teachings of the facts of the American economic system.

Tells of Complaints

"Businessmen complain a great deal about the kind of education offered in our colleges,' said one noted educator. "This experiment will give them a chance to work with us in an attempt to bring our economics and social science courses up to date."

Following the same line of thought, Eugene Meyer, Chairman of the Board of the Washington Post, suggested that the summer vacations be used more effectively in giving qualified and interested students an opportunity of supervised work in business. In addition, the veteran member of CED recommended a two-way approach to the teaching of the American system.

"It is the task of education not only to try to sell the benefits of our own economy, but at the same time to show the facts and the defects of the opposing system," Mr. Meyer said.

"Everybody has a complaint about some aspects of our own way, but he can be made to understand what the low standards of living elsewhere would mean to him."

On the problem of providing textbooks to replace present, obsolete teaching aids, it was agreed the appointment of a roving committee of economists to investigate eventual cooperation with the best available writers offers the best solution. Attention was called to the skillful utilization of popular media, including the comic strip, by the education committee of CIO.

"Facts don't keep any better than fish," said Raymond Allen, president of the University of Washington. He called for better integration of such subjects as geography and economics in an attempt to collate facts in college libraries with the changing scene of practical economic life. The teacher training colleges, it was held, are looking for leadership in that direction.

Cooperation offered by CED would strengthen social science teaching in particular, it was pointed out by George C. S. Benson, president of Claremont Men's College in Southern California. It will permit faculty members to establish direct and vital contacts with outside views and counteract the stagnating relationship between professor and undergraduate.

Hoffman emphasized that CED had no intention of interfering with the due processes of education. "I judge that you have patterns, but no pattern," the ECA Administrator said. "This work is something the educational world should take over and simply call on the CED for help."

Asks Universities to Take Lead

Asking the universities rather than CED to take the lead, Mr. Hoffman concluded:

"We are not going to wind up with the kind of economy we want unless we know more about how an economy should operate . . . than we know today."

W. Walter Williams of Seattle, president of Continental, Inc., is the national chairman of the CED.

Members of the committee besides Mr. Brownlee are: Donald David, dean, Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, Boston, Mass.; John S. Dickey, president, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.; Clarence Francis, chairman of the board, General Foods Corp., New York, N. Y.; Roy E. Larsen, president, Time, Inc., New York, N. Y.; Philip D. Reed, CED vice chairman and chairman of the board, General Electric Co., New York, N. Y.; Robert Gordon Sproul, president, University of California, Berkeley, Calif.; Alan Valentine, president, University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. Williams; H. Carl Wolf, managing director, American Gas Association, New York, N. Y.; George F. Zook, president, American Council on Education, Washington, D. C. Robert S. Donaldson, CED field director, is conducting the program of this committee.

'World Citizen' Davis Scoffs at Atlantic Pact

Paris, March 5 (U.P.).—"World Citizen" Garry Davis said today world government and peace can be brought about only by the efforts of the "ordinary guy in the street" and not by national governments "trapped in power politics."

"The Atlantic Pact, for instance, merely indicates our leaders are thinking in the same terms which led to the first two World Wars," the red-haired former Army bombardier said.

Although Davis' international registry of world citizens will not officially open until late this month, he said more than 100,000 "ordinary guys" have written him, asking to become world citizens and pledging to vote for a world peoples assembly in 1950.

Flying Hazard

'Antiaircraft' Fire Turned On Buzzards

Comes now a lament for the buzzard.

It comes, of course, only from the buzzard himself, who these days is being extensively pot-shot at down at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station.

The buzzard, along with the crow and the starling, are technically a menace to flying, whatever else they may or may not be.

The Navy takes such a dim view of them that it gives guns and shells to those who want to do a little crow, buzzard and starling hunting. This is all old hat to the crow and the starling, who have been shot at for years by everybody from farmers to the BB gun boys.

For the buzzard, known for his majestic soars and sweeps, it is, apparently, a dismaying experience to compete with supersonic aircraft and such. One buzzard found that out last year when he smacked into an airplane in May, broke the vertical stablizer, and caused the pilot to bail out. The airplane was a wreck. So was the buzzard.

Anyhow, it's open season on all such these days, with areas set aside for the shooters. Only controlling factors are safety restrictions as to firing angle and shot size.

Philippines Crisis Over

Manila, March 5 (AP).—The Philippine Republic is emerging from its gravest political crisis since it attained independence from the United States two years and seven months ago.

President Elpidio Quirino has broken the grip of Liberal Party boss Jose Avelino on the Philippine Senate.

With his recent ouster as Senate president, Avelino lost his power to pass on all presidential appointments. The supreme court refused to hear Avelino's case and advised him to return to the Senate, where he is outvoted.

Avelino was campaign manager for the late president Manuel Roxas. After Roxas election in 1946, Avelino became Senate president and the President's right-hand man. Roxas died April 15, 1948, and Vice President Quirino took over.

A presidential committee that has investigated war surplus sales was preparing to report to the Senate February 21 when Avelino took the floor and hotly defended himself before any charges were made. That forced a vote of confidence, which resulted in Avelino's ouster.

Mission Aides In Turkey Protest Allowance Cuts

Istanbul, Turkey, March 5 (U.P.). Members of the American military mission in Turkey said today they had protested to Washington that success of their efforts was jeopardized by a State Department order slashing their living allowance.

Until March 1, all civilian and Army members of the 459-man mission received $13.50 a day to compensate for the high cost of living in Turkey. The State Department reduced this by approximately 30 per cent for men with families and by almost 70 per cent for single men.

In some cases, the cut amounted to $3000 a year per officer.

Drought Puts Spain on Spot

Madrid, Spain, March 5. (U.P.)—The longest drought in more than a century plus a shortage of dollars may force the Franco government to mend some of its totalitarian ways.

Spain seems to be heading toward an ecoonmic crisis. The situation may become so desperate that Generalissimo Francisco Franco will agree to ease his government's grip on Spain if the U. S. Export-Import Bank will grant him a dollar loan.

Water is so short it is being sold at five cents a gallon. Wine-producing communities are offering an even swap of wine for water. Madrid's water supply is shut off several hours a day.

China Peace Mission Studied

Nanking, March 5 (AP).—Acting President Li Tsung-jen and Premier Sun Fo conferred today on makeup of a Chinese government mission to talk peace officially with the Communists.

Sun has said the Reds would be ready to negotiate some time after March 15. Shao Li-tze, former Ambassador to Moscow, is mentioned as most likely chairman of the government delegation.

(The Communist radio, however, again dashed cold water on peace efforts by accusing the nationalists of plotting further war and declaring the No. 1 Red condition for settling the civil war still was "punishment of war criminals, including Sun Fo."

(The Communist series of broadcasts, heard in San Francisco by the Associated Press, charged that Sun, "retired" Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and others were preparing to recruit 2,500,000 more soldiers for new warfare "behind the facade of peace."

(Still another said Chiang was daily issuing orders and directing his "gang" for renewal of the war. This last allegation found some substantiation from Nanking.)

Since the generalissimo "retired" January 21, open criticism of him has been kept at a minimum by his secret police. Some recent arrests, such as that of Chen Yi, former Governor of Formosa, are said to have been madde on direct orders from Chiang.

Tax Increase Drive Suffers a Setback

Home Relief

Cost Dooms Plan to Pay 'All Needy'

By The Associated Press

Two top-ranking tax experts in the Senate said yesterday President Truman's demands for a four billion dollar increase in taxes suffered a major setback last week.

They contended that a little-noticed decision by the Senate Foreign Relations committee actually involved a test of sentiment on the presidential plan for new taxes.

That influential committee tossed out an Administration request to erase earmarking of a three billion dollar fund for foreign aid by the last Republican-controlled Congress.

Called Phony Bookkeeping

The intended effect of the earmarking was to lift the three billion dollars out of the huge 1947-48 Treasury surplus and use it this year. The Administration called it a phony bookkeeping device to hide a deficit condition created by the Republican tax reduction. President Truman ignored the fund switch in figuring his budget.

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee told a reporter the defeated move was "intended to show a big deficit for the next fiscal year as a basis for more taxes."

And Senator Millikin (R., Colo.), former chairman of the tax-writing group, said the action "destroys the entire basis for a request for tax increases so far as we can estimate on this date."

In separate interviews, George and Milli in said they regard the action as a fair test of how the Senate feels about tax increases now.

Deficit Becomes Surplus on Paper

At stake was a somewhat complicated bookkeeping operation involving the Treasury's funds, the income tax reductions last year, and the multi-billio dollar Marshall Plan for aiding European nations.

As part of the original ECA authorization, Millikin succeeded in effect, in having $3,000,000,000 of revenues from the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1948, set aside on the books for use in the current fiscal year ending June 30 next.

This technically turned a prospective 600-million-dollar deficit for this year into a paper $2,400,000,000 surplus. Mr. Truman referred to it as a "wholly artificial bookkeeping shift."

President Truman's fiscal and tax advisers tried to wipe out that switch of funds as part of the second ECA authorization for $5,538,000,000 now pending before the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator George and former Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) opposed the move and it was snowed under. Those present said only Senator Green (D., R. I.) voted for the move.

Congressional fears of possible new billions in cost apparently had doomed yesterday President Truman's proposal for expansion of Federal public assistance—or home relief—to include needy persons able to work.

But it appeared that persons disabled and unable to work might be added to the aid list.

There were signs that Congress may bring more than 10 million additional persons under the old-age insurance program. Mr. Truman has asked that 20 million be added, bringing the total to 50 million.

Meanwhile the social security committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce issued a report calling the basic idea of social security good—but warned against over-expansion and "untried schemes."

The report urged greater stress on voluntary security programs, and said:

"The desirability of social security benefits should not be considered in abstract. Costs, the burden on the taxpayer, together with the strain on governmental budgets, must also be taken into account.

After a week of House Ways and Means Committee study of Mr. Truman's proposal for a vast expansion in the social security program, the picture shaped up about like this:

1. Congress may expand home relief to cover persons disabled and unable to work, but not to include "all needy" as the President requested. The direct assistance program, now costing the Government $1,100,000,000 a year in a funds-matching arrangement with the States, is limited to aid for needy aged, the blind and for dependent children.

2. Old age insurance benefits may be boosted and some additional millions may be blanketed under this program, possibly including some self-employed, also employes of State and local governments, and maybe some other small groups. But two big groups—farm workers and household workers—may remain outside the program.

3. Congress may increase the social security payroll taxes to cover any increase in benefits. Mr. Truman has asked that the 1 per cent tax on employes' pay and employers' payroll be boosted July 1 to 1½ per cent against each, and on January 1 to 2 per cent.

The public assistance (home relief) program and the old-age and survivors insurance program are two separate social security operations.

Big Conservation Plan Urged

A proposal for a gigantic conservation program, requiring loans of 16 billion dollars to individuals in the next 10 years, was made public last night by the Public Affairs Institute.

Coming in the middle of the flood of reports for reorganization of the Government by the Herbert Hoover Commission, the PAI statement calls for:

1. Organization of a new Federal lending agency, the National Resources Corporation, to carry on the proposed vast conservation job with loans made to individuals on a self-liquidating basis.

2. The corporation would finance soil conservation and new cropland work on 405 million acres of land, for which loans "totaling over 11 billion dollars are needed." It would also finance more than five billion in loans for forest and range conservation work covering 330 million more acres.

The institute boastfully remarks that "this combined conservation program would be much larger than the recently announced plan of the USSR, which, the Russians claimed, was far too big for any capitalistic democracy to attempt.

"When completed," it added, "it would assure this Nation an adequate supply of soil and forest raw material for all time to come."

The vast new corporation would be authorized to lend up to 13 billion dollars at one time.

The study was prepared for the institute by Stephen Raushenbush, formerly senior resources economist for the Interior Department.

Senate Faces Night Sessions

quire the votes of 49 Senators, a majority of the 96 members of the body.

Fulbright Talks Four Hours

Lucas made his announcement shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday, at the end of an unusual Saturday session during which Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) had spent four hours on his feet talking in opposition to the cloture resolution.

The majority leader asked Fulbright if "in view of the legislative program before Congress" Fulbright would accept "my assurance of support for cloture by a two-thirds majority."

"This seems to have reached the point," he said, "where we have got to hold longer sessions and meet after 6 o'clock. That may keep my friends on the other side of the aisle (Republicans) from saying this is a phoney filibuster."

So far the Southern filibuster has been against the motion to call up Lucas' resolution. Under a ruling last year by then Senate President Vandenberg (R., Mich.), debate on a motion cannot be restricted except by a two-thirds vote.

This week Lucas is expected to file a cloture petition under existing rules to end the present protracted debate. It would then be up to Vice President Alben W. Barkley to rule on admission of the petition and the Senate then would be called upon to back him up by a majority vote.

In order to win that contest, Administration Democrats would need support from Republicans, many of whom have indicated they would vote with the Southerners.

Senator Kenneth C. Wherry (R., Neb.), minority floor leader, issued a statement yesterday that he would vote against a ruling by Barkley which would upset Vandenberg's earlier ruling. He then pledged "to fight it out with any filibuster that develops if it takes all summer to win the battle."

Reads from History

Fulbright's four-hour talking marathon yesterday was buttressed by reading from historical works on the American system of Government and by interpolated questions from other Southern Senators. At one point he got into an argument with Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), who contended he advocated free speech, but "denies the right of the President to comment freely."

Fulbright counterattacked with the charge that Mr. Truman's fight was not to change the Senate rules, but to assist passage of his civil rights legislation.

"Why don't they," he demanded, "put it on the outright basis of civil rights legislation?"

The President has sought a change in Senate rules to combat a certain Southern filibuster when his antipoll tax, antilynching and fair employment legislation is introduced. The question of rules changes rather than that of civil rights provides Republican Senators with safe ground on which to oppose Administration moves.

Minimum Pay Bill Delayed by Rowing

Strike Goes On

Seminarians Dig Graves Third Day

New York, March 5 (AP).—Roman Catholic priests and seminarians marched through picket lines again today to bury the dead at strike-bound Calvary Cemetry.

Weary but determined, some 100 clerics and students turned out for the third successive day preparing graves for about 1000 bodies now awaiting burial in the 600-acre cemetery.

Francis Cardinal Spellman continued directing them. He reiterated that nothing save settlement of the seven-week-old strike would stop their work.

The cardinal said there had been no new negotiations with local 293 of the CIO United Cemetery Workers Union.

Attlee Calls Airlift One of World Wonders

Berlin, March 5 (AP).—British Prime Minister Clement Attlee tonight called the Berlin airlift "one of the wonders of the world."

After a whirlwind tour of the British and American airports, Attlee told reporters "there will never be anything like this."

Attlee declined to comment on Russia's change of foreign ministers.

Tempers flared yesterday as the House Labor Committee failed for the third day in a row to report out a new minimum wage and hour bill.

Action on the legislation is not expected now until Wednesday.

The Administration is seeking to raise the minimum wages of interstate industry and commerce, now 45 cents an hour, to 75 cents. The 25-man committee yesterday was offered two substitute provisions: one raising the minimum to 60 cents an hour, the other to 65 cents, with further increases hinging on the upswing of the cost of living.

Already Voted Down

The committee has already voted down the Administration's proposal to bring agricultural workers under the minimum wage law, but did sustain the Administration on covering workers in the processing industries.

In another vote, it was learned the committee removed from the bill the Administration sponsored industry committees. These committees would be permitted to raise the minimum wage from 75 cents an hour up to $1 an hour.

Extension Rejected

The committee has also cut down on extension of the act from activities "affecting interstate commerce" to activities "engaged in interstate commerce." The law has been extended, by committee vote, to include employes working in retail stores which are engaged in interstate business and which do a gross business over $500,000 anuually.

The committee still have to act on provisions tightening the present bans on child labor and prohibiting "overtime on overtime" back pay suits.

Labor Bill Battle Shapes Up

nal, which usually speaks out its editorial mind in the blunt manner of John L. Lewis, comments on the situation in its current issue thusly:

"There is a strong possibility that the Administration bill will be ditched in favor of a new bill acceptable to most Republicans and enough Democrats to make a majority."

The Republican minority screamed bloody murder against the "steamroller tactics" of the Administration majority in voting the Thomas bill out of the Senate Labor Committee on Friday without amendments — an action requested by President Truman.

But in the Senate cloakroom, the Republicans were literally laughing down their sleeves. They feel they've taken the ball away from the Administration and, so long as they hold their own lines together, write their own labor bill.

Taft Favors Combination

To this end, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act, and Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), an outspoken opponent of the Taft-Hartley Act, are trying to reconcile their varying viewpoints.

Taft would like to retain many of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, particularly in court injunction to back up an 80-day cooling-off period in management-labor disputes affecting the national health and safety. He would amend the Taft-Hartley Act by some 20 amendments, easing up on some union restrictions and tightening others.

Morse—like the Administration—would repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and replace it with his own legislation. He has not yet made public his bill, but he has let it be known that he is opposed to the use of the court injunction to deal with emergency strikes and with secondary boycotts, such as in the Taft-Hartley Act.

Up to a point, Morse would go along with the Administration, which also banishes the injunction in emergency strikes. The Thomas bill calls for a 30-day voluntary cooling-off period by labor and management while a fact-finding board appointed by the White House came up with a report. Public opinion would enforce the cooling-off period, according to Administration thinking, which also claims that the President has the inherent right to seek an injunction, without writing it into the law.

Would Use Congress

Morse would also have a voluntary cooling off period, but of 60 days. If during the 60 days of the "emergency" a strike should break out—or if after the fact-finding board reports and recommends a solution, there should still be a strike—the President would be under compulsion to lay the matter before Congress, even to calling Congress into special session.

Thus, declares Morse, at one and the same time his legislation would do awa. with the injuction and at the same time provide a deterrent to both labor and management by rushing Congress into the breach.

According to Morse, Senator Irving Ives (R., N. Y.), who is not a member of the Labor Committee but who is believed to carry considerable weight among the so-called "Young Turk" Republicans, agrees to this method of dealing with strikes affecting the national health and safety.

Ives and he also see eye to eye on some 20 other provisions, Morse said, including a non-injunctive method of dealing with the ban on secondary boycotts. Just what this procedure is, Morse refuses to reveal for the time being.

Senator Morse insists his legislation not only has been getting considerable support from Republicans, but from Democrats as well. He says "at least 12 Democrats—and not Southern Democrats—have already approached him and generally assented to his views on a new labor law.

Taft, Morse Viewpoints

Senator Taft has said he sees interesting possibilities in Morse's way of dealing with emergency strikes, but he feels that even if Congress were recalled to deal with an urgent strike situation, action could be stymied by filibustering tactics. Therefore, says Taft, it might be a good idea to combine the court injunction with the recall of Congress in the new labor bill.

Taft, like Morse, is confident the Republicans can write the labor bill, and will gain the support of at least the Southern Democrats. He points out that there are 54 members of the Senate who voted to override the veto of the Taft-Hartley bill in 1947.

Both Taft and Morse feel that the Republicans—now holding a series of sessions on the issue—will be able to meet on common ground for a large number of the provisions, and then decide the remaining issues in a free-for-all on the Senate floor."

Meanwhile, the next step for the labor bill, now out of Senate committee, is obscure. The filibuster against the filibuster, as well as rent control, ECA and trade treaties, seem slated for precedence on the Administration's action calendar.

House to Start Hearings

On the House side, a House labor subcommittee will open 10 full days of hearings Monday morning on the Lesinski bill, companion measure to the Senate's Thomas bill. The subcommittee is safely pro-Administration, but the full committee, with four Southern Democrats and nine Republicans, could conceivably come up with a 13-12 anti-Administration bill.

From any point of view the labor legislation has a long and bitter battle ahead of it before reaching the White House. Even the President's signature may not be forthcoming if the measure proves to be more restrictive to labor than the Taft-Hartley law.

At the moment, the Thomas-Lesinski bill is being given about as much chance to get through Congress as Mr. Truman had of winning the 1948 election campaign. It may take a political miracle to put the Administration's bill over.

Negro Attorney Backed for Post As Commissioner

Charles H. Houston, local Negro attorney recently elected vice president of the National Lawyers Guild, was indorsed yesterday by the District branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for appointment as a District Commissioner.

The term of Commissioner John Russell Young will run out May 17. Thomas P. Morgan, jr., local businessman, has been indorsed for the position by several local organizations.

Houston, a native of Washington, is a member of the law firm of Houston, Hastie and Waddy. He was a member of the District Board of Education from 1933 to 1935 and also served as vice dean of the Howard University Law School.

Dutch Admit Hague Talks May Be Dropped

Batavia, Java, March 5 (U.P.)—Dutch sources admitted today their scheduled March 12 Hague conference on Indonesia might be postponed or abandoned altogether after leaders of the Dutch-sponsored Indonesian Federal states headed for home, announcing their inability to decide on future policy.

Retired Captain Of First D. C. Fire Boat 75 Today

The retried captain of the Firefighter, first District fire boat, will celebrate his seventy-fifth birthday today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William L. Robinson, 5016 Yorktown rd., Greenacres, Md.

Raleigh

He is Capt. James B. Raleigh of 630 G st. sw., who was with the fireboat when it went in service back in 1905 and later piloted it through more than one spectacular blaze before its replacement, about two years ago, with a more modern vessel.

Raleigh recalls the 1905 Johnson-Wimsatt fire at 12th and Water sts. as one of the toughest jobs of the craft. He said the blaze was fought for almost three days.

Captain Raleigh retired in 1939. Since that time he has fished, oystered and farmed at a farm near Ridge in St. Marys County, Md. His birthday celebration today will be a family party and reception.

McGrath Backs D. C. Sales Tax

District sales tax legislation, again served notice that he would use all possible means, even to the point of a filibuster, to defeat the bill on the Senate floor.

"I am sure there will be a lot of opposition to the tax once it reaches the floor," said Johnston who single-handedly killed the measure in the closing hours of the last Congress.

'Position Unchanged'

"I haven't changed my position one iota. My alternative revenue plan is just the same—an increase of the Federal payment to the city to $25 millions annually," Johnson declared.

"Until the Federal Government pays its pro rata share to take care of its child, people should stop talking about the sales levy."

Senator Matthew W. Neely (D., W. Va.), another District Committee member, also has announced strong opposition to the sales plan.

Although reasserting his support of an increased Federal payment, McGrath described Johnston's suggested 25-million-dollar payment figure also as an unforeseeable alternative which could be attained.

He said the other revenue-raising approach—broadening the city income tax base to catch the many residents who now pay taxes elsewhere—also stood slim chances of congressional action. Such a move to revise the income tax locally has twice met defeat in the House.

Likely Features of Tax

District observers at the Capital speculated yesterday that the revised sales tax measure would contain these features:

1. No tokens would be used.
2. The levy would be based on the principle of a stated tax on each sale rather than a percentage levy on gross sales of business. There would be no tax on purchases up to 14 cents. A 1-cent tax would be imposed on items between 14 and 50 cents, and above 50 cents, a 1-cent increase on each additional 50 cents of the purchase price.
3. The tax might be levied on transient hotel rooms, but permanent apartment hotel occupants would be exempt.
4. Newspaper, radio and television advertising space, as well as national magazines sold within the city might be on the exemption list.
5. Merchants would make the tax collections and file receipts with the District government on a monthly basis. The Commissioners would be given authority to work out many other details of collection.
6. Coal, fuel oil, gas and electricity all would be subject to the sales levy, even though the latter two services now are subjected to a 4 per cent gross receipts tax.

No More Public Hearings

Senator Hunt said he did not expect the Senate-House fiscal committees to hold any further public hearings on the city sales tax bill, estimated to yield 10 million dollars this year if put into operation July 1.

The sales plan is only part of the pending revenue measure aimed to raise the 19 million dollars in additional funds for the year starting July 1. It includes doubling liquor taxes and license fees (already approved by the joint fiscal groups), boosting the Federal payment from 12 to 16 millions annually and revising the city income tax to apply to all persons, except members of Congress, who reside here seven months or more of the year and exempt the first $5000 of net income.

Meanwhile, Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on the District money bill, said he hoped to start hearings within two weeks on the House-passed 98.9-million-dollar city budget. The lower house took a 4.3-million-dollar slice out of the Commissioners' "austerity" budget but still left a 2.5-million-dollar deficit and made no provisions for a District workers' pay raise.

Forrestal Denies Report He'll Head Princeton

Retiring Defense Secretary James Forrestal yesterday denied a report that he will become president of Princeton University of which he is a trustee.

The report was published by the Daily Princetonian, undergraduate newspaper, as a rumor. Forrestal said it was "utterly without foundation" and that he hopes Princeton President Harold W. Dodds will continue in the position.

Soldier Is Killed In Highway Crash

A Fort Meade soldier was killed and four marines from Quantico injured in traffic accidents yesterday in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Fatally injured when his car ran off Baltimore blvd. at Muirkirk and sheared off a telephone pole was Master Sergt. Edgar H. Bowles, 39, stationed at Fort Meade.

Bowles, whose home was in Greenfield, Ohio, died in the Branchville rescue squad ambulance as he was being rushed to Leland Memorial Hospital at Riverdale. The accident happened at about 12:30 a. m.

While Maryland State police were investigating the accident, a parked police car was struck and was virtually demolished when it burst into flames and the gasoline tank exploded.

Two cars, both driven by Fort Meade soldiers, were involved in the second accident, according to police. The soldiers, Corpl. Thomas Way, jr., and Corpl. Theodore A. Williams, were unhurt, but were charged with reckless driving.

State police released them in the custody of military authorities pending a hearing.

The four marines were injured in a two-car crash at about 2:10 p. m. on U. S. 1 at Triangle, Va.

Pfc. David Lee LaPrarie, 20, and Corpl. Marty Campbell, 20, were reported in critical condition and Pfc. Gordon V. Pierce, 21, and Pfc. William V. Southard, 19, were said to be in serious condition. All the Marines were taken to the base hospital at Quantico.

Virginia State Police said the car in which the Marines were riding was traveling north at between 70 and 80 miles an hour with Pierce at the wheel.

When the Marines' car approached a traffic light at the intersection of U. S. 1 and Fuller rd. in Triangle, police said, it went through the light and struck a second car that was turning into the road to Quantico.

The second car was driven by a Quantico Marine, Pfc. Doyle A. Fox, 28. Doyle and two passengers riding with him escaped injury.

The car carrying the four Marines rolled over and over for a distance of about 300 feet and finally struck the corner of a house.

Eight persons suffered minor injuries yesterday afternoon when an automobile plowed into a crowd of about 150 people attending an auction sale on the lawn of a home near Colesville, Md.

Montgomery County police said the car was driven by Mrs. Elsie V. Burris, Route 1, Silver Spring. Mrs. Burris told the officers she lost control of the car when the brakes failed as she entered the driveway of the house just off Route 29 a half mile north of Colesville.

The injured were treated at the scene by members of the Sandy Spring Volunteer Rescue Squad. Several were taken to Montgomery County General Hospital but none were admitted.

Besides injuring the eight persons Mrs. Burris' automobile struck a stand and destroyed a quantity of dishes and glassware on exhibit for the sale, police said.

A 64-year-old man was injured Friday night when the car in which he rode drove in the wrong lane near the Pentagon Building and struck a truck.

It was the second such accident within a week in the same area. Last Monday, another motorist was seriously injured when he drove the wrong way down a nearby traffic lane and hit a Greyhound bus.

The latest "wrong-way" accident victim was Harry Brockhurst, of 1734½ 12th st. se., passenger in a car driven by George B. McDonald, 28, of 4308 Quarles st. ne.

Park police said McDonald apparently turned right off Shirley hwy. and headed south down the northbound lane of United States Route 1 when he struck a truck driven by John C. Hayes, 29, of 58 K st. se. Hayes was uninjured.

Trees for Mount Vernon

Northants, England, March 5 (U.P.).—The curator of Sulgrave Manor, ancestral home of George Washington, said today that two young apple trees from the manor orchard were being flown to Washington for transplanting at Mount Vernon.

British agricultural experts grew the two trees from grafts of a 300-year-old tree.

Ending an Absence of 39 Years...

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

REUNION—Rabbi Elia Szhuster (right), reunited with his sister, Mrs. Isadore Platt, for the first time in 39 years, points out on a map to her and her husband his journey from Poland. Szhuster, who was beaten and tortured in German concentration camps will begin life anew with the Platts in their home, 3922 3d st. nw.

performed, building by building, floor by floor and unit by unit.

With this information at hand, District personnel workers will be able to sit down with department heads and discuss a management control program which would improve efficiency of operations. The entire plan is in effect in many large industries and was instituted by the Army Air Force during World War II.

Completion of the surveys will enable the personnel officials to "know exactly what each employe is doing" and will "help us intelligently evaluate requests for allotment of additional employes in any department," Fowler pointed out.

Working on the program, besides Fowler, are Victor A. Howard, secretary of the personnel board; Ernest R. Cole and H. A. McAllister of the budget office.

One goal of the plan is to eliminate unauthorized expansions of services through shifting of budget funds, such as was revealed at Gallinger Hospital in testimony on the District budget.

Commissioner Guy Mason said some officials have attempted to "set themselves up a little kingdom, then they come up with deficiencies." At Gallinger, unused nursing services' funds were allotted for medical supply costs.

"This is robbing Peter to pay for something and how are they going to pay Peter back?" Commissioner Mason noted.

At present, the improving labor market has reduced the usual nurse vacancy list at Gallinger from an average of 65 to 100 to about 30 and laborer's jobs which went unfilled are now being filled, Fowler declared. This means that a more realistic appraisal of the entire personnel scheme at the hospital is necessary, he explained.

A preliminary study of the 1200 to 1300 positions in the Engineer's Department has been completed and numerous departmental reorganizations took place as a result, Fowler disclosed. His aides have also been working on the Public Welfare Department rolls, starting with the District Training School and are now at the Home for the Aged and Infirm.

Bomber Crash Kills 5

La Linea, Spain, March 5 (U.P.).—Five persons were killed and two were injured here today in the crash of a British Army Halifax bomber.

Polish Rabbi, Infant Among 5 DP's Starting Life Anew Here

A scholarly rabbi carrying a Bible in his hand and a baby girl clutching a toy duck in her chubby fists were part of a group of five displaced persons that began new lives yesterday at the homes of their Washington sponsors.

For Elia Szhuster, 49-year-old Pole and assistant rabbi, his arrival here Thursday had a special significance. It marked a joyous reunion with his sister, Mrs. Isadore Platt, their first reunion in 39 years.

Szhuster, beaten and tortured in German concentration camps had long been thought dead by his sister. Late in 1945, however, soldiers found him lying semi-conscious in a field and gave him shelter and medical treatment.

Shortly afterwards he established contact with his sister and they began a long series of letters of hope and encouragement that finally resulted in his arrival in this country.

Szhuster will live with his sister and her husband at 3922 3d st. nw. He will serve as assistant rabbi in the Southeastern Hebrew Congregation Church, 417 9th st. se.

Eight-month-old Lea Gruenberger and her two-year-old brother, Geza, will never have to experience the horrors their parents endured in German concentration camps.

The Gruenberger family, Armin, 49, his wife, Iren, 37, arrived with their two children Thursday at the home of their sponsor, Theodore Phillips, 5611 14th st. nw.

Armin and his wife were born in Hungary. He ran a modest tailor shop there until the war broke up his home. Until 1945 their lives were spent in one camp after another.

With the help of the International Refugee Organization they were able to come to this country where Armin hopes to re-establish his business and educate his children.

Library to Get Hersholt Gift

informed by The Washington Post yesterday, and was "most agreeably surprised."

Dr. Evans welcomed "this public spirited action as a signal contribution to—and expression of confidence in—the children of America."

Andersen's works have been translated into many languages. The library has editions in a dozen European languages and Japanese.

David C. Mearns, recently advanced to assistant librarian, said "Andersen's fairy tales are a part of every American's childhood, and this gift will immeasurably strengthen the library's holdings in children's literature."

According to Frederick R. Goff, chief of the rare book division, while the library has a considerable collection of children's literature numbering some 16,000 rare pieces there is little Andersen material and the Hersholt collection "will be a bright star."

Mearns and Goff both pointed out that while Andersen was a Dane a number of his fairy tales were first published in the United States during the post-Civil War period, even before being printed in Denmark.

Hersholt, who was born in Copenhagen in 1886 and came to the United States in 1913, spoke at the Library of Congress in 1943 on Andersen.

Writer's Life Described

Hersholt described Andersen's life from his birth in 1805 to poor parents in Odense, a town "steeped in the traditions of the Middle Ages," to his death in 1875, when he was "an intimate friend of European royalty, acclaimed by his native city, beloved by the world."

Among the highlights of Hersholt's collection, probably the finest Andersen collection in the world, are:

Two of three known copies of Andersen's first book, Ungdomsforsog," published in Copenhagen in 1822, and one of which is the only known autographed presentation copy in existence.

One of the four or five known copies of the first issue of first edition of the Fairy Tales published in six small pamphlets, 1835-42.

Some 30 presentation copies of various Andersen books — fairy tales, plays and poems.

Fourteen original manuscripts of fairy tales in the author's own handwriting; all of his letters to his American publisher, Horace Scudder; some 200 other letters; many Andersen poems in manuscript; 20 or more photographs of Andersen, many of them signed, and a few of the famous silhouette clippings made by him.

Frances Perkins Listed To Address Society

Boy Found Under Porch

to the Third Precinct Station to report him missing.

She said he had not been punished and she could think of no reason why he should leave home. She said he had run away from home several times before. This was the first time, however, that he stayed overnight.

According to "Teddy," he just got the urge to take a little jaunt and then became lost. Both nights, however, he said he slept under the same porch which is only a block or so from his home. His mother passed within a few feet of him while searching for him, she said. He admitted that after the first night, he "might" have been afraid to go home. He had nothing to eat during the two days he said.

Catherine found him while she was sweeping the porch and steps. She called her mother, Mrs. Marion Brooke, who phoned police.

At Children's Hospital, where he was admitted, he was given a thorough scrubbing to get the leaves and dirt out of his hair and treated for frostbites and exposure. His condition, doctors said, is good.

Boat Blast Kills Woman, Injures Industrialist

Fort Myers, Fla., March 5 (AP).—A fishing boat explosion today killed one person and injured Edmund F. Ball, Muncie, (Ind.) industrialist.

Mrs. Ray Applegate, 49, also of Muncie, was killed when the 45-foot boat exploded as the Indiana party was leaving Fort Myers beach for a day's fishing in the Gulf of Mexico.

Her husband, Mrs. Ball and Elmo Santini, fishing guide and owner of the vessel, also were injured.

Mrs. Ball was in "very serious condition." The others were not as badly hurt.

Ball is the son of the late Edmund D. Ball, one of the four original Ball brothers who were industrialists and railroad financiers. He became president of the Ball Brothers Co. in 1947.

Peter Edson Gets Raymond Clapper Award

Peter Edson, columnist for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, received the fifth annual Raymond Clapper Memorial Award last night at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association.

Edson

The presentation was made by President Truman, who attended the Hotel Statler dinner as guest of honor.

The citation said Edson won the recognition for the "general excellence" of his column on the Washington scene. In addition to a plaque, Edson receives $500.

Edson, 53, was chosen for the annual award by a committee of four newspapermen. They included Laurence Winship, managing editor of the Boston Globe; Barry Bingham, president of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Thomas L. Stokes, United Features columnist, and Dean Hoffman, editor of the Harrisburg, Pa., News-Patriot. Wright Bryan, editor of the Atlanta Journal, was prevented by illness from serving on the committee.

The award has been given annually since 1945 in memory of Raymond Clapper, Washington columnist who was killed in a Pacific plane crash during the war.

Edson joined NEA in 1928 and became editor in chief in 1932. He left the editor's post in 1941 to devote his full time to writing a Washington column.

He is a native of Hartford, Ind., and attended Wabash College and Harvard University. During World War I he served as a first lieutenant. His first newspaper job was on the Fort Wayne, Ind., News-Sentinel. Subsequently he was a sugar chemist in Mexico and worked on various papers in the Midwest and in Boston.

Robert G. Nixon of International News Service was installed as president of the correspondents' association, succeeding Ernest B. Vaccaro of the Associated Press.

Other new officers installed included: Tom Twitty of the New York Herald Tribune, vice president; Paul Wooton of the New Orleans Times-Picayune and Chilton Publications, secretary-treasurer, and Carleton V. Kent of the Chicago Sun-Times, Jack Doherty of the New York News and Joseph H. Short of the Baltimore Sun, as members of the executive committee.

Arthur Godfrey, radio and television artist, was master of ceremonies for the entertainment program.

Among the entertainers were Danny Kaye, Polyna Stoska, Metropolitan Opera singer; the Zucker Sisters, classical pianists; Artini and Conuelo, dance team; Stan Kavanagh, juggler; Wally Brown, comedian, and Julia Lee, blues singer, assisted by drummer Baby Lovett.

House District Committee Has Full Agenda

The House District Committee faces a heavy agenda Monday with expected action on a $330 pay raise bill for District teachers, policemen and firemen, rent control extension locally and daylight saving time.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), will call his full committee into executive session at 10 a.m., and plans to drive first for his unit's approved of a bill to extend District rent control until June 30, 1950.

As amended Friday by the District Judiciary Subcommittee, the measure would put back under control of the District Rent Control Administrator reconverted properties whose conversion costs were less than $1500. It also recommended a new provision to place some control over sale of cooperative apartments to decrease the number of evictions in such cases.

District teachers have a particularly keen interest in the expected committee action on the unclassified city workers' pay raise bill because it carries for them the same $330 salary boost proposed for District policemen, White House and Park policemen and firemen.

Previously three District subcommittees had agreed to grant city teachers only a $200 raise.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), a District Committee member, who has sparked the local pay raise drive on the House side, is author of the new bill granting teachers the comparable salary hike.

Representative George Bates (R., Mass.), senior minority member, last night predicted full committee approval of the Davis pay bill.

The District Committee will also take up the Senate-passed measure to put daylight savings for the District on a permanent basis. It has been amended by its Judiciary Subcommittee to permit fast time here only for this year. The bill is expected to pass in that form Monday.

Other local bills slated for House committee action include :

1. The so-called teacher equity measure to correct classification inequities. It covers 109 District teachers.

2. A bill to permit Commissioners to pay contractors up to 10 per cent of the total cost of construction projects prior to job completion.

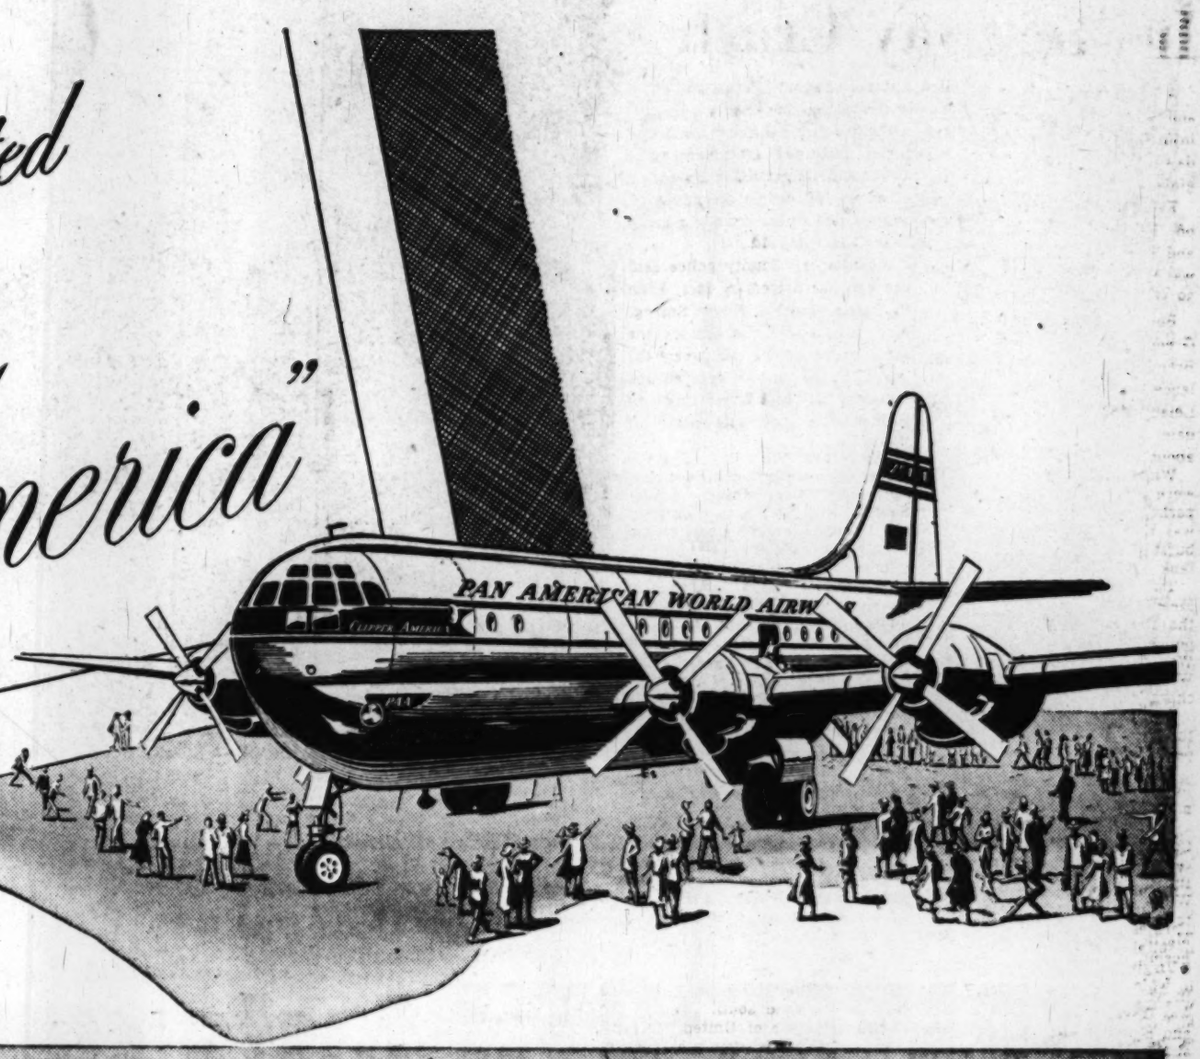
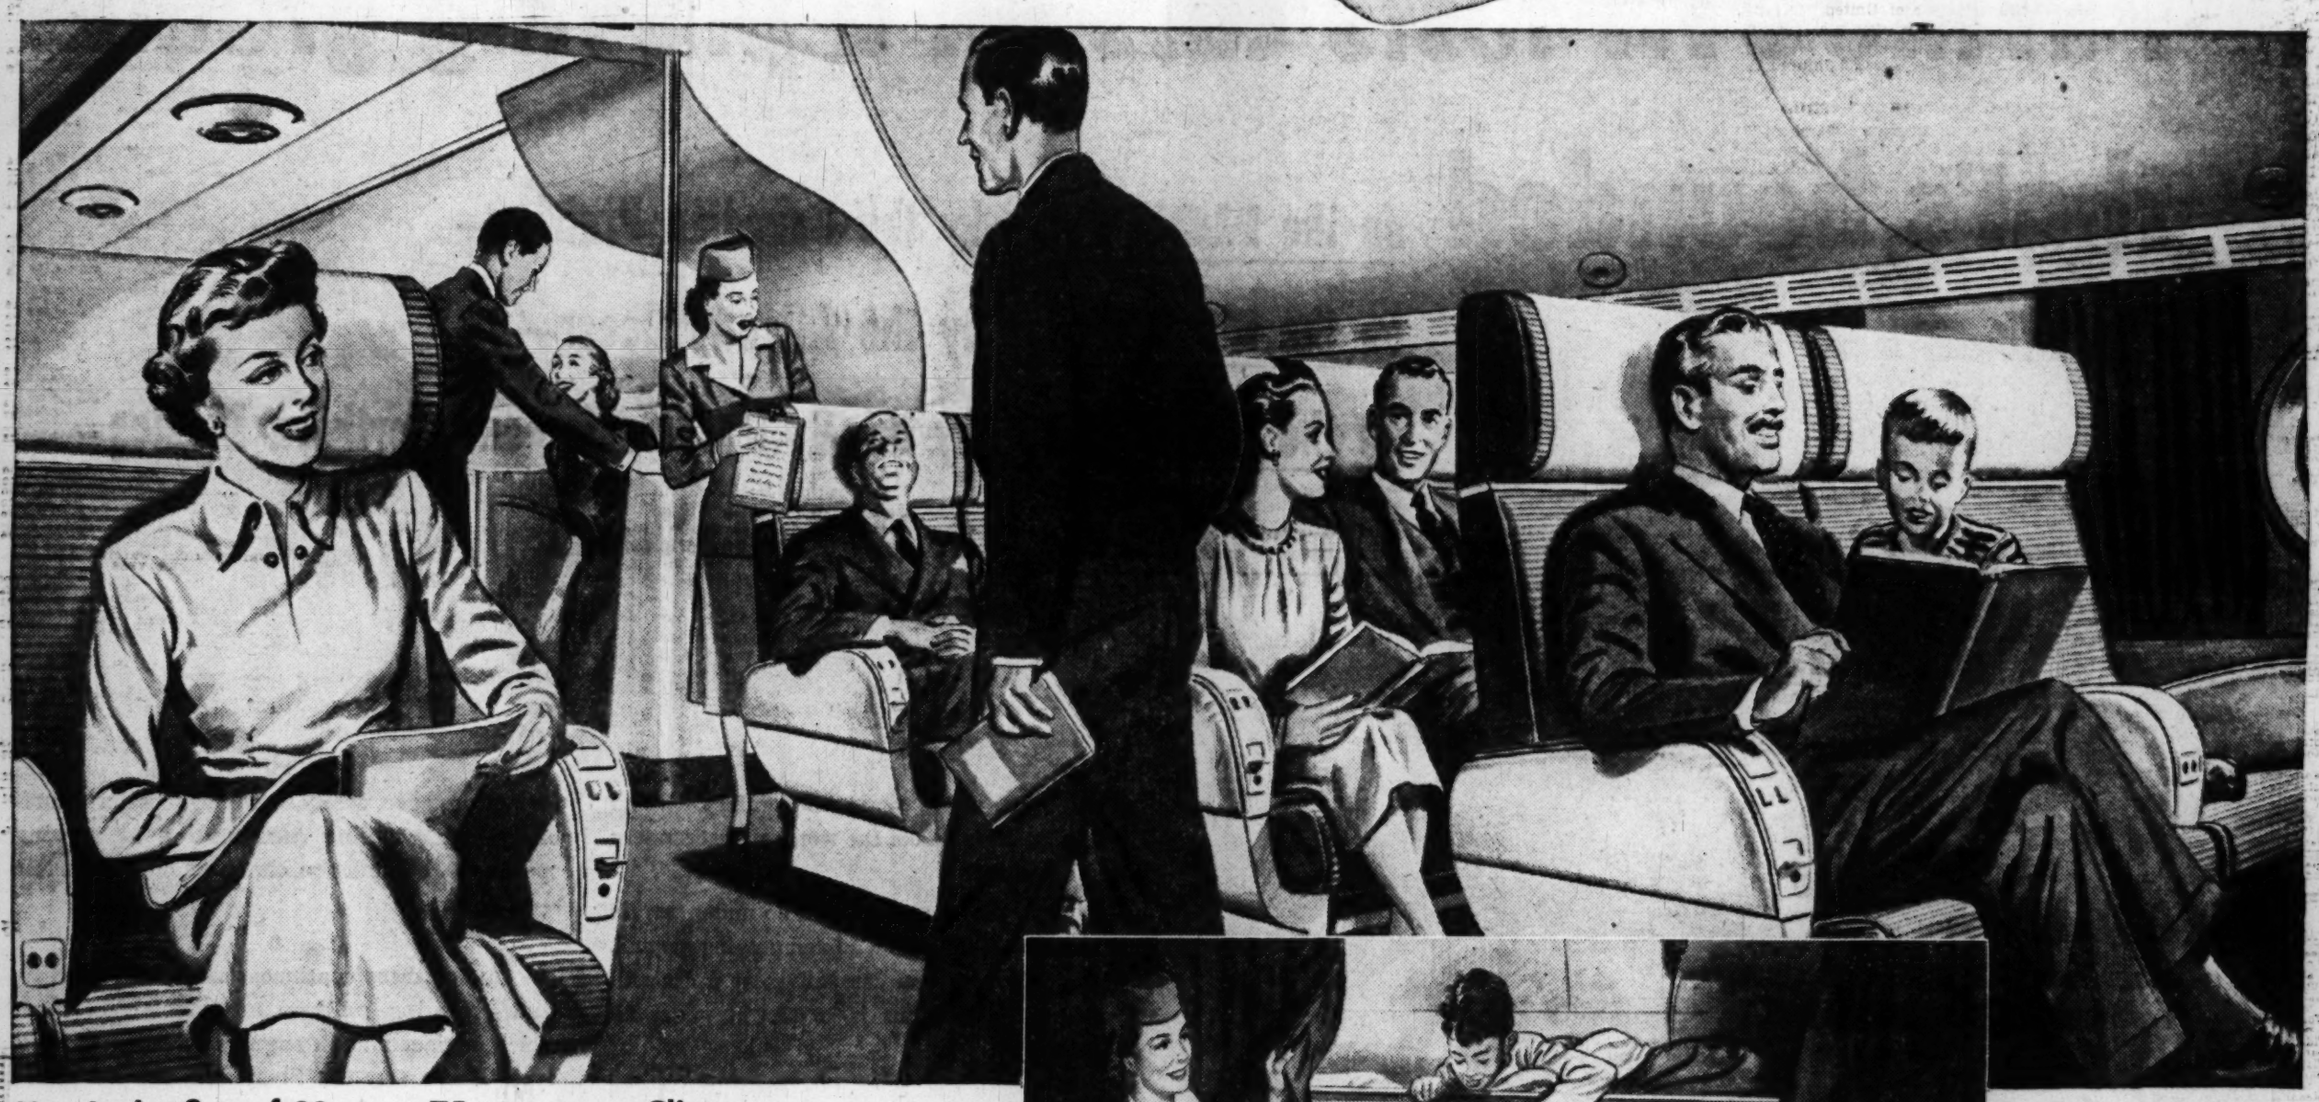
DOUBLE DECKED Clipper* "America"





Here's the first of 20 new, 75-passenger Clippers— the largest, fastest, most comfortable airliners in the world!

● It takes foresight to plan, order and develop an airplane like this! The same kind of foresight that made Pan American the first U. S. airline to use multi-engine aircraft (1927). The first to use 4-engine aircraft in overseas service (across the Pacific in 1935). The first to pioneer regular round-the-world service in 1947.

A small section of the huge main cabin of the "America" . . . Note how much "strolling" room there is. At the far left, a passenger is just coming up from the lower-deck lounge. The "powder room," extra large and well-mirrored, is forward . . . Men's lounge has electric-razor plug-in outlets. Four men can comfortably wash or shave at the same time.

Big, roomy berths—seven inches wider and four inches longer than in a railroad sleeping car! There are 16 similar berths on this ship. Curtains for privacy on both upper and lower berths. Mattresses are foam-soft . . . and you can even have breakfast in bed. (Just ring for your Clipper stewardess!)

In this roomy club lounge you have your choice of refreshments, including special hot coffee or tea, freshly made on board. Each of 14 overstuffed seats has a special glass-holder built into the arm. Note tiny bar back of stairway where you see the stewardess preparing refreshments. Here's a recreation room where you can meet people, walk around, admire the view from big, circular windows.

PLYMOUTH tests cars on a proving ground that's bounded on the NORTH → by the Canadian Prairies—

on the EAST → by the Atlantic Ocean—

on the SOUTH → by the Gulf of Mexico and Northern Mexico—

on the WEST → by the Pacific Ocean!

You can test a car in a laboratory—which Plymouth does in one of the world's most modern research centers.

You can see what a car will do under certain conditions by testing it on a fixed proving ground. But the only way you can tell what a car will do under all conditions is to test it under all conditions!

That's why the Plymouth Proving Ground extends from ocean to ocean, border to border. That's why Plymouth test cars are put through their paces on the very roads—under the very climatic conditions—that Plymouths are destined to meet when people buy them.

The Plymouth tests never end. Day after day, year after year, Plymouth test cars move over every kind of road in every kind of weather. And these cars are so good that it takes extremes of driving conditions to test them completely.

Plymouths battle through 40-below-zero blizzards in northern Minnesota. They take the beating heat of Death Valley. They climb the highest passes of the Rockies and the Appalachians. Plymouth test cars fight through the swirling sandstorms of the Dust Bowl. And they plow through the mud-ruts in rural roads, through the heavy traffic of metropolitan areas.

Working with detailed data already supplied by exhaustive laboratory studies, the test drivers constantly check—and double-check—their cars for performance, safety, economy, comfort, durability—for gasoline consumption at varying speeds—for brake action, clutch action, body noises—everything!

Out of these continuous nationwide driving tests—covering millions of miles—come facts which engineers and designers screen with eagle eyes. That's why the Plymouth—the low-priced car most like high-priced cars—has been a constantly better car—a constantly better buy for your money.

Right now, production is underway on the great New Plymouth. Those who are building these automobiles never know to what kind of use they will be put. One car may be headed for a kindly old lady who will coddle it all its days. Another is certain to be heading for the slam-bang wear of continuous taxi service. (There are far more Plymouth taxis than any other kind!) So Plymouth builds every car to take it—under any and all conditions!

Of this you may be sure—

When you see the great new Plymouth on display March 18, it will be all dressed up and ready to go—tested and proved through and through—to give you PLYMOUTH PERFORMANCE you've never known before!

Here is the sensational, almost human Bendix gyromatic, with the automatic soap injector. The new Automatic Injector provides four important advantages. It stores a supply of soap neatly inside the washer, it adds the soap at exactly the right moment—automatically, during the soak period, during the wash period—or both; it dispenses a carefully measured amount of soap or detergent; and when desired it eliminates the automatic stop between the soaking and washing operations.

Lawyers to Name Judge Candidates

The District Bar Association this week will begin selecting candidates for the Municipal Court bench post left vacant by the death of Judge John P. McMahon.

The association's committee on judicial selections will be called into session within the next week, Chairman Walter M. Bastian declared yesterday.

At the same time, Chief Judge Georges P. Barse of Municipal Court pointed out that Judge McMahon's death Thursday leaves the court more shorthanded than ever.

Only Eight Judges Available

Officially comprised of 10, the Municipal Court now has eight judges available, because of the McMahon vacancy and the shift of Judge Nadine L. Gallagher to Juvenile Court since the hospitalization of its Judge Fay L. Bentley in St. Elizabeths.

Judge Barse has vainly asked Congress to authorize a total of 13 judges for the Municipal Court, and has based the need on court figures showing an overcrowded docket.

The present system of handling cases will be continued despite the shortage of judges, Judge Barse said.

"I am not going to request the judges to work 24 hours a day or anything like that. We will try to do the job and I will leave it up to the individual judge to make the best of the situation," he declared.

No Indorsements Yet

He pointed out that Judge McMahor, aside from his legal ability, was invaluable on the bench because he could be relied upon to be present every day unless illness prevented it.

Judgeships are filled here by the President after an investigation by the Justice Department.

Customarily, the Attorney General receives the recommendations of the local bar before he sends his findings to the President. However, often the bar recommendations do not appear in the President's final choice.

Members of the bar association send to the judicial selections committee letters of indorsement of candidates. However, according to Bastian, no letters have been received so far.

In the past, there have been as many as 60 active candidates for judicial posts. The commitee has weeded down this figure to three or less in most instances.

Killing Suspect Grilled Again

New Orleans, March 4 (AP).—Louis Eugene Hoover, minus the effects of a "truth serum," again was unable today to recall a fight in which he said he might have broken Millionaire James Mahoney's neck.

The 25-year-old Louisville, Ky., parking lot attendant spent two hours with questioning police officers, most of the time entertaining them with card tricks.

Scheuering said Hoover made no admissions today but did comment: "You've got enough on me. Why don't you go ahead and charge me?"

Youth, 18, Admits Eight Purse-Snatchings

Police claimed solution of eight recent pocketbook snatchings in the Northeast section of the city with the arrest yesterday of Herman E. Carter, 18, of 1117 8th st. ne.

Late Friday night at 16th and K sts. ne. a purse containing $80 was snatched from the hand of Lucy Baker, 1007 18th pl. ne. She was able to give police a good description of the thief.

At about 9 a. m. yesterday, at the same intersection of 16th and K sts. ne., robbery squad detectives spotted Carter. They recognized him from a previous arrest for purse-snatching and noted he answered the description furnished by the Friday night victim.

When arrested, Carter had $55 in his possession, police said. They said he admitted and has been charged with eight robberies, all purse-snatchings, in the Northeast section since January 15.

Police said Carter told them he was paroled in January from the Maryland House of Correction after serving a two-year term.

Meanwhile, police were investigating three new street robberies.

At about 10:30 p. m. Friday in the 100 block of Florida ave. ne., Ulysses Love, 701 18th st. ne., was held up by two men at the point of a knife and robbed of $15. During the robbery, Love was stabbed in the thigh. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Walter R. Daniels, 24, of 725 Fairmont st. nw., was approached by two men near his home at about 2:30 a. m. They forced him into an alley and robbed him of $97.

Charles V. Stansbury, 63, of 2801 Pennsylvania ave. se., was beaten and robbed of $49 by two men about 7:50 a. m. in the 1100 block of Half st. sw. He was treated at Providence Hospital for face and mouth cuts.

Policeman Beaten, Tenant Is Held

Horace Clark, 40, of 438 I st. nw., was charged in Municipal Court yesterday with belaboring a policemen over the head with a rag-picker's stick.

Clark was held under $1000 bond until Thursday for hearing on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

The policeman, Pvt. C. W. Powell of the First Precinct, suffered a broken nose, a cut and bruised head, and a bruised arm.

The assault occurred Friday night when Powell went to the I st. address to inform Clark that the house was condemned and that having once been evicted, he must leave.

The officer said that Clark began shouting he was getting a gun and then ran out a backdoor into a nearby house.

There, Private Powell related, Clark surprised him with a vicious blow with the stick. Powell said he fell to the ground and believed he was spared more serious injury by his hat badge, which was badly bent by the blow. Powell said he received several blows before subduing Clark with a blackjack.

30-Ft. Fall Out Window Injures Child

A 6-year-old girl, Faye Davis, 1008 24th st. nw., fell from a third-story window at her home yesterday, suffering serious injuries when she landed on a concrete ramp.

A neighborhood boy, John Harvey, 1009 24th st. nw., said he saw her falling and rushed to catch her, but missed her by a foot.

The child was leaning from the window, listening to entreaties of friends to come out and play, police said. She apparently leaned too far and tumbled about 30 feet.

At Casualty Hospital last night, she was reported to be suffering internal injuries.

Intruder Causes Window Leap

A 54-year-old preacher was charged yesterday with breaking into the apartment of a woman who said she was so frightened by his entrance that she leaped out of a second-story window.

Charged with housebreaking was John Childs, of 1118 3d st. ne., who says he preaches at Mount Olive Baptist Church, 1148 6th st. ne.

The woman, Mrs. Janie Roberts, 23, 517 G st. ne., is in Gallinger Hospital with injuries to her back, leg and hip.

She said she was in her apartment alone shortly before noon when a man, identified by her as Childs, walked into her room. He was carrying a knife, Mrs. Roberts said. Without asking any questions she said she jumped from the window, falling 20 feet to the ground.

Police credited newspapermen with an assist in Child's arrest.

The investigating officer received information that Childs had been in the G st. apartment intending to visit a friend. They traced him to his home but could not find him.

Newspapermen sent out were waiting to telephone in their stories, police said, when they saw Childs and followed him, meantime summoning police, who made the arrest at 3d and H sts. ne.

Mrs. Roberts identified Childs at Gallinger Hospital, according to the officers.

Childs admitted entering the apartment, but said he was merely seeking his friend, police said. He denied carrying a knife or any other weapon, police reported.

Lonely Widow Dies of Poison

Mrs. Ethel S. McMahon, 67-year-old widow, was found dead at her home at 1501 Park rd. nw. yesterday morning, a bottle of poison nearby.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. McMahon left notes addressed to two sons in which, according to police, she complained of loneliness. Miss Margaret Griffith, with whom Mrs. McMahon shared an apartment, said that while she saw her sons frequently she grieved for her husband, a telephone company employe who died in 1942.

Mrs. McMahon's sons are William McMahon 2d, 1629 Columbia rd. nw., and Benjamin McMahon, jr., 2111 T st. se.

Funeral services for Mrs. McMahon, who came to Washington from Westchester, Pa., about 40 years ago, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the P. J. Saffell funeral home, 475 H st. nw. Burial will be private.

Scotland Yard Puts 100 on Vampire Case

London, March 5 (AP).—Scotland Yard put more than 100 men on London's grisly vampire murder case today in an all-out attempt to prove six missing persons vanished in baths of acid.

It was both a field and laboratory search. Detectives fanned out over an extensive area of southern England. Scientists made tests to determine whether materials collected from drain pipes and refuse heaps might contain human tissue.

Britons eagerly seeking details of what many believed would be "the crime of the century" had to be content with a dry official statement.

The Yard said it would "not be in the public interest" to indulge in any more speculations over the case.

John Haigh, 39, who is charged with the murder of elderly Mrs. Olive Durand-Deacon, was transferred today to a prison hospital for a routine checkup.

The search for five other missing persons—Mr. and Mrs. W. D. McSwan, their 37-year-old son Donald, and Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Henderson—developed into a painstaking check of every person known to have had any relations with them in recent years.

School Escapee Is Apprehended

Harvey A. Wise, 26, who escaped from the District Training School last November 19, has been apprehended by Philadelphia police, it was learned here yesterday.

Dr. James A. Alston, superintendent of the school, said yesterday that Wise, who has been classed as feeble-minded, would be returned here as soon as possible.

Police records show the youth has escaped 11 times from the school, and has been twice arrested for pulling false fire alarms while away from the school. In 1937, he was arrested on November 15 on 15 counts of turning in false fire alarms.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Public Debt Bureau Plans to Continue Reducing Its Staff

TREASURY'S Bureau of Public Debt will continue to reduce its staff over the next 18 months. Commissioner E. L. Kilby has reported to Congress:

That in the 1948 fiscal year the bureau had an average of 7629 employes; that 647 jobs will be wiped out during this, the 1949 fiscal year, and that a reduction of 512 will be made in the 1950 fiscal year which begins July 1.

HUMOROUS? Representative Usher L. Burdick (R., N. Dak.), whose remarks about Federal workers being worn out by vacations appeared here the other day, now says they were made in a "humorous and facetious vein." He added:

"I want to affirm here and now that, as a member of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, I fully appreciate the hard and conscientious work done by the great majority of workers for the Government and I shall continue to strive for greater benefits for these workers."

The Congressman said he had in mind "certain Capitol Hill employes, and not Government employes in Washington generally." He said an "erroneous impression" of his remarks appeared here.

The legislator made his cracks about Government people in a statement he writes regularly for the weekly newspapers in his North Dakota district. It seems he didn't intend for it to be used here. But it was—and apparently the Congressman was given an entirely different slant on working for Uncle Sam by many Government employes here.

His entire statement regarding Federal workers appeared here. My crime was using it. Anyway, I'm happy to know that Mr. Burdick intended to be funny and that he will do his best to better the lot of Government people.

NAVY: It's downgrading quite a number of employes at headquarters here in what its officials say is a "routine" classification survey. Several downgraded employes are planning appeals to Civil Service . . . The Navy's method of classifying field jobs has been criticized by the AFL's International Federation of Technical Engineers, Architects and Draftsmen. The union also protested Navy's ban on union activity by supervisory employes.

ARMY has adopted a copyright policy for guidance of its research and development employes. Information "cleared" by the Army may be published by employes at their own expense and they may receive royalties from it if the writing is done on their own time . . . The Washington Scribes is conducting its second annual popularity contest for Negro Government girls. Leading the entries are Maggie Liverpool of Treasury and Gladys Allen of Veterans' Administration.

RETIREMENT: The National Association of Retired Civil Employes has indorsed: (1) the bill to exempt annuities from Federal income taxes; (2) the Murray bill to give married women the same survivorship benefits now available to married men, and (3) the bill which would give employes who retired before April 1, 1948, the benefits of the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act which went into effect on that date.

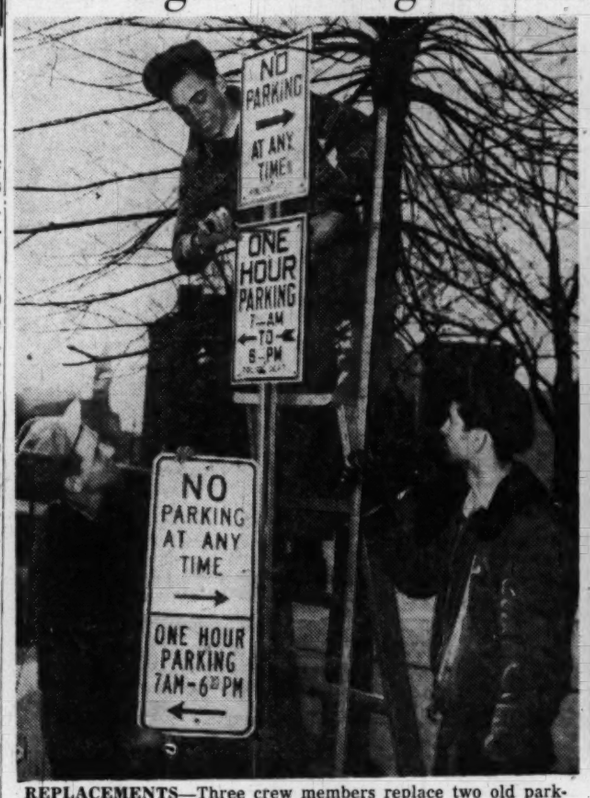
RED CROSS: It took the 850 military and civilian employes in Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks just six hours to raise its Red Cross quota of $2198.

ITEMS: The President, by executive order, has given regular Civil Service status to Winifred R. Donnellon, an employe of State's passport division for 27 years . . . Applications for engineer officers in the regular corps of the Public Health Service will be accepted through March 18 . . . The National Secretaries' Association plans to set up high standards for its members. Its members would be referred to as CPS's—certified professional secretaries. The association hopes to get States to put CPS on a par with CPA . . . The New York State Senate has passed a bill to end veterans' preference in the appointment and promotion to State jobs the end of next year.

NOTES: Percy H. Thomas has retired from the Federal Power Commission after 15 years of service as an electrical engineer . . . Chairman Tom Murray of the House Civil Service Committee will speak to AFL's Government Employes Council on Tuesday afternoon . . . New staff appointees at the National Bureau of Standards are Charles A. Mabey, Dr. Paul Wang, William M. Piper, John W. Utecht, Dr. John R. Pellam, Dr. Ralph L. Nuttall and Arthur E. Newlon . . . Robert S. Regar, superintendent, Division of Office Procedure and Forms, has retired after 40 years in the postal service . . . Bennet A. Porter is the new president of the Organization of Professional Employes of the United States Department of Agriculture. Erwin C. Elting is vice president, and Walworth Brown is secretary-treasurer.

TRAVEL: Federal workers do plenty of it in Government autos. The Budget Bureau has gathered these eye-opening statistics: The Government owns 237,000 motor vehicles that last year traveled 523 million miles and consumed 65 million gallons of feul. Agriculture owns 19,603 vehicles to top the civilian agencies. Interior and Post Office are runners-up.

Some Signs of Things Clearing Up . . .



REPLACEMENTS—Three crew members replace two old parking signs on Indiana ave., between 4th and 5th sts. nw., with one of the new single signs bearing the same directions. The workmen are (from left) Joseph E. Wander, jr., 819 17th st. se.; Ronald Rowland, 2129 18th st. nw., and Melvin B. Sansbury, 2120 Minnesota ave. se.

INNOVATION—Gone is the baling-wire technique of fastening the traffic or parking signs to lamp posts. Joseph E. Wander, jr., snips the wire holding an old sign while Ronald Rowland attaches a new sign with a metal band by using a special gadget which tightens and clinches the metal in one operation. Bands are used at top and bottom

Old-type signs at 7th and D sts. nw. will soon be replaced

IN THE MAKING—In the Department of Vehicles and Traffic sign shop, 307 6th st. nw., William Bernhardt squeezes the paint through a stencil onto a sign plate as William Schrider places a finished sign in a drying rack. Signs are lettered by silk screen process

New-type signs, up at 8th and E sts. nw., are more legible

Convention, Tourist Trade at Peak in '48

230 Gatherings Left 12 Millions Here, While Other Visitors Spent 48

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

Conventions and tourist trade in Washington gave business a 60-million-dollar fillip last year.

This was reported last night by Clarence A. Arata, manager of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The estimated total, based on an actual survey of visitors' outlays, represents an all-time high, Arata said. Number of conventions and attendance also reached a new record here last year.

As a national mecca, the Nation's Capital attracted 230 conventions last year with an attendance of 119,000 persons, according to the GNCC survey. Conventioneers spent 12 million dollars in 1948, against $7,575,000 in 1947. Another 48 million dollars poured out of tourists' pockets in 1948.

Essentially "New Money"

"From a community viewpoint," Arata declared, "the money spent by convention delegates and tourists is essentially 'new money'—money entering into the channels of local trade purely as the result of the happenstance of a particular meeting or visit . . . As such, it is very valuable.

"To most of the recipients, it represents a marginal income above their normal volume of business, produced without a corresponding increase in costs. To the community as a whole, it represents an increase in current wealth or at least an offset against or balancing of similar moneys flowing away from it."

As part of a national survey conducted by the International Association of Convention Bureaus, the local committee headed by Arata last year compiled for the first time some actual figures on how and where conventioneers spend their cash.

Averages $22.92 a Da

The average delegate, it was learned, spends about 4½ days at a convention and $22.92 a day. Here's where that daily amount went (in per cent): hotel room and incidentals, 29.1; hotel restaurants, 21.6; other restaurants, 13.7; beverages, 5.4; retail stores, 10.9; local transportation, 4.2; theaters, 0.7; sightseeing, 1.9; night clubs and sports events, 4.5; gas, oil and car service, 1.7; other items, 6.3.

The figures are based on a survey of 18 local conventions with a total of 17,507 delegates. Questionnaires were filled out and returned by 1793 persons.

Of the conventioneers, 49.7 per cent said they traveled by train; 15.8 per cent in plane; 0.8 per cent by bus; 33.6 per cent by private car, and 0.1 per cent by boat. No one walked.

Arata predicts that this year should equal 1948 in tourist and convention trade, but he foresees a tremendous increase and new peak for 1950. "That's the year of Washington's sesquicentennial celebration and our committee has been hard at work for months to promote it."

Comparison by Cities

Does it cost more to attend a convention in Washington than in other cities? Of 28 cities surveyed by the International Association, 13 show higher costs. Here's how each locality reports per average delegate:

	Days' Stay	Daily Outlay
Washington	4.42	$22.92
Atlantic City	4.11	22.37
Baltimore	2.56	19.67
Buffalo	3.03	22.17
Chicago	4.36	32.18
Cincinnati	3.28	27.02
Cleveland	3.14	22.54
Columbus	2.49	19.32
Denver	3.65	22.11
Des Moines	2.17	26.45
Indianapolis	2.10	22.41
Jacksonville	3.96	16.55
Kansas City	2.88	19.98

San Francisco	4.68	24.15
Syracuse	2.64	24.42
Toronto	4.50	23.91
National	3.90	24.00

Male and Female

Arata swore this writer to secrecy on certain aspects of the following data, but gave permission to generalize. Here are some figures on two Washington conventions, which we'll call (A) and (B). The (A) convention was all-male and set a new high for expenditures, while the (B) convention was all-female and was about average for expenditures.

	(A) group	(B) group
Average stay (days)	6.22	5.58
Average daily spend	$38.34	$18.21
Hotel room	28.5%	20.0%
Restaurants	40.%	31.8%
Beverages	5.5%	1.2%
Retail stores	7.8%	16.2%
Night clubs, etc	10.4%	.7%

Citizens Ask Renaming of Gen. Young

Federation Acts After Attempt To Keep Motion Off Floor Fails

In an unscheduled move, the Federation of Citizens Associations last night asked for reappointment of Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young as engineer commissioner after an unsuccessful attempt to keep the resolution off the floor.

As the resolution constituted new business not on the meeting's agenda, it was necessary, under the Federation's constitution, to obtain a three fourths approving vote for immediate consideration.

This was obtained, by a 53-12 vote, under objection as a "matter of policy" by Eugene E. Ditto, delegate from the Georgetown Citizens Association. Ditto maintained that delegates would find it difficult to act for their associations without instruction.

Newell Offered Resolution

The resolution, offered by Clifford H. Newell, Arkansas Avenue Community, expressed the federation's "sincere thanks and appreciation" for the manner in which Gen. Young has performed his duties.

It further stated that many matters are still in process of completion.

Another resolution, seeking appointment of "a person active in organized citizenry . . . without regard to national political party affiliation" as a civilian commissioner, was tabled after objection.

Resolution Tabled

Presenting the resolution, Kenneth P. Armstrong, American Association of Engineers, said civilian commissioners should be chosen from among "active workers in civic affairs" and added that organized citizenry has been ignored, with very few exceptions, in past appointments.

The resolution was tabled by overwhelming voice vote after E. C. Hartung, Brightwood, objected on the grounds that it was "very close to violating the precepts of the federation" and that it "amounts to indorsement of a particular individual under the circumstances."

The established policy of the federation is not to indorse individual persons for appointment to public office. Individual associations can and do make such indorsement.

Newell, who is a past president and a leading policymaker of the organization, explained after the meeting that the resolution in support of Gen. Young did not violate this policy as the general's appointment is handled differently. The engineer commissioner must be an officer of the Army Engineers and is appointed by the War Department, he pointed out.

A continuing clean-up program for the city's residential areas was approved after a report by Karl K. Gower, Brightwood, chairman of a joint subcommittee of the health and public welfare committees.

Gower emphasized that the project should be carried out as a permanent program and not merely a periodic campaign. As approved it would be advanced on a voluntary basis by member associations.

Inspect Properties

Each would conduct inspections of properties in its area and notify residents of violations of District laws by means of printed forms. These forms would contain 28 separate violations separated under three main headings: Containers, premises and abutting public space, and general.

Specific violations would be checked on the forms. An accompanying letter would explain the purpose of the checked form and request cooperation, explaining the specific regulations which were violated.

Praising the suggested program, Newell urged united support by all associations. He said by this action the federation becomes the first organization in the city to embark on a "Clean-Up Washington Program."

The federation also voted to accept the application for membership of the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association. Formerly a member, the group withdrew in 1945.

Education Of Teachers Criticized

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A fourth of the city's white teachers and a fifth of the Negro teachers have had only two years of formal education beyond high school.

The Strayer report on District schools lists this as one of the reasons for the "spotty" educational program offered in schools, particularly in the elementary grades.

A rating of elementary schools made by the Strayer survey shows that about 19 per cent are superior in their educational program, about 35 per cent are good, about 27 per cent are fair and about 18 per cent poor.

12 Per Cent Teacher Turnover

Another factor in the uneven program is an annual 12 per cent turnover of teachers.

The Strayer report says this is due primarily to the fact that one teacher out of every seven is temporary and does not qualify for permanent appointment.

Of all teachers, only one in six has taken any advanced educational training during the past 15 years.

This "is not an encouraging index of the professional status of the teaching personnel," the report declares.

Another factor is the large size of District classes. The white teacher has an average class of 35 pupils and the Negro teacher an average of 39.

The report finds this pupil load "unreasonably heavy" and "not justified by any accepted educational standard."

Sees need as "urgent"

The Strayer report states that these facts point to the "urgent need for a complete reorganization of the administration of school personnel problems."

It recommends that an associate superintendent be placed in charge of personnel and that the present method of selecting teachers through an examination be abolished.

The survey finds that the "typical" District school teacher is a married woman now approaching 45 years of age and the completion of her second decade of teaching service.

She is more apt than not to have been born in the District and to have received her educational training either at Wilson or Miner teachers college.

All of her teaching experience has been in the local schools. She works under the direction of a principal who also is a product of local training.

'Inbreeding' Assailed

"Nothing will sap the vitality of an educational system more surely than the slow but constant process of inbreeding," the report states.

"This becomes even more deadly or blighting when little effort is made to keep closely in touch with the dynamic influence of pioneer thinking and experimental movements."

On the number of temporary teachers now in the schools, the report states:

"For too long a time the recruitment of an adequate teaching staff has gone by default."

The survey finds "no evidence" that the present system of selecting teachers by examination secures "teachers with qualifiications desired."

Stress On Facts

Instead, it places a "high priority" on ability to secure factual information.

"This situation makes possible the development of a training program in the local teachers' colleges pointed toward this type of test. It provides no adequate screening for those who have been developing a broader educational policy.

The examination now eliminates from 32 to 55 per cent of graduates from the two teachers' colleges.

"At a time when temporary teachers are being assigned to the local schools not by the score but by the hundreds, many of the graduates of the local teachers' colleges are declared ineligible for certification. Either the work of the teachers colleges is unsatisfactory or the licensing exams are unnecessarily severe," the report declares.

75,000 Improper Traffic Signs Being Replaced in 5-Year Plan

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp is looking ahead to the day when confused parking or traffic signs will not be accepted as an excuse for traffic violations.

He expects that time will come by July 1, 1953, when a $330,000 sign replacement program is due to be completed.

By that time, he hopes to replace a conglomeration of 75,000 "illogical, illegal or illegible" traffic signs with something like 50,000 logical, legal and legible ones.

The 75,000 which he thus described were found by Keneipp and his deputy director, Wallace L. Braun, when they were appointed in May, 1946, they said.

7981 Signs Replaced

Since last July 1, 7981 old signs have been replaced. In addition, 412 new signs were erected last year because of new regulations.

The sign replacement program got its start with an appropriation of $65,000, being spent in the current fiscal year. A crew of 22 "outside men" are at work replacing these signs as fast as they can.

Motorists can view the new signs on F and G sts. nw. between 6th and 15th sts.; on Pennsylvania ave. nw. between 1st and Washington circle, and on Constitution ave. from the Capitol to 15th st. nw.

Aims of Sign Program

The sign program is designed to accomplish these things:

Eliminate conflict in "No Standing" hours between signs.

Remove "No Parking" signs from zones already covered by "No Standing" signs.

Attach all signs at a uniform height of 7 feet above the sidewalk, signs to be at least 12-by-18 inches in size.

Mark limits of loading zones in the middle of a block at both ends.

Indicate the limits of all parking zones by arrows.

Fix signs permanently by brackets to metal standards, not to trees or wooden posts.

Trim trees up to a height of 12½ feet; trees not to be planted closer to intersections than 30 feet.

Repeat signs as necessary at least every 100 feet.

Reinforce the ban against parking within 40 feet of intersections by signs at the 40-foot mark.

Other Features, Too

The signs have a number of other features.

While stop, slow and school signs still have a yellow background and those concerning speed limits, turns etc. are black on white, the introduction of red and green for lettering on parking signs is a feature of the Keneipp plan.

One of the most noticeable changes, this involves using green letters to indicate where and when you can park, and red where you can't.

All signs applying to night-time regulations are being coated with reflecting surfaces. This costs about 30 cents a square foot.

New lettering standards are a feature of the new designs. Letters, previously of varied sizes down to three quarters of an inch, now must be at least 2 inches high.

A rounded style, recommended by eyesight experts, was also adopted for better legibility.

Conferred With Merchants

The new sign program required conference with merchants, who had to be persuaded that standardized peak-hour regulation on loading and unloading of vehicles were for the best; and discussions with police and court officials.

One section of the sign program has been completed. Highway route markers, formerly 12-by-12 inches, are now 16-by-16 and all are coated with reflecting material. A total of 1550 such markers, including directional arrows and the words "Northbound," "Southbound," etc., have been installed.

Simplicity and clarity, keynotes of the five-year-plan signs, will contrast sharply with the mess of traffic markers which, like Topsy, "just growed" on Washington streets, especially during the war period.

It has not been unusual to find, as Representative John Phillips (R., Calif.) did in 1947, six dual signs and seven single signs relating to parking, in one block. Many motorists who wound up in court because of confusion over regulations were freed when the judge agreed they couldn't be expectd to figure out what the signs meant—or which of conflicting instructions they should obey.

Judge Frees Driver, Then Asks Campaign on Illegal Parking

Municipal Court judges must be artful dodgers to avoid traffic accidents around Judiciary Square, a jurist declared yesterday.

The trouble, according to Judge Armond W. Scott, is that illegal parkers block the judges' driveway and funnel traffic by double parking on both sides of the street.

The judge called for a campaign to alleviate the situation.

He made the statements in connection with an illegal parking case against Henry Scruggs, 19, a Georgetown University student, of 2900 G st. nw.

Scruggs admitted the charge, but said he had merely been waiting at 3d st. and Independence ave. in his car for a few minutes when police arrested him.

Judge Scott released Scruggs on his personal bond, warning him not to repeat the offense. Then he declared vehemently.

"I don't see why citizens are hauled in for unlawful parking in the outlying areas every day and nothing is done about it around the Courthouse. I wish the newspapers would come around in the afternoon and take pictures of what is going on right under the noses of the judges. The law is being applied unequally in this thing.

"Any afternoon, you can see cars double parked and parked in restricted areas all around the block, on both sides of the street. We judges can't even get out of our driveways safely. One of our clerks was injured recently because of it."

Science Winners Hear Vogt

William Vogt, chief of the conservation section of the Pan-American Union, yesterday suggested world control of population as the only way to avoid world-wide starvation resulting from dwindling natural resources.

Speaking before 40 high school seniors attending the fifth session of the Science Talent Institute at the Statler Hotel, Vogt declared the supply of foodstuffs, water, lumber and clothing cannot keep up with uncontrolled population increases much longer.

The students are finalists in a countrywide competition for $11,000 worth of Westinghouse Electric Corp. science scholarships.

Today, the students will visit the 60-inch cyclotron at the Carnegie Institution during a tour of the city. Tonight they will attend a reception in their honor at Science Service, 1719 N st. nw.

Senate Group Speeds Work On Home Rule

The Senate Home Rule Subcommittee will meet in another executive session this week in a move to reach early final decision on a city self-rule measure.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), subcommittee chairman, said last night that his group wants to settle all basic undecided policy questions early this week.

The two chief issues facing Kefauver and his colleagues—Senators Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Matthew W. Neely (D., W. Va.)—are:

1. Should reorganization of District agencies be included in the home rule measure?

2. How the law-making powers of a city council would be meshed with Congressional review powers.

At a meeting Thursday, the Kefauver group tentatively agreed to back a plan providing a nine-member elected city council "with the broadest possible authority within Constitutional limits."

At the same time, Committee Clerk A. L. Wheeler yesterday continued staff work with Dr. George Galloway of the Library of Congress legislative reference division and the Senate Legislative Counsel's office in the drafting of two separate bills for committee action.

One will be a simple measure providing only the home rule features; the other will combine self-government with District reorganization.

The bills are being prepared now to avoid delay in filing a home rule plan in the Senate after the Kefauver group reaches final decision on the policy questions.

Scholastic Art Awards Exhibit Opens Tuesday

The Scholastic Art Awards Exhibit, sponsored in the Washington area by Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., will be held in the lobby of the Commerce Building from Tuesday through Saturday.

The exhibit, which includes several hundred pieces covering almost all phases of art and crafts, is of the work of high school and junior high school students from Washington, Maryland and Virginia.

The outstanding entries will be awarded prizes and will be sent to the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh for further judging in a national competition.

E. R. Carr Named Chairman of Ball For Blossom Fete

Edward R. Carr, Washington real estate dealer, has been named chairman of the Cherry Blossom Festival ball to be held Friday, April 1, in the District National Guard Armory, C. J. Mack, general chairman of the fete, announced yesterday.

A cherry blossom queen will be selected at the ball, first in the history of the annual festival. She will be picked from 51 princesses representing the States of the Nation and United States possessions and territories.

The queen will be crowned by Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug the next day at a program in the Sylvan Theater on the Monument grounds.

Growth of Church In Silver Spring To Be Broadcast

The story of the organization and growth of the Silver Spring (Md.) Congregational Church will be told today in a nationwide broadcast over NBC's "Living 1949" program at 4:35 p. m.

Louis Hazam, a resident of Silver Spring, whose wife is a member of the church, wrote the script for the broadcast. The program is in observance of the World Day of Prayer.

The story was chosen as typical of what is happening in thousands of communities all over the country.

The Silver Spring Congregational Church is under construction at Colesville rd. and Indian Spring dr.

Area News in Brief

Saturday Parking 'Holiday' Ruled Out

Saturday afternoon is no holiday so far as parking meters are concerned, Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court declared yesterday.

The judge scotched a test case of the problem in finding guilty William P. Doing, an attorney of 4106 46th st. nw., who was fined $3, but who announced that he will appeal.

Traffic Policeman E. J. Clement testified Doing was parked next to a meter that had a red flag up at 2:15 p. m. Saturday, February 26, near 1420 New York ave. nw.

The meter had printed on it that parking was limited to an hour except on Sundays and holidays.

Doing contended that Saturday afternoon is a legal holiday in the District and cited a negotiable instruments section of the District Code.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph Lowther glanced at the cited section and pointed out that it was part of the negotiable instrument law only, and did not have general application to all phases of life.

When Doing persisted in his argument, Judge Scott declared, "I disagree. If what you say were the case, it would revolutionize law in the District.

Missing Girl Sought

Arlington police yesterday put out a lookout for a 16-year-old girl reported missing from her home since February 14.

She is Mrs. Dorothy Moe Payne, whom police said is separated from her husband, Robert Payne, 2724 N. George Mason dr. Mrs. Payne, prior to her disappearance, lived with her mother, Mrs. Charles Kizer, at 1913 N. Quebec st., Arlington.

Her mother said the girl last was seen by her uncle, Ernest T. Edwards of Richmond, on February 14 as he put her aboard a bus to return to Arlington.

Police said she had told the uncle she wanted a job in Richmond or Baltimore.

Foodstuffs Condemned

A total of 1732 pounds of spoiled foodstuffs was condemned last week by District Health Department food inspectors in a check of 1351 establishments. Nine condemnations, consisting principally of stringbeans and flounders, were made. Three cases were taken to Municipal Court and resulted in fines and forfeitures totaling $150.

Speedy Action Asked

District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency officials have forwarded two resolutions to the District Commissioners urging action on two recommendations made earlier, P. Y. K. Howat, chairman, disclosed yesterday.

One resolution urged action on a proposal for rebuilding Western Market, 21st and K sts. nw., so as to provide market space and parking areas overhead.

The other asked drafting of legislation empowering city heads to authorize parking lot operators to utilize District-owned land located between building lines and the sidewalk. Howat said this could add 260 car spaces to present parking lots in the city.

Firm Wins Tax Fight

Dy-Dee Wash of Washington, Inc., owners of five identical delivery trucks assessed at different valuations, won a dubious triumph yesterday in its bout with the District Tax Assessor's office.

James L. Martin, assistant assessor, said employes made errors in preparing the assessments in favor of the company on two trucks. These lower assessments will stand this year, but will be boosted to meet those on the other trucks in next year's computations, he said.

Lank Heads GOP Club

Gordon Louk, 50, of Ardmore, Md., is the new president of the Republican Club of Prince Georges County. The group held its annual election of officers Thursday at the Odd Fellows Hall in Capitol Heights, Md. Louk, who succeeds Marvin S. Gallimore of Bladensburg, operates a general insurance business in Cottage City, Md.

Wins Oratorical Contest

Henry A. Renz, 16, of 500 N. Fillmore st., Arlington, a junior at the Washington-Lee High School, yesterday won first place in the Arlington County finals of the American Legion oratorical contest held at the school.

Renz received $25, a medal and a crack at the zone finals in Charlottesville, Va., on March 12.

Arlington's second-place winner was Anne Johnson of Claude Junior High. Allen Robnett, of Dolly Madison Junior High, took third place, and James Daniels, of Thomas Jefferson Junior High, was fourth.

Curtis Firm Low Bidder

Curtis Builders, Inc., 1906 M st. nw., was the low bidder on a contract for completion of rooms and alterations at the Patterson Elementary School, South Capitol st. between Danbury and Elmira sts. sw., it was announced yesterday.

The bids were opened in the District Building Thursday and a contract is expected to be awarded by the Commissioners within a few weeks. Eight local firms and one from Maryland submitted bids.

Youth Released By Error Is Back In Rockville Jail

Thomas S. Carter, 21, who was released inadvertently from the Rockville jail only a few days after he had participated in a jail-break attempt with two other men last November, has been returned to custody of Montgomery County authorities.

Police said yesterday Carter had been arrested on a Montgomery County Circuit Court bench warrant by District detectives after county authorities received a tip that he was living in downtown Washington. He is now in Rockville jail awaiting trial, for which no date has been set.

The youth was awaiting trial on a petty larceny charge at the time he made his break attempt with two other prisoners, who since have been given 5-year suspended jail terms for their part in the break.

Carter was freed when he was tried and given a suspended sentence on the petty larceny charge before police had a chance to serve him with a warrant on the jail-break charge.

Novocain Found to Ease Pain, Aid Mobility in Arthritis

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Novocain, well-known painkiller in dentistry, has been found effective in management of severe pains of arthritis, it was reported last night.

Report of the drug's new use was backed up by clinical findings published in the Connecticut State Medical Journal of dramatic results obtained by Drs. David J. Graubard of New York and Milton C. Peterson of Kansas City.

Injected into patients' veins, they reported, the drug brought relief of pain and increased mobility of 165 arthritic patients who received a total of 1033 infusions.

Drs. Graubard and Peterson reported that the function of novocain was to anesthetize irritated nerve endings long enough to restore normal circulation "which permits the healing process to begin."

Novocain for arthritis, it was emphasized, is not a home remedy, but the techniques of its administration is readily acquired by physicians.

One case reported told of a 47-year-old engineer who suffered rheumatoid arthritis for seven years. His knees pained him to such an extent he was unable to drive his own car. After six infusions, administered within a two-month period, he was able not only to drive out to participate in active physical exercise without pain for five months preceding the published reports of his case history.

Clinical data revealed 22 cases of arthritis following injury received a total of 92 infusions, or an average of 4.2 a patient, and that 20 had good relief, 1 fair and 1 poor, while 21 showed increased mobility.

One series studied involved 110 patients with osteoarthritis. They received an average of six infusions each, with a range of 1 to 26 infusions a patient. Of the total, 89 received good relief of pain, 15 fair and 6 poor, while 104 obtained increased mobility, the report stated.

Thirty-three cases of rheumatoid arthritis received a total of 274 intravenous procaine infusions. Largest number given any one individual in this series was 34; the smallest, 1. Of this group, 21 acknowledged good relief of pain, 7 fair and 3 poor, and 26 obtained positive increased mobility.

Drs. Graubard and Peterson further advocated in their report that vitamin C, such as ascorbic acid or sodium ascorbate, be added routinely to all procaine infusions. Laboratory analysis, they noted, frequently reveals vitamin C deficiency in arthritic patients.

The satisfactory results obtained, they emphasized, do not represent "cures."

"Cure is as yet impossible since the cause of arthritis is as yet unknown," their report stated. "This method is recommended solely as an adjuvant to the treatment of arthritis."

3-Way Study Of Religion Set for Forum

"Communism is Atheism" will be the subject of an address by the Right. Rev. John K. Cartwright, St. Matthew's Cathedral rector, at the anti-Communist Town Hall meeting Monday at 8:30 p. m. at Gonzaga Auditorium.

Religion will be the general subject of discussion, and will be studied from three sides. In addition to Cartwright's theme, the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., will discuss the relationship between church and state; and the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith will discuss the influence of the church in society.

The forums are sponsored by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knight of Columbus.

H. Winslip Wheatley, a member of the Fourth Degree, will moderate the Monday night forum. The meetings are free and open to all.

Steamer Repairs To Cost $175,000

Norfolk, Va., March 5 (AP).—The SS District of Columbia is to be taken to Baltimore for a $175,000 repair and alteration job by the Bethlehem Ship Yard.

Meanwhile, formal closing of the vessel's sale to the Old Bay Line is expected in a few days, P. S. Gornto, Norfolk manager of the line, said yesterday.

Gornto said the former Norfolk & Washington line steamer would then be towed to Baltimore for repair of the damage sustained in a collision October 31. The District of Columbia sideswiped an anchored tanker in Hampton Roads. One person was killed and three other persons were injured.

Infant Death Rate Sets New Record Low

The infant mortality rate for 1947 was the lowest in national records, and the District of Columbia rate bettered the national average, it was disclosed here last night.

Figures released by the National Office of Vital Statistics, United States Public Health Service disclosed that:

1. Deaths under 1 year recorded in United States totalled 119,173, a mortality rate of 32.2 for each 1000 live births as compared to 1946's rate of 33.8.

2. District of Columbia infant deaths in 1947 totalled 691 for a mortality rate of 31.9, in comparison to 767 infant deaths in 1946 and the mortality rate for that year of 41.2.

3. The Nation's five leading causes of infant deaths for 1947, in order, were: Premature birth, with a mortality rate of 11.1; congenital malformations, 4.6; pneumonia and influenza, 3.6; injury at birth, 3.5, and asphyxia and atelectasis (breathing failures), 1.6.

It marked the first year that smotherings and collapsed lungs ranked among the five leading causes of infant deaths, and the first year that bowel disorders such as diarrhea, enteritis and ulceration of the intestines, as a grouping, were not among the five leading causes.

The, number of deaths under one year recorded for the nation during 1947 was actually 8110 more than the number recorded for the previous year. However, this increase reflected a tremendous increase in the number of births during 1947 and not a rise in infant mortality, it was explained.

Though final figures for 1948 have not been compiled provisional figures indicate a further decline in the national infant death rate to an estimated 31.8, the statisticians said.

Far East Sun Eclipse Film to Be Shown

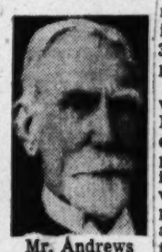
W. G. Andrews Dies; Former Congressman

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 5 (AP). Walter G. Andrews, 59, Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee in the Eightieth Congress, died of a heart attack here today.



Mr. Andrews

A veteran of 18 years in the House, Andrews represented the Forty-second Congressional District of New York. He died at a hotel here where he had been staying on a vacation. He was a resident of Buffalo, N. Y. Survivors include a sister, Mrs. William P. Urban of Buffalo.

Andrews was first elected to Congress in 1930 from the old Fortieth New York District, which later became the Forty-second. He did not seek reelection last year, retiring because of his health.

He was the ranking Republican member of the House Military Affairs Committee from 1935.

Andrews was born in Evanston, Ill., July 16, 1889. He was a grandson of Walter Q. Gresham, Secretary of State in Grover Cleveland's Cabinet.

His family moved to Buffalo, where Andrews attended public school and the Nichols School, a private institution for boys. He later attended Lawrenceville Academy, N. J., and was graduated from Princeton in 1913.

For two years he was head football coach at Princeton. In 1916 he enlisted as a private in the first New York National Guard Cavalry and served on the Mexican border. He later went to France and reached the rank of major in the 107th Infantry. He was wounded in action at the Somme and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Andrews was in private business in Buffalo until he entered public life. Just prior to his election in 1930, he was Federal census director for western New York.

He was not married.

Expansion Work For Tuberculosis Hospital to Start

Roanoke, Va., March 5 (AP).— Despite opposition from other parts of the State, the go ahead signal has been given for expansion of Catawba Sanatorium at a cost of nearly one and one half million dollars.

But just when actual construction at the tuberculosis hospital will start remains problematical.

Dr. J. B. Nicholls, superintendent and medical director, confirmed reports today architects have been engaged to draft working plans and specifications for the addition.

Dr. Nicholls said Gov. William M. Tuck has given the sanatorium the go ahead, and plans are being drawn by the architectural firm of Brown, Wells & Meagher in Roanoke and Joseph H. Saunders, Alexandria.

Mr. Messler

Mr. Messler had been suffering from a heart condition since November, 1948.

Mr. Messler came here eight years ago as the Government sales representative of the Commerce Clearing House, a Detroit looseleaf law publishing company with which he had been employed for 15 years.

Six years later, he took a job as a salesman with Horner & Co., investment brokers here, and for the past year he had been associated with the St. Paul Institute of Nursing with offices at 19th and M sts. nw. He was born and educated in the Chicago area.

His only survivor is his wife, Mrs. Blanche Reid Messler, with whom he lived at 3726 Connecticut ave. nw.

Richard Duffy

New York March 5 (AP).—Richard Duffy, 75, former magazine editor, died today.

As editor of Ainslee's magazine from 1898 to 1904, Duffy helped to introduce the works of O. Henry, Theodore Dreiser, Joseph C. Lincoln and other authors who became widely known.

Duffy was the author of novels, plays, short stories and essays. He translated many foreign writings for publication in English.

Duffy joined the staff of the Literary Digest in 1913. He became its foreign editor in 1917 and served in that capacity until the magazine ceased publication after the 1936 Presidential election.

He was a free lance writer and translator with the Funk & Wagnalls Co. at the time of his death.

Kefauver Outlines 'Sickness' of South

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said in a talk last night that the races of the South would have benefitted more if enforcement of moral rights had not been proposed by legislative fiat.

Speaking at the twenty-third annual banquet and alumni reunion of the George Washington University Medical Society at the Mayflower Hotel, Kefauver said: "There are sound reasons why Congress should not disturb our progress in the matter of interracial relations. I think we stand a good chance of settling this political issue for a long time to come on the merits of the case.

More than 500 persons heard Kefauver outline the "sickness" of the South. "We must somehow solve our education program and we must see to it that our people have proper medical care. There are too few teachers and doctors in the South," he added.

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, pathologist for Doctors' Hospital and Sibley Memorial Hosptial, was given the society's annual award for scientific accomplishment and service to the community.

The award, a scroll and a check for $100, was presented by Dr. Roger M. Choisser, professor of pathology at George Washington University Medical School and chairman of the society's committee on awards.

Dr. Hunter lives at 1 E. Bradley la., Chevy Chase, Md. He is a past president of the medical society and a member of the Southern Medical Association.

Casanova

Ribald Mouse Aids Fight on VD Ignorance

Venereal disease control officers here have latched on to a new character to carry their message to the men.

He is Casanova, the Mouse, creation of a Fairlington, Va., commercial artist.

The red-coated rodent was designed as a happy medium between "scare" approaches, which delayed reporting infections, and rapid-treatment's "now-my-worries-are-over" attitudes of wartime VD campaigns, said Casanova's creator, Will Anderson, of 4619 S. 31st rd., Arlington.

"It seemed to me that only an animal character could get the message across compellingly, and without offense," Anderson explained. "And Casanova was born."

Already Casanova has justified his creator's faith. The armed forces have ordered and received 100,000 copies of the VD booklet. Other orders are being processed, including one for 5000 copies for the District Health Department.

Anderson's 28-page, comic-type booklet carries the cartoon character alluringly through his quest for a "piece of cheese," and through the grim consequences that follow.

Casanova has sex appeal; and sex appeals to Casanova.

"When not in the kitchen
His mind would be there
Dreaming of cheese
So lovely—so fair."

Casanova, with "cheese" so available, could not resist. What he couldn't tell, brings the moral: what happened to him shouldn't happen to a mouse, or a man.

Says Cas, who learned the hard way:
"Now all Casanovas take warning by me,
Be careful of trouble when out on a spree
When you see something tempting,
Ask while you can,
Do I rush in blindly like a mouse
Or use my bean like a man?"

The rhyme as well as the cartoon art is Anderson's.

The creator has been an advertising idea man as well as an artist since he entered the profession in

New York in 1934. He did cartoons and caricatures for the New York newspapers' Sunday drama sections, covering plays on Broadway for three seasons before entering the Navy.

When he took off his uniform in February, 1946, he went into business for himself.

Germans Open Small Scale Atom Project

Heidelberg, Germany, March 5 (U.P.).—Germany, which lost the race with the United States and Britain to create the first atomic bomb, is back in the atom business again, on a small and peaceful scale.

Germany's senior nuclear physicist, Walter Bothe, a professor at Heidelberg University, said American officials have approved the use of the Heidelberg cyclotron for peaceful research in atomic energy.

Bothe said Allied scientists testified it would take Germany at least 100,000 years to produce a single atomic bomb with its 12-million-volt cyclotron here.

Bothe, 58, whose wife was born in Russia, said Heidelberg is the only German university to have an operating cyclotron. He works with five assistants to produce radioactive isotopes for medical use.

Ungraded Reading Start Advocated

An ungraded school system was recommended yesterday as an aid toward developing a better program for teaching the majority of school children to read properly.

The recommendation was made by Dr. William Kottmeyer, Superintendent of Instruction and Director of the Reading Clinic in St. Louis, Mo., who spoke to some 800 Greater Washington school teachers at a regional institute of the National Association of Remedial Reading Teachers. Sponsored by George Washington University, the Institute was held at Lisner Auditorium.

3 Grades Combined

Numerous cities throughout the country have already taken steps toward elimination of the grade system by combining the first three grades of school into a "primary group," he said in a conference after his address. He cited as an example his own city of St. Louis, where three schools have adopted the ungraded system for the first three grades.

"A Nation-wide acceptance of an ungraded school system is not likely to occur, however, within the next 40 or 50 years. There are too many parents opposing it," he added.

An ungraded school system for Washington has not been proposed nor discussed by the District's Board of Education up to this time, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, said when asked for comment later.

Fundamental Skills First

In recommending the ungraded system, Dr. Kottmeyer explained that it would better enable the teacher to meet the individual needs of her students.

"Under this system, the child will not be required to master more complex skills until he has mastered the fundamental skills. In reading, one of the most important of fundamental skills, is the independence of word recognition," he said.

In addition, the teacher would not be required to cover a certain amount of work within a limited time, but instead would move ahead with the children as they are ready to progress, he said.

He scored teachers in intermediate and secondary grades who throw up their hands when they find a pupil who is not able to learn and blame it all on his lack of proper training in how to read in the primary grades.

Had Better Learn, He Says

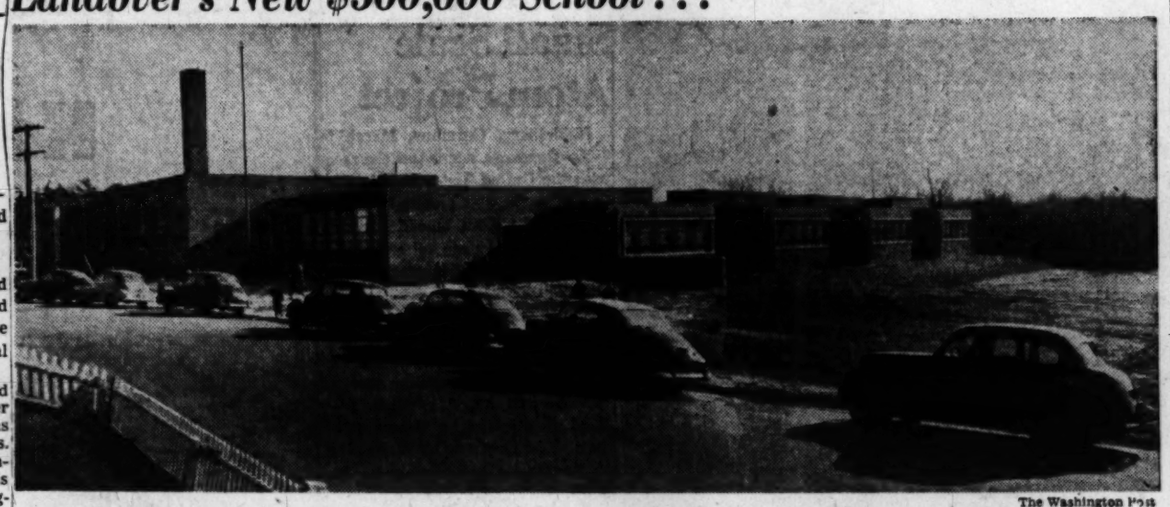
"These teachers must recognize that there will be a need to teach some of their pupils word recognition and if they don't know how to do it, they had better learn how," he declared.

Dr. Kottmeyer emphasized the important part parents play in preparing their children for the first years of school.

"A child who speaks like an adult and does not use baby talk, and a child who has some experiences, such as trips to the zoo, will learn to read much more rapidly than the child whose experiences have been limited. Parents must be educated to recognize how important are the first five formative years of a child's life," he said.

His address was followed by group discussions and then luncheon at the Roger Smith Hotel, where Miss Mary Gould Davis, Children's Editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, recounted some of her experiences with children and their relation to books.

Landover's New $500,000 School . . .



The Washington Post

DEDICATION TODAY—The new Landover Hills (Md.) Elementary School, erected at a cost of more than $500,000, will be dedicated at 4 p. m. today. Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, president of the Maryland State Teachers College, and G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of Prince Georges County schools, will speak. The school will be officially turned over to its principal, Miss Elizabeth Lynch. The building contains nine classrooms, a library, cafeteria and combination auditorium-gymnasium. About 350 children are enrolled. Also participating in the dedication will be various Landover Hills organizations. An American flag will be presented by the American Legion post and the Landover Women's Club will present a Maryland flag

Humphrey Opens Library's Minnesota Exhibit

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) formally opened the Minnesota Territory centennial exhibit at the Library of Congress yesterday afternoon with an address on the State.

He traced the history of Minnesota, "eleventh in size among the States," from pioneer days to the present and described "its contributions to a liberal, democratic society."

Humphrey said the seal of the Territory of Minnesota showed a pioneer with his hand on the plow, gazing toward the setting sun, with the motto, "I wish to look forward."

"We have the duty," Humphrey said, "not only to honor the founders, but to pass on their faith and fire, to look forward as they did."

A luncheon for Minnesota members of Congress and other distinguished Minnesotans in the Capital was given by Librarian of Congress Luther Evans preceding the Senator's address in Coolidge auditorium.

The exhibit will continue until June 15.

Bryson Rash Heads Cancer Public Relations

Kaufman, Kaufman Advertising Agency; Raoul Blumberg, promotion director, The Washington Post; Herbert McMurray, Washington Gas Light Co.; Clarence Arata, District Board of Trade and Frank LaFalce, Warner Brothers Theaters.

Navy Action Protested By Guam Assembly

Guam, March 5 (U.P.).—The Guam Assembly walked out in protest today against what it said was an attempt by the United States Navy to curtail its legislative authority.

The walkout occurred after the Navy government refused to permit contempt warrants to be served on a civil service employe charged with refusing to answer questions of a congressional committee. Assemblyman Carlos Taitano said the Assembly would remain in adjournment until the United States Congress acts on a bill to give Guam organic and civil government.

Interracial Athletics To Be Topic of Talk

On Thursday at 10 a. m., the board will hear charges against Samuel L. Davis, trading as the Buckeye Steak House, 1759 Columbia rd. nw., of sale to an intoxicated person and of permitting use of the premises for unlawful purposes. Davis has a Class D license.

Cuban Reds See 3d War

Havana, Cuba, March 5 (U.P.).—Warning that the danger of a third world war is now "greater than ever since the surrender of Germany and Japan," the Cuban Communist Party executive committee charged today that "Yankee imperialists are redoubling their provocations and efforts to plunge humanity into the bloody and destructive hell of war."

All Electric Kitchen
Now!

A TIME, step and work-saving kitchen—that's what you want! So, simply plan it that way! You don't need to buy all the items at once. You're probably enjoying the advantages of an Electric Refrigerator already. Start, let's say, by adding a quick, clean, thrifty, dial-set Electric Range. (And install it close to your dining room door!) A little later you'll want to add a hygienic Garbage Disposer and an Electric Dishwasher that does dishes in jig-time. Eventually you'll want to put in that big savings-booster — a Home Freezer that will enable you to make substantial economies in food purchases.

Plan to acquire your electric kitchen servants one by one. Before you know it you, too, will be enjoying the conveniences of an ALL-ELECTRIC Kitchen. Remember, in Washington you enjoy one of the lowest residential electric rates in the nation so it's smart to go Electric!

"Folks, let Pepco give you free professional kitchen planning help. Dial National 8800 and ask for Home Service Bureau. Make an appointment with our Kitchen Planning expert now!"

'Quizdown' Is Won By Oakton School

The Washington Post

Playing on their home ground, quizters of the Oakton, Va., Elementary School were victors over the Fairfax, Va., Elementary School team on yesterday's "Quizdown" by a score of 825 to 625.

The half hour weekly quiz contest, sponsored by The Washington Post and broadcast over WTOP, drew some 400 parents and other loyal supporters to the Oakton School Auditorium.

The Oakton team, which led all the way with a margin small enough to be exciting, was considerably bolstered by the perfect scores made by two of its members. A Fairfax man also came through with perfect answers.

One of the top experts was Dawn Pineo, 11-year-old sixth grader and the only girl on the Oakton team. Belying her nickname, "Pinhead," she justified her opening declaration to Quizmaster Vern Hansen that she thought girls were just as smart as boys.

Dawn, who lives in Oakton, quickly named Boston Mass. and Portland, Me., as the two chief New England seaports. On her second round, her reply stopped Hansen's question short.

"The man whose great book told about the Far East," he began, whereupon Dawn came up with "Marco Polo," before he had a chance to offer her alternate choices of De Soto and John Cabot.

The 100 percenter on the Fairfax team was Michael Black, 9-year-old fourth grader of Route 3, Fairfax. "Mike" knew that Lewis and Clark were the explorers whom Jefferson sent to the Northwest Territory, and that Alaska came to the United States by purchase.

Ten-year-old Melvin Crosen, a fifth grader who lives in Vienna, Va., was the other top honor man for the winning Oakton team. "Pete" had no trouble recalling that the Statue of Liberty's torch is in her right hand, and that the country which is famous for tulips is Holland.

Other members of the Oakton team were Barry ("Red") Clark, 10, grade 4, Route 2, Fairfax; Lewis ("Lou") Leigh, 10, 5, Fairfax; Wilburn Moore, 11, 6, Merrifield, Va., and Ian ("Ruler") Rule, 8, 4, Route 2, Fairfax.

Other participants for Fairfax were John Clarke ("Butch" or "Buttons") Booth, 9, grade 4, Route 1, Fairfax; Albert Schneider, 10, 5, Route 3, Fairfax; Ralph ("Mutt") Boswell, 11, 6, Route 3, Fairfax; Timothy ("Tim") Elliott, 10, 5, Burke, Va., and Sara Eileen Dawson, 11, 6, Route 1, Fairfax.

Iowa Boy Drowns As 1000 Flee Floods

Chicago, March 5 (U.P.).—Floods today forced more than 1000 Iowa residents from their homes, invaded Illinois and Wisconsin towns, and menaced Missouri River valley lowlands.

One person, a 10-year-old boy, was drowned in the Iowa floods.

In western Iowa, the Boyer River kicked through the levee protecting the town of Missouri Valley. Water covered one-fourth of the town and more than 1000 persons took refuge in churches and hotels. All but one road into the town was closed.

The Galena River suddenly swelled at Galena, Ill., spreading water through the streets. The flash flood stopped work on a three million dollar flood control project on the river.

The Pecatonica River in southwestern Wisconsin was more than four and one-half feet over flood level and seeped into the business district of Darlington, Wis. Shopkeepers were moving their merchandise and closing their stores. All train traffic in the area was halted.

The official river observer at Kansas City warned residents along the lowlands of the Missouri River to get out. The ice, which has jammed the river, is starting to move, he said, and a sudden break would flood the shores from Leavenworth, Kans., to near St. Joseph, Mo.

At Library

Talk Slated Monday on Air Power

J. Carlton Ward, jr., aviation authority, will speak on "The Economic Consequences of Air Power" in the Coolidge Auditorium, Library of Congress, at 8:30 p. m. Monday.

The address is sponsored jointly by the Library and the National Air Council as one of a series to further public understanding of the effect of aviation on contemporary life.

Ward, as chairman of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., is responsible for prosecution of the Fairchild-NEPA (nuclear energy for propulsion of aircraft) Project at Oak Ridge, a joint project of the Air Force and Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

In his address he is expected to comment on atomic energy and its effect on the future of aviation.

In addition to being chairman of the Fairchild Corp., Ward for the past four years has been a member of the aviation and business committees of the National Planning Association, and was a recent member of the Hoover Commission.

Wildlife Conference Opens Monday

More than 1000 soil conservationists, foresters, game and fishery technicians and administrators are expected at the North American Wildlife Conference which opens Monday at the Statler Hotel.

Among those who will address the 3-day sessions on all phases of natural resources management, are: Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer and author. The Wildlife Management Institute sponsors the annual conference.

Other conventions scheduled for this week are:

Construction Industry Advisory Council, whose 100 delegates will discuss building codes, investment needs, and war mobilization of the industry. The group will hold closed sessions at the Statler Hotel Wednesday and Thursday.

The Eastern Conference of Radiologists which will meet Friday and Saturday at the Statler Hotel. About 300 scientists will discuss use of radioactive isotopes against cancer, among other topics.

Home Accident Deaths Reach 10 in Week

1949 deaths to date	37
1948 deaths for same period	50
1949 injuries to date	1032
1948 injuries for same period	882

The number of deaths resulting from home accidents jumped sharply last week, with the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reporting 10 fatalities.

Six adults died as the result of injuries suffered in falls and four infants suffocated in bed. A total of 114 persons were injured seriously enough in the home to require hospital treatment.

Children suffered most of the misfortunes during the week. They ate rat poison and dye, drank kerosene, camphorated oil and disinfectants. They were bitten by dogs, cats and rabbits. A 4-year-old burned her tongue tasting a strong chemical, while a 4-year-old suffered burns when diluted Lysol was accidentally thrown in his face.

A youngster's leg was broken while wrestling with a playmate and a brother accidentally broke his sister's arm in two places by bending it. A 2-month-old baby was burned when the stopper of a hot-water bottle placed on his stomach was dislodged.

A breakdown of all injury causes showed 45 falls, 17 burns, 10 foreign bodies in the eyes, nose, throat and stomach; 15 cuts, 6 accidental poisonings, 1 bruise and 20 unclassified.

'Disturbance' Quelled On Canadian Destroyer

Esquimalt, B. C., March 5 (U.P.).—Naval officials reported tonight that crew members aboard the Canadian destroyer Athabaskan had created "a disturbance" because of dissatisfaction with currency exchange restrictions aboard ship.

As result a number of petty officers were disciplined, it was announced.

Colleges Urged To Plan Ahead

Roanoke, Va., March 5 (AP).—Two top educational authorities this morning warned that colleges and universities are shortly going to be faced with greatly increased enrollments and no way to finance themselves.

Speaking to the association of Virginia colleges here at Hotel Roanoke, population expert Dr. Lorin A. Thompson said "if colleges don't plan the load they will go through the strains of the late forties all over again in the sixties—only they'll last longer.

Earlier, a U. S. bureau of education official, Dr. John Dale Russell, told the meeting of Virginia educational leaders that "we cannot continue to finance higher education by throwing the load back on the faculty" He quoted the President's commission on higher education as suggesting use of federal funds for college support.

FRESH BLOOD A MUST FOR FREE ENERGY

Do you feel like you are tied to a drag everytime you try to do something? If so, don't let a low blood count hold you down when you may release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Zoo Director Turns Evolution Around

Munich, Germany, March 5 (U.P.).—Heinrich Heck, Munich zoo director, said today he could produce a living "missing link" if he tried.

After 25 years of cross-breeding experiments in evolution in reverse, Heck says he has turned out animals that have been extinct for more than 300 years.

He believes the process could be carried back to create prehistoric creatures.

"A living example of the missing link could be produced if we wanted to do it," he said.

To prove his theories, he pointed to a small group of aurochs, the ancestor of the common milk cow. They disappeared from the earth about 1627. Proof the original species has been recreated lies in the fact all its calves have the characteristics of their wild forefathers, he said.

Heck also pointed to his herd of Tarpan, which the books describe as a long-extinct wild forest horse of Russia. They are putty-colored, stub-tailed and short-maned. They correspond to old etchings and written descriptions of the breed.

Heck said it is easier to breed back to the original form of an animal than to create a new strain.

At Uline Arena
Shriners Open Circus March 28

THE GREAT ATHOS
"Stands" on his finger

Washington Shriners yesterday announced that their Eighth Annual Circus was sealed and ready for delivery to Uline Arena, where it will run from March 28 through April 3.

General Chairman Julius B. Gay said the Hamid-Morton Co., Shriners' booking agents, is readying 38 acts for this year's show.

One of the innovations will be the Great Athos, a Swedish artist whose art consists in his balancing his 145 pounds on his right forefinger.

Another novelty will be a simultaneous barrage laid down by two cannon placed at opposite ends of the Arena with two pretty girls as ammunition, passing each other in midair.

Tickets for the 13 performances are on sale at Almas Temple, 1315 K st., nw.; Lubar's 13th and G sts., nw.; and at Unline Arena, 3d and M sts., nw. Ticket prices range from $1.20 to $3.

Britain to Retain Labor Party in '50, Sarnoff Believes

New York, March 5 (AP).—Responsible British leaders look for the Labor Party to be retained in power next year, David Sarnoff, board chairman of the Radio Corporation of America, said today after a six-week business trip abroad.

Sarnoff, after a private interview with European government leaders and businessmen, said conditions in England, France and Italy are "visibly better than they were a year ago," and the same is reportedly true of the other countries aided by the Marshall Plan."

He added he did not forsee a major economic recession in this country and that "we should have a fairly good year in 1949."

Dr. John C. Palmer Again Honored By Scottish Rite

The Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, 1748 Euclid st. nw., has been re-elected almoner of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry of the Valley of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Palmer

As almoner, Dr. Palmer, who is 80 years of age, disburses a $10,000 fund yearly to charities outside of Masonry. He is pastor emeritus of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Palmer is also grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge F. A. A. M. for the District; grand prelate of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar; grand chaplain of the Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and grand chaplain of the Grand Council, Royal and Select Masters.

Richard E. Titlow, of Alta Vista, Md., was chosen as orator.

Polish Bureau Closed

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 5 (AP).—Yugoslavia shut Polish information service headquarters in Belgrade today. The action came as new testimony of increasing strain between the Tito government and cominform countries.

Expecting a Baby?

Mother's Friend massaging preparation helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exquisitely prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is an application for massaging the body during pregnancy... it helps keep the skin soft and pliable... thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and tightness. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin... for the tired back muscles or cramp-like pains in the legs. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use. Highly praised by users, many doctors and nurses. Millions of bottles sold. Just ask any druggist for Mother's Friend—the skin emollient and lubricant. Do try it.

Boy, 5, Discarded by Mother, Flies From Australia to Father

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

VETERAN AND SON REUNITED—Trennon Joiner, Cleveland Negro Navy veteran, joyfully lifts up his son, Goeffrey, 5, at Cleveland Airport, where the boy arrived yesterday from Australia. The boy's white mother had put him in a children's home in Sydney. A wealthy Australian arranged for the child's release and trip to America after learning of the boy's loneliness and the father's desire to have him

Cleveland, March 5 (AP)—Five-year-old Geoffrey Joiner was reunited with his Navy veteran father at Cleveland Airport today after a flight from Sydney, Australia.

The child, son of a Negro father and white Australian mother, appeared nervous as he stepped off the plane.

The father, Trennon Joiner, gathered the child up in his arms and tried to reassure him that he was home at last. The boy was bashful, but it was obvious from his smiles he was happy.

Immigration authorities stopped the child at the West Coast yesterday because he lacked proper entrance papers. Last night the Justice department placed him in custody of the Travelers' Aid Society and he continued his trip here.

Joiner was in the Navy when Geoffrey's mother placed him in a children's home and gave up all claims to him.

It will be necessary for Joiner to file adoption papers because the boy is on a visitor's visa, immigration authorities said.

Reds' Quisling Chorus a Grim Reminder to West

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

THE Communist Party leaders of western Europe and the United States did a helpful thing last week. They reminded the western world that it must do more than defend itself against assault from the outside; it must also find some way to protect itself against sabotage, subversion and attack from within.

One by one, in obedience to the Kremlin's orders, the chief Communists of France, Italy, Britain and the United States issued statements avowing publicly that they would fight against their own countries in case of a war with the Soviet Union.

The reminder could not have been more timely for the west. Since last July the North Atlantic governments have been trying to work out a treaty of mutual defense to ward off an old-fashioned invasion from the East. Norway, which joined the discussions Friday, did so with her mind largely on the possibility of a direct attack across her 122 miles of common frontier with the Soviet Union.

But there has been little thought of indirect aggression. The coordinated warnings of the Communist leaders, more brazen and more candid than anything of the kind since Hitler published his blueprint of aggression in "Mein Kampf," may lead western diplomats to think once more of indirect attack and how to forestall it.

The Kremlin's Strategy

NATURALLY the Kremlin did not order these statements out of a desire to be helpful. The Soviet Union has been doing everything possible to undermine the coming North Atlantic treaty and, even more, the American military help to Europe which will be predicated upon it.

What better way of undermining the treaty than to create the impression that western Europe cannot be defended? What better way of creating doubts and fears than to suggest that American arms for Europe would fall into Communist hands, as they did in China?

For although communism has been losing ground in western Europe, about a third of the voting population in France and Italy remains Communist. In both countries the Communists came within a shade of paralyzing the existing governments in the past year—in Italy when Palmiro Togliatti, the Communist leader, was almost killed by an assassin last July; in France at the time of the great coal strike last November.

In Italy the Communists still have an undetermined quantity of weapons, originally provided by the Allies to help the Partisans fight Fascists and Nazis in the last two years of the war. In France, for all the setbacks communism has had, it still remains powerful, and showed only last week that it had infiltrated into the armed forces.

Perhaps, the Kremlin reasoned, American Senators and Representatives might be less willing to supply armaments to Europe if they thought the Communist third-of-a-nation in France and Italy might yet seize control.

Henlein Was a Pioneer

THE RESPONSE probably will be just the opposite. By stripping away every pretense that Communist leaders can be loyal citizens, the Soviet tacticians have embarrassed the fellow-travelers in France and Italy, and have put both governments on guard.

Although indirect aggression is a relatively new expression, it is not a new experience for Europe. Eleven years ago this very week the German-speaking people of the Sudetenland, then a part of Czechoslovakia, were giving a rapturous welcome to a tall young gymnasium instructor named Konrad Henlein.

Henlein was a perfect practitioner of indirect aggression. Although he pictured himself as a loyal citizen of the Czechoslovak Republic, he had been secretly on the payroll of the German Nazi party since 1935. His aim was to make the Sudetenland either independent or a part of Germany. His party, claiming the right to use all the democratic processes but never scorning the use of violence, became the second biggest in the Czechoslovak Parliament.

Germany's indirect aggression against Czechoslovakia, using Henlein and his party as its instrument, undermined the republic of Benes and Masaryk even before Munich gave it its death blow.

Counterpart in Austria

THE CROWDS that cheered Henlein in the Sudetenland in March, 1938, were celebrating the triumph of another case of indirect aggression in nearby Austria. Here an Austrian lawyer named Arthur Seyss-Inquart had been the instrument used to bring Austria under German control. Seyss-Inquart, too, professed to use whatever democratic weapons were still available in prewar Austria, but his party thugs did not hesitate to create terror with the help of German training, money and weapons.

Henlein killed himself shortly after he surrendered to General George Patton's Third Army in May, 1945. Seyss-Inquart was hanged at Nuernberg as a war criminal in October, 1946. Both men thus came to bad ends, yet both had succeeded in proving that indirect aggression was as deadly a threat as armed invasion from outside.

Probably neither Austria nor Czechoslovakia would have fallen under the swastika terror if the German army had not been massed along the frontiers, ready to march in. In each case invasion from the outside did the job, but subversion from the inside had prepared the ground.

The same was true of other examples of wartime—of Mussert and the Dutch Nazi agents who helped Hitler's parachutists in May, 1940; of Pierre Laval and his malodorous helpers who played the Nazi game in France; and of Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian who gave his name to the whole tribe of traitors acting as the advance guard of a foreign power.

A Postwar Litter

SINCE the war there have been many other examples, this time acting on behalf of Soviet Russia and driven by a fanaticism at least as intense as that of the Nazis. The assault on Greece can be described as indirect aggression, although in some respects it is a direct attack, complete except for a formal declaration of war. Communist control of Romania, Bulgaria, Poland and Czechoslovakia was achieved with the important help of native agents doing Russian bidding.

Even in France and Italy, which do not have a common border with the Soviet Union, indirect aggression has been practiced by Maurice Thorez and Togliatti, and has been frustrated only by the alertness of the two governments and the economic help they have received from the United States.

Thorez and Togliatti are far abler men than Henlein and Seyss-Inquart and the rest of the prewar and wartime traitors, but they probably are at least as ruthless. They believe in the infallibility of Russia just as fervently as the Nazis in all countries believed in Hitler, right or wrong. We are entitled to assume that they can use the instrument of indirect aggression at least as effectively as the Nazis did, whenever the Kremlin gives the word.

Great Pacts Silent

THE western world has never known quite how to handle this problem. In the prewar days the League of Nations paid little attention to it. By 1938 the League, then a dying organization, was more intent

Driver's Seat Chafes Senate GOP

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

FOR ALL practical purposes, a minority of 42 Republican Senators now has control of the Senate, without any of the responsibilities of leadership.

What started out as a gag, when the Republicans turned the tables on a minor issue the first week Congress was back, last week became an accepted political fact.

Not how the 54 Democrats will vote, but where those 42 Republican Senators will land, has swayed if not determined every Senate Democratic leadership decision to date. In fact, the party-splitting Senate rules fight, and the Southern filibuster to save filibusters now stalemating the whole Truman program, were of GOP, not Democratic, origin.

Democratic leaders were needled by Republicans to pass it, defeat it, or even lay it aside. In a word, since last Monday Republicans have held the ball.

But now that Republicans have actual if not nominal control, they don't know what to do with it. The responsibilities of leading the doomed Eightieth Congress were never more agonizing than the temptations that now face the Republican minority.

By simply voting with the Southerners to override an expected ruling by Vice President Barkley this week, they can insure indefinite continuation of the filibuster. Truman bills like rent control, reciprocal trade, labor, housing and even ECA would be shoved far behind schedule if not actually squeezed off the legislative slate.

To deal that crippling blow, not all but only about half of the Senate Republicans would have to vote with Southern Democrats on a parliamentary point technically not associated with the Truman program at all.

Senate Republicans would simply say they voted to sustain a ruling by a leader of their own party last August. At that time, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), ruled that debate can't be closed on a motion to call up a bill.

Most Senators who take that position are quite sincere about it. You have to be a member of the club, or close to it, to know how the Senate feels about its rules. It is even more jealous of its "precedents." Barkley would be upsetting the "precedents."

Many a vote against Barkley, therefore, would be without any "political" motivation at all, but try to prove it!

If Republican Senators are losing a lot of sleep, it's because their dilemma is threehorned. Some of them are asking these questions:

How could they ever convince the country, which doesn't know a thing about those rules and much less about Senate precedents, that they weren't striking politically at the whole Truman legislative slate, including civil rights?

Woudn't it be difficult to explain the fine technical difference between supporting a Senate "precedent" and supporting the filibuster itself?

The Senate Republican Policy Committee is already on record against filibusters. In fact, it indorsed the new two-thirds Senate cloture resolution that brought on the Southern talkathon. It made no secret about the fact that it wanted the rules changed to clear the way for the civil rights program.

But when the same GOP policy group met last week to consider what to do if Barkley makes the present cloture rule effective, they divided. They finally decided it wasn't a party question and told Republicans to vote as they pleased.

Democratic leaders, completely at the mercy of how those GOP votes fall, aren't too disconcerted about it. They count on a lot of Republican second thinking—enough, in fact, to break the filibuster.

Democratic Atavism

NO AMOUNT of second guessing, however, will repair the damage already done to the Truman program by the splintering rules fight.

Southern Democrats, some of whom returned from the elections in sackcloth, are no longer seeking forgiveness. With two or three exceptions, they are talking now much as they did before the party did its split at Philadelphia.

* * * *

Alben's On His Own

VICE PRESIDENT ALBEN BARKLEY hasn't let on to a soul how he will rule on that crucial cloture test.

The one other man who ought to know doesn't. Senate Parliamentarian Charles L. Watkins, a walking encyclopedia on the precedents of the Senate, hasn't been consulted.

Which is probably the best tip-off that Barkley will set a precedent of his own, rule the cloture petition in order.

One Unscathed Poll

IF SPEAKER SAM RAYBURN and House Leader John McCormack seem to know what the House will do before it does it, Percy Priest has been around.

Percy Priest would revive your faith in polls. Given half a day, he can tell the leadership how just about every Democrat in the House will vote on any given bill.

As third man on the House leadership ladder, Priest is House Majority Whip, a party title that has always mystified the public.

Actually, a "whip" isn't a rawhide larrup at all but the eyes and ears of the leadership. The bantamweight Tennessean, who started life as a one-room school teacher, is the head of a 15-zone Democratic whip organization tested over the years.

It isn't exactly wired for sound, but when Priest, and his chief assistant, Montana's Mike Mansfield, hop to the phones you can expect almost anything to turn up, from a quorum on the floor to a majority on an important bill.

Under them are 15 party zone whips, representing every section of the country, who keep in direct contact with every Democrat in the House. When Rayburn or McCormack want a quick bill poll, Priest calls the zone leaders, these poll their State delegations, and a few hours later the leadership knows what to do.

The whip checks turn up more than a "Yes" and "No" vote. Some of the polls turn up a third answer—a description of the type of amendment needed to get a bill through the House.

Priest has to "estimated" how the Republicans will vote, but he comes up with some surprising good guesses. Only once did he hit it right on the nose, but that set a House record and confirmed the value of the whip machine.

It was three years ago, during the historic British loan fight. Priest was only a zone leader then. Leaders teamed him with Oklahoma's Mike Monroney, another zone whip, to make the canvass. They predicted the British loan would pass the House with 66 votes to spare. It passed by exactly that margin.

The Priest-Mansfield combination is only just warming up for the present session but already they've come up with some clairvoyant counts.

They clocked Democrats within six votes of the actual House ballot on reciprocal trade and came within 10 votes of the final TVA steam plant count.

You see, Percy Priest got tired of teaching that one-room Tennessee school, but it never entered his head to sample for Gallup. Fact is, Mr. President, he wrote a newspaper column before coming to Congress.

Unsuccessful Diversion

THE veterans' pension "heat" has spread to the Senate, and this is a story of how one Senator tried—and failed—to get off the griddle.

When Ancil Morton, Indiana VFW State commander, led a delegation to the office of Indiana's Homer Capehart, the Senator opened a diversionary attack.

What, he asked, about the State bonus voted in the last election? Had Democratic Gov. Henry F. Schricker paid it?

Well, why hadn't he? The Indiana voters voted it, didn't they? Well, what was the matter with the Governor?

But finally Morton got in a question—the question he came to ask. Where did the Senator stand on the veterans' pension bill?

"I haven't studied it," replied Capehart.

The interview was over.

Hunger, Not Reds, Is Shanghai's Ogre

By Hessell Tiltman
Chief Far Eastern Correspondent, London Daily Mail

SHANGHAI, March 5.—Shanghai, city of crises, is heading into another period of civic stress.

In American and British business circles in this commercial metropolis of the Orient, the most immediate worry isn't the prospect of the Chinese Communists taking over Shanghai. The best informed observers here do not expect that to happen for some months. The pressing fear is that serious economic trouble may arrive ahead of the Communist legions.

In turbulent Shanghai, its population swollen from two millions in 1937 to five millions today and those millions living from hand to mouth, continuance of law and order depends on food to fill its rice bowls, oil for its lamps and powerhouses, and raw cotton for the local textile mills which keep a substantial number of its people employed.

Today those barometers of Shanghai's economic well-being all point to stormy days ahead unless American economic aid to China through the Economic Cooperation Administration continues beyond the end of March, when the present program ends.

A few statistics gathered in authoritative foreign and Chinese quarters here tell the tale.

One Month's Supply

FIRST, food. Shanghai needs 40,000 tons of rice and flour monthly to provide the present basic ration for its people. The city's over-all monthly civilian consumption of basic grains amounts to 80,000 tons, exclusive of military requirements to feed the 200,000 Nationalist troops in the Shanghai area.

Present stocks of rice and flour are estimated at around 40,000 tons, equivalent to one month's rationed consumption.

Last month, according to ECA officials here, American aid foodstuffs released to feed Shanghai amounted to the equivalent of 75 per cent of the basic ration. For March, according to reliable unofficial quarters, the basic grains forthcoming from Chinese sources are not expected to exceed 15,000 tons, or around one third of the quantity needed to meet the basic ration.

From April onward through the "deficit" months of summer, local observers feel that the city authorities will be doing well if they obtain 12,000 tons of rice monthly from Chinese sources. Which means Shanghai must either obtain from abroad almost three quarters of the basic grains needed to maintain the present ration, or slash rations.

There is virtually no hope that inflation-ridden Nationalist China, whose currency has declined to one 100,000th of its value in the past three years, could secure the foreign exchange necessary to finance large rice imports in the critical months ahead—even were the rice available. Shanghailanders therefore fear that if American aid food shipments are not extended beyond March 31, it will mean spreading unrest, rioting and starvation.

Vital Fuel Oil Low

SHANGHAI'S second economic headache is oil. The city's stocks of all oils, including kerosene and Diesel oil, amounted at last available count to 1,250,000 barrels. Shanghai consumes 600,000 barrels monthly.

The most important facet of the city's oil situation is fuel oil. Any interruption in fuel oil supplies would mean no light, no power, factories closed down, darkened streets and speedy chaos. Shanghai's fuel oil stocks at the end of February were sufficient for only four weeks' normal consumption, a level which local oilmen regard as "too low for comfort."

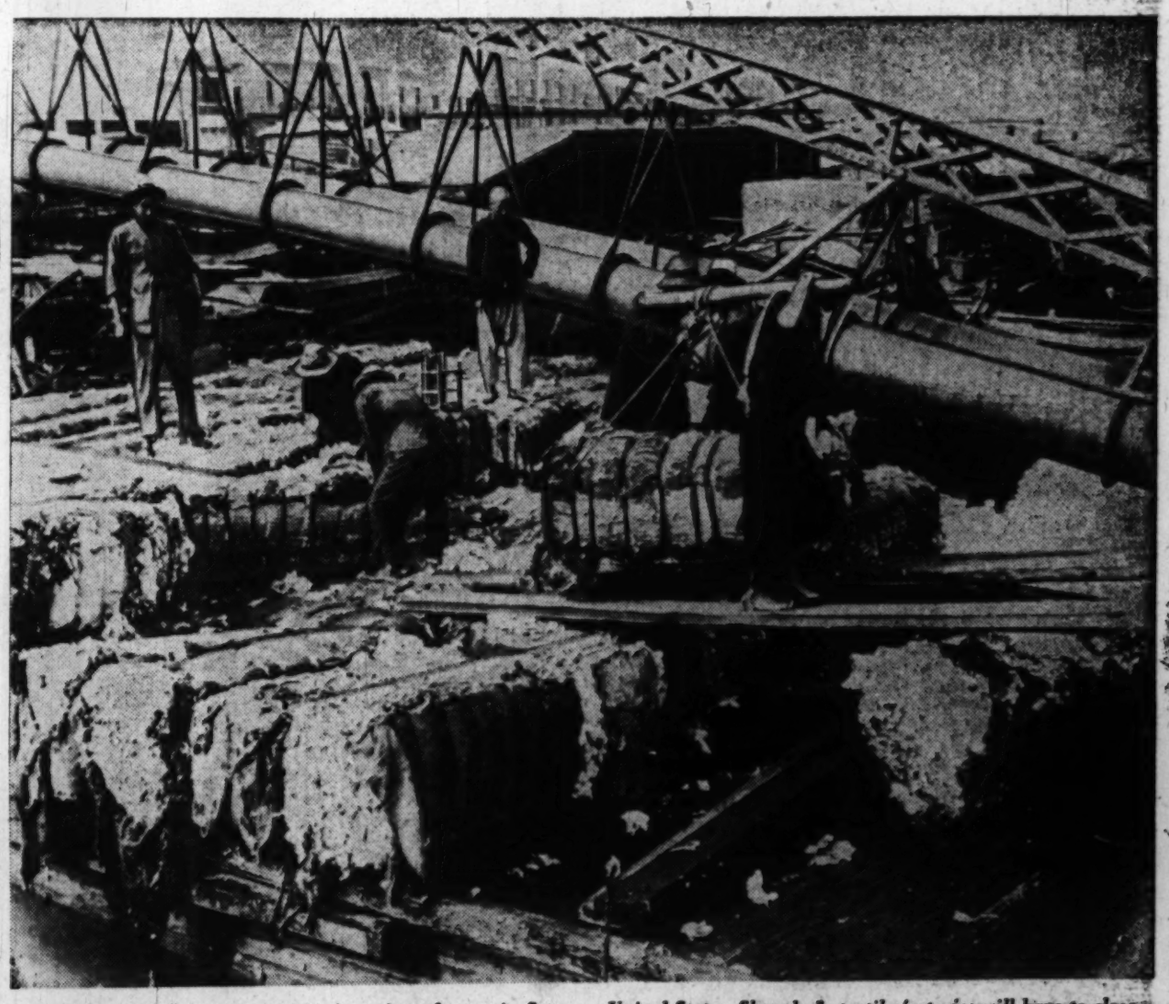
Next, raw cotton, needed to keep the textile mills going. One month ago Shanghai had around 350,000 bales of cotton, including 130,000 bales imported under the American aid program. This represented three months' normal consumption of Shanghai's mills, excluding the smaller cotton industries at Tsingtao, Canton and Taiwan.

On February 21 it was announced by ECA that, following Roger Lapham's visit to Washington, shipment would be resumed of a further 95,000 bales of ECA cotton which had been held up pending study of the China situation. These new shipments represent just under one month's consumption of Shanghai's mills.

The only other raw cotton immediately in sight is around 50,000 bales expected to reach Shanghai from abroad by the end of April. Its purchase will be financed by exports of textiles from this port. Thus the city has an assured supply of raw cotton sufficient for 3½ months' normal consumption from March 1.

Sources Cut Off

PROSPECTS of any substantial quantity of Chinese-grown cotton reaching Shanghai by summer, unless a peace is speedily concluded, are rated dim. One of China's major cotton-growing areas—the Yellow River Valley—is in Communist hands, and another—the Yangtze Valley—is cut off by dislocation of transportation owing to the civil war. If neither peace nor further American aid reaches Shanghai by early summer, the situation of the local cotton industry will be serious.



American aid cotton is carried ashore from barges in Soochow Creek, Shanghai. If the bales stop coming from the United States, Shanghai's textile factories will have to close, for the city's domestic sources of fiber have been cut off

U. S. Building Asia Rampart On Okinawa

By Russell Brines

Mr. Brines, Chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo, recently visited Okinawa and the Philippines.

TOKYO, March 5.—A handful of Americans on Okinawa—which is still littered with the debris of typhoon and battle—are trying to prepare an advance dike against any Communist tide that may flow from Asia.

Five major airfields on the tablelands and coastal plain have made Okinawa the keystone of America's foremost defense line in the Pacific.

The advance line sweeps up from the Philippines through Okinawa and Japan to Alaska. Behind it lie the airfields of Guam and the naval base at Hawaii. Clark Field, about 50 miles north of Manila, is being groomed as a major and self-contained base.

Okinawa is both the key and enigma of this aerial line of defense. It is in the center of the line—within 200 miles of the South China coast and within heavy bomber range of Siberia.

Set Back by Typhoon

BOUGHT with 72,000 American lives, Okinawa also has been claimed at various times by China, the Philippines and Japan. Until its status is settled definitely the question of United States funds to build it up properly is likely to remain confused.

Air Force officers are saying—as did ground force officers in the Philippines seven years ago—that they are trying to do too much with too little. The program was set back seven months by the disastrous typhoon of 1948. Planning has been handcuffed by uncertainty over funds.

At present Okinawa has only half the aerial and ground force strength necessary for offensive and defensive operations in a quick war. Much remains to be done to make it into a major base.

Americans also are conducting the quietest and least noticed of their world-wide operations. They are trying to revive the economy of 560,000 Okinawans and about 300,000 other natives in the rest of the Ryukyu Island chain.

War is only slowly leaving this rugged, 60-mile-long island.

Capital a City of Ruins

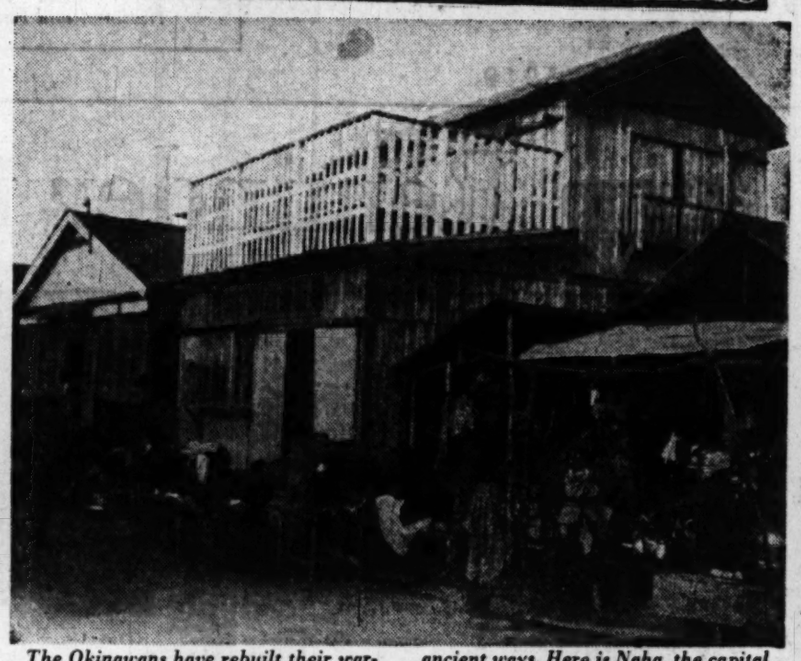
THE war dead now are gone home and much of the wreckage of tanks and guns has been removed, but Naha, the populous capital, is still a city of ruins. The rusting hulls of ships and lighter craft are still impaled on reefs, killed by wartime gunfire or the disastrous typhoons of 1945 and 1947.

There are 15,000 soldiers here and numerous civilian employes and their families. Most of them live in Quonset huts near the air fields or near the headquarters of the ground forces. At the end of the trans-Pacific supply line, they frequently find commissary articles limited.

Some all-weather housing units and barracks have been built, but uncertainty over funds has delayed the program. The buildings erected so far supply only a fraction of Okinawa's needs.

A sense of uncertainty and frustration is augmented by the constant threat of typhoons and the feeling that Washington cannot make up its mind about Okinawa's future.

But the work of enlarging and improving the air fields continues. Combat training goes on all the time, with a lot of eager young pilots. The island is under the Ryukyus command of the ground forces. The ground forces are commanded by Maj. Gen. W. W. Eagles.



The Okinawans have rebuilt their war-shattered villages and reverted to their ancient ways. Here is Naha, the capital, showing the open market stalls

The Philippine Scouts, who have made up most of the ground force, gradually are being withdrawn and probably will be succeeded by replacements from the United States.

Natives Are Docile

MILITARY authorities probably have had less trouble from the natives in Okinawa than anywhere else in the Pacific. The Okinawans, released from the long bondage of Japan, are a docile, ragged people.

About 73,000 of Okinawa's 110,000 families are farmers. They work their own small plots of sweet potatoes and rice.

Even so, from 35 to 50 per cent of the food must be imported by Americans. This cost 12 million dollars last year, according to Capt. John H. Sharpe, Swansea, S. C., military government commerce officer on Okinawa.

Plans are being made to rebuild small production and the fishing industry to make Okinawa more self-sufficient. There also are phosphate deposits.

But with at most only 20 per cent of its land arable, and with industry negligible, Okinawa's economic future is bleak.

Okinawans say they are just getting by on average wages of 245 yen a month, compared with 5300 yen a month in Japan.

They have rebuilt their crowded villages with no evidence that they resent the destruction of their homes by Americans. In time of war, say military officials, this complacency would be an asset.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

The Critics Have Changed, Not Truman

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

HAS President Truman changed? Is he more cocky? Has his humility given way to arrogance?

Some people, notably Southern Democrats in Congress, say that the answer is yes on all counts. They point to a number of recent happenings to back up their contention: Mr. Truman's "S. O. B." speech, his statement that he might "make another tour around the country to tell the people how their Government is getting on," and, most recently, his decision in favor of a showdown battle on the Senate rules—a battle designed to thwart those who would use the filibuster to block his civil rights program.

Mr. Truman's associates, men who see him day in and day out, insist that there has been no change in him. They suspect that the change really has taken place in the minds of those who think that they now see a "new Truman."

Reporters who cover the White House regularly say they detect some difference in the Chief Executive. They believe he is more sure of himself and perhaps more inclined to indulge in a fight. But they certainly wouldn't agree that he has become "arrogant."

Gen. George C. Marshall's size-up of the President as an extraordinary combination of "humility and boldness," still seems like a good appraisal to his intimates.

The Hair-Shirt Period

THE biggest change in Mr. Truman came in his first two years in the White House. In the beginning, he complained a great deal about the fate that had landed him in the Nation's highest office. He said he hadn't wanted the Presidency to begin with and he described the White House as a jail. His embarrassed associates called this his "hair-shirt talk."

Somewhere along the line—it was about the time that strikes and Russian expansion began to threaten the Nation—Mr. Truman changed his tune. He began to crack the whip of leadership and eventually he even admitted that he rather liked the White House.

He still conceded that he wasn't big enough for the Presidency, but he added that no man this side of heaven was big enough.

If Mr. Truman now seems confident, it is simply a matter of degree. Confidence and buoyancy of spirit he appears to have had always, even when his political stock was at rock bottom.

He Wouldn't Concede

A LITTLE more than a year ago, the Democratic Party was wallowing in an almost incredible slump. Veterans on Capitol Hill said privately that there was no possible chance to win with Mr. Truman: that the most they could hope for was a sizable Democratic minority in Congress.

Henry Wallace had bolted to form a third party and the Dixiecrat revolt in the South was rising.

About this time, former Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico, a close friend, called Mr. Truman on the telephone. He said he found him "exuberant"—determined to "fight through to the end" to whatever political fate awaited him.

At a White House news conference a day or so later, Mr. Truman told reporters that he was not disturbed by the revolt in the South. In reply to a question, he said that, yes, he still looked for a Democratic victory in November.

Not long thereafter, he said to a Young Democrats' gathering in the Mayflower: "There's going to be a Democrat in the White House in the next four years—and you're looking at him."

This was certainly a cocky statement. So was his statement at the Philadelphia convention: "Senator Barkley and I will win this election and make these Republicans like it . . . We will do that because they are wrong and we are right . . ."

A Good Winner

A LOT OF people, including leading Democrats, thought that Mr. Truman was simply talking for effect. They believed that he must have felt in his heart that he didn't have a chance. Actually, he was saying the same things in private conversation.

That is what his intimates mean now when they say that the real change has taken place in those who imagine that they see a different Harry S. Truman.

A White House official who sees the Chief Executive every day recalls something that happened on the morning of November 3. Mr. Truman called him on the telephone to say that Ohio and Illinois were in the Democratic bag and that, therefore, he was elected.

"Wonderful!" said the official.

"Just one word of caution," said Mr. Truman. "No gloating."

The official, talking the other day, recalled how well the country reacted to the President's victory. Many remarked at the time, he said, how well Truman behaved in triumph. The same thing was true, he noted, at the time of the inauguration, when Mr. Truman chose his old comrades of Battery D to escort him up the Avenue.

WHAT then has evoked the talk about a change in the President? The White House official said he first began to hear it after Mr. Truman, in defending Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, made the "S. O. B." speech at a reserve officers' dance in nearby Virginia. He remarked that, in his opinion, the speech did not denote anything new in the President's character.

He went on to say that Mr. Truman's speech at the Jefferson-Jackson Victory Dinner had been carefully thought out and parts of it rewritten seven or eight times. Behind it, he said, was a sincere desire on the President's part to let the American people know that the program he had offered them in the campaign, and which they had approved in electing him, was being opposed in Congress by the very forces he had denounced last autumn. He wanted the people to know, the official said, that he wasn't retreating.

Apropos Mr. Truman's statement that he might make another tour of the whistle stops, the official said that this was not a "threat." It was made, he said, in the spirit of "A word to the wise is sufficient." He thought it had been very effective on Capitol Hill.

As for the decision to have a showdown on the Senate filibuster threat, the President's associate said there could hardly be any other decision.

Mr. Truman, he pointed out, had stood by his civil rights program even when many thought that it would wreck whatever chance he had of being elected last November. Could anybody expect, he asked, that the President would fight on to this point only to surrender in the face of a filibuster?

'Strong Men' Can Curb Quislings

on safeguarding the "rights" of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia than on safeguarding Czechoslovak independence. The British and French, as all the world remembers, sought to satisfy Henlein rather than control him.

During the war, with these lessons relatively fresh in mind, the Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences still did nothing to recognize indirect aggression and to devise ways of dealing with it collectively.

The United Nations Charter provided ways of dealing with "disputes," or with "any situation which might lead to international friction," or with "breaches of the peace and acts of aggression." These might, of course, have included subversion and organized treason of the Thorez-Togliatti kind.

But it was clear that the Charter drafters thought primarily of pressure or attack from the outside. As one critic has said, "They were thinking more of the last war than of the next one"—and they did not seem to have learned the lessons of the last war thoroughly.

Recognized at Rio

THE first formal recognition of the problem did not come until the Rio Treaty of August, 1947, the mutual defense pact on which the new North Atlantic treaty will be patterned. The commitments signed at Rio not only dealt with armed attack by one nation against another, but also said:

"If the inviolability or integrity or the sovereignty or political independence of any American State should be affected by an aggression which is not an armed attack . . ." there will be immediate consultation to agree on "the measures" to be taken to help the victim and check the aggressor.

The coming North Atlantic treaty is expected to repeat, perhaps in simpler language, the pledge to hold immediate consultations in case of indirect aggression. Such a pledge, however, will not dispose of the problem.

Consultation happened to be effective in the recent disputes between Nicaragua and Costa Rica and between Haiti and Santo Domingo, both of which contained an element of indirect aggression. But these countries are not Soviet Russia, nor do they believe in Lenin's dictum:

"In our opinion, morality is entirely subordinate to the interests of the class war; everything is moral which is necessary for the annihilation of the old exploiting social order . . ."

Mere consultation probably would not have deterred Hitler in 1939. Consultation of the west would not have come in time to stop last year's Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia.

Strong Men on Scene

NOBODY seriously argues today that the armed forces of the new North Atlantic Alliance would be set in motion if, for example, France or Italy fell under Communist control. There could be many measures short of war, of the kind listed in the Rio treaty, but these have never proved enough to shake the hold of a police state over its people.

The real checkmate to indirect aggression, then, must be sought elsewhere than in the new treaty. It will be found, first, in resolute security officers like Jules Moch, the Minister of Interior in France, or Mario Scelba, his counterpart in Italy, backed wholeheartedly by governments that are alert to the wiles and stratagems of the Cominform.

It will be found, second, in a labor movement that will oust Communists from key places in the unions and will fearlessly recognize the danger of communism to workers everywhere. The American labor movement has already helped, and can help more, in this direction, by encouragement and example.

Finally, under the military assistance bill that will follow the Atlantic treaty, the United States will be able to supply the threatened governments with enough weapons to preserve internal security. At the same time it can help to strengthen the prestige and authority of democratic governments, as it has already done for the Queuille government in France and the De Gasperi government in Italy.

If the coming Atlantic treaty provided for a real union instead of a "community of interest," the danger of indirect aggression would dwindle and disappear. It would be no more possible then for communism to set up a police state in Italy than in Indiana.

As it is, the Atlantic nations will have to improvise measures to prevent a sudden extinction of freedom in any one of them. The treacherous attack from within may be a greater danger and a more baffling problem in the next year or two than the "armed attack" which now dominates our military and political thinking.

Navy Runs a 'General Store'

By Kenyon Kilbon
NYHT News Service

THE United States Navy is wearing a new face in the mandated Pacific Islands from which it butted the Japanese nearly five years ago—the face of a benevolent merchant catering to some 60,000 customers.

The customers are the inhabitants of the former enemy-held islands—the Marshalls, the Carolines and the Marianas, strewn in 96 small pieces over three million square miles of the Western Pacific. The entire collection, stretching 2,765 miles from end to end, comprises the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, administered by the United States under agreement with the United Nations.

Removal of the Japanese meant the end of enemy control in American eyes, but for the islanders it meant the loss of trade channels for imports and exports. The Japanese ruled the islands commercially as well as politically, furnishing imported consumer goods and exporting island products—copra, coconut oil, trochus shells (for buttons) and dried fish. When the enemy went, so did island commerce.

The answer, the Navy disclosed in a report to the U. N., is the Island Trading Co. of Micronesia—a prosaic title for what is probably the most extensive general store in American history. The owner and operator is the Navy, whose civil administrations rule the scattered islands.

Virtual Monopoly

IN ITS report, the Navy admitted candidly that the Island Trading Co. is a virtual monopoly, a form of business that is regarded with horror on the American mainland but seems to be peculiarly well-suited to the current economy of the trust territory. Without it, the Navy made clear, there would be little or no trade in the islands and the inhabitants would still be facing "a struggle for existence."

Unlike most monopolies, the company is operating on the premise that the islanders themselves will ultimately put it out of business. Its aim, according to a Navy policy directive of January, 1948, when the company was activated, is to provide a purchasing and marketing agency as "an interim arrangement until such time as the inhabitants of the various localities are in a position to carry on these functions on their own account."

In its first year of operation, the company has cast itself as a sort of midwife to a self-supporting island economy. It has offered subsidies, loans and credit to islanders who want to set themselves up in business; it has sold consumer goods at cost from a catalog of some 700 items to native traders and cooperatives; it has marketed and distributed island products abroad, principally in the United States and Japan.

During the first six months, the Navy reported the company shipped more than $383,000 worth of goods into the islands and exported $375,000 worth of island products. A large percentage of the traffic was carried free of charge in naval vessels, but the trust territory administration is trying to encourage private shipping in the area.

Concessions Very Few

AT THE same time, the Navy has discouraged establishment of any foreign—American or other—enterprise that would tend to keep the islanders out of any given field. Very few private concessions have been granted to outsiders. One of them, the Navy said, is the Tinian Produce Co., an organization formed by four Americans and operating on about 1000 acres of leased property on Tinian, in the Marianas. The principal reason it was sanctioned, the report said, was that the land had been unused, and the enterprise can furnish fresh produce to Saipan, Tinian, Rota and Guam.

Ground was broken for the Island Trading Co. by the United States Commercial Co., an agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., which started the ball rolling as soon as the war ended.

The Navy is so pleased with the results of the company in giving a boost to native enterprise that it wants Congress to pass a bill giving the Island Trading Co. statutory authority.

2 Homemakers Urge a Cabinet Post for Family

By Jeanette Bren Jerabek and Alice B. Brigham

TWO homemakers of Kensington, Md., have launched their own Government reorganization plan.

They aren't satisfied with the reports of the Hoover Commission.

They wish to have another Cabinet department.

They wish to have it devoted to the subjects that get into all the speeches of statesmen but seldom get into their legislative enactments. They would call it the Department of Family and Community Affairs.

The arguments in this article are the arguments they have placed before J. Weldon Jones of the Budget Bureau, Leon Keyserling of the Council of Economic Advisers, Russell Andrews of the White House staff, a Hoover Commission representative and others in the past week. They have been promised an interview with President Truman. They have laid their plans before Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) and Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn).

Mrs. Jerabek lives at 3402 Oberon st., Kensington. She was born and reared on a Minnesota farm near Hopkins. She was a 4-H Club girl in her youth and got interested in foods and nutrition, economics, sociology and family life. Her interests led to a B.S. degree in home economics at the University of Minnesota, to a job as a home management specialist for the Agriculture Department. Then came marriage to M. W. Jerabek of Cambridge, Mass. Homemaking for her husband and a 6-year-old daughter have not diminished her interest or participation in community life.

She has tried out her Cabinet idea on child study groups, professional societies, workshops, citizens' associations and similar civic gatherings. Their reaction helped convince her there ought to be a Secretary of Family and Community Affairs.

Alice B. Brigham, another Kensington homemaker, has had a lifelong interest in making homes more secure and communities better places in which to live. She was born in Massachusetts, reared in California. She got a B.A. in sociology and clinical psychology at the University of Michigan, went on to earn an M.D. She has had experience in private practice and now is working in the fields of public health, cancer detection and marriage guidance. The tasks of homemaking for a husband and child have increased her professional interest in the problems of the home and community.

JEANETTE BREN JERABEK

Harris & Ewing
DR. ALICE B. BRIGHAM
They want a sounding board for the family

WE AGREE with the Hoover Commission that a Government reorganization is necessary. However, in that change more emphasis must be focused on the family and the community.

Not one of the 10 Hoover Commission "project study groups" concerns itself primarily, if at all, with family living and community needs. The commission is proposing to streamline a train without giving it a new engine. Our top leaders in government should recognize, as others dealing in human affairs have done in the past, that the family is the cornerstone of society.

The Hoover Commission limits its scope chiefly to administrative problems. We would like to see one spot in the Government which deals with people as human beings. We as families would like to have a department where we could express ourselves and receive guidance on family and community living.

We are asking that the Cabinet include a member concerned with family and community. We would like to see his department be dynamic, not static, in nature. It should be the core and integrating force of all agencies, public and private, which deal with family living. Specifically, we refer to such aspects of family living as housing, household economics, health, education, social security, public welfare, recreation and community life.

We would expect the functions of this department to include the giving of information and opinions to the President and Congress on pending family and community legislation. We would expect it to concern itself with whatever operating programs Congress might decide upon in this sphere. It also should act as a sounding board for the discussion of family and community problems; should offer guidance in family and community affairs and should promote the understanding of family and community problems.

Shelter Isn't Enough

LET us start out with the highest level of policy making and advising as a basis for national legislation. Today we have before Congress a bill for housing. It considers only the need for shelter from the elements, not family needs. Must we always live in cookie boxes? Must we always contend with Fibber McGee closets? Why is it tacitly assumed that living in dormitory style brings out the best in human nature?

Space requirements for the varied individual and group activities of a family at the different stages of its development should be given serious thought. Due consideration should be given to access to work, transportation, health facilities, recreation, shopping, schools and churches. Had there been a presentation by a Cabinet officer to Congress of these necessary considerations, gathered from the pooled research in the field, the housing bill might have achieved much more significance.

Griping is a healthy response of a society to its maladjustments, but those who gripe should be given the opportunity to assume responsibility for change. Thus we are suggesting a sounding board function for this department.

To illustrate, consider the pending health insurance legislation. If the American Medical Association and the laity could have aired their views before an impartial group composed of family and community representatives who would have been in a position to see the problem from both the doctor's and the family's point of view, a bill more satisfactory to both sides might have resulted. The medical profession might have a better understanding of the family's needs, and the laity might better appreciate the doctor's fear of becoming snarled in red tape.

Research Clearing House

HOW could the department give guidance in family life and community affairs? Take, for instance, a community in which there was a high rate of juvenile delinquency. Those concerned with the problem, instead of having to write to many agencies for information on the subject, could write to this new department and receive the pooled results of research done by all public and private agencies working on the subject. They could ask for a consultant from the department to come and analyze the particular problems of the community, or to evaluate proposed or established remedial measures.

Let us suppose, for another example, that the Ladies Circle in Midville has worked out an improved system of school lunches. The majority of women in the county wish to have Midville's plan put into county-wide effect. However, Mr. Peabody, the county superintendent of education, refuses for apparently logical reasons. The women could take their problem to the department, which would evaluate the program both from the standpoint of that particular community and of what has been found beneficial on a national level.

Again, suppose Mr. Smith, a manufacturer, has a product which he feels would help family living. He could ask the department, "What type of family can afford my product? Under what circumstances are families likely to buy it? What color and design will have the greatest appeal? How are families going to use it? Will it sell on its own merits?" The department would give him the best information available in that field from Government as well as private investigations, and would also evaluate the material.

Another illustration: The homemaker goes into the butcher shop to buy a Sunday chicken. The butcher asks, "Do you want a frozen eviscerated chicken?" The confused homemaker asks, "A what?" and the butcher tries to describe the "quick freeze" poultry process. Poultry processors could get together with specialists of the proposed department and develop a simple terminology of grades and standards for general use.

Finally, take the case of the Reverend Peters, who wishes to set up a marriage counseling program in his church. He could find out from the proposed department what other counseling groups were doing, what should be included in his program, whether he should run it by himself or draw upon other community resources, why some counseling programs succeed and some fail. Again, a comprehensive fund of information with evaluations would be available.

Teams of Consultants

FOR the understanding of family life, the department should have a research section in which there was a permanent staff as well as teams composed of professional and lay consultants which could be called in to give advice on particular problems. The permanent staff should concern itself with evaluating the research reports from an over-all point of view and should coordinate the frequently divergent results reached on the same problem by following different methods. It would also be in a position to point out problems where research was needed.

This work would have to be carried on in close cooperation with all other pertinent agencies, public and private.

This function of the department may be illustrated as follows:

An agency wishing to study the effect of nursery schools upon children would present its program to the department. The permanent research staff would give the agency a list of other agencies working on phases of the same problem and a list of publications on the subject, and would suggest undeveloped possibilities for research.

Another important work of this research section would be to sponsor programs to educate the people at the points of production, consumption, professional services, schooling and family and community life. For example, all those people working in production, from the big boss to the ladling boy, could be helped to understand the relationship of one to another and the relationship of the producer to the consumer.

Aid to Legislation

A DEPARTMENT of Family and Community Life, built upon the premise that it must evaluate as well as analyze, would help to improve legislative measures. With such a department the people would have at their finger tips whatever knowledge exists of the human and material resources of their Nation.

Such a department would also tend to break down the lag between research and action. The need for uniform marriage, divorce and adoption laws has been recognized by those dealing with such problems, as well as by some of the public, for years, and yet we still have no general agreement.

We are not naive enough to believe that our Cabinet proposal is a new idea. Many people and many groups have thought for years about this subject. But we do feel that now, when a reorganization is under way, the beliefs of people who feel as we do must be expressed for public consideration.

Thus we are asking that the family and community, the most fundamental structures in our society, be considered worthy of the dignity of Cabinet representation.

U. S. Faces Choice of Extending or Abandoning Aged Benefits

By John J. Corson

SHALL we build on or abandon our present system of providing security for the aged?

This question confronts Chairman R. L. Doughton and his House Ways and Means Committee as they continue consideration of social security legislation. The committee, and subsequently Congress, has three choices. It can:

1. Extend the present old age and survivors' insurance to cover millions not now protected, raise the benefits, and add benefits for disabled workers.

2. Establish, as Dr. Townsend proposes, a generous pension for every oldster, and, as Representative Rankin urges, add even more generous pensions for every veteran.

3. Increase appropriations for grants to the States to enable them to give relief to the aged—if they are in need.

In other words, the committee can recommend that the aged, disabled, the widows and orphans can best be provided for through:

A. Contributory social insurance for which workers pay, in part, while they work.

B. Pensions of equal amount, at least for every "senio citizen," with larger pensions for veterans.

C. Relief for those who become destitute and seek public aid.

WAR and teeming growth of our national economy since 1939 have made the existing old age and survivors' insurance system obsolete. It covers less than two-thirds of the 60 million who hold jobs in 1949. And benefits, fixed by law in 1935, have become utterly inadequate to provide subsistence for retired workers or the survivors of those who died as the cost of living spiraled.

Meanwhile, more and more aged people receive larger and larger "old age assistance" or relief. The Social Security Act had created, in 1935, not only old age insurance. Simultaneously it established, as a stop-gap, Federal grants to the States for "old age assistance." It was contemplated that as the insurance system grew, the need for assistance would diminish or disappear.

Today, 13 years later, our arrangements for the security of the aged are lopsided. Almost two thirds of the aged who received security payments in December, 1948, received assistance or relief. Only one third received insurance benefits toward which they had contributed. Moreover, the needy aged received as assistance average monthly payments of $41.50. Those who had worked and contributed received as insurance, on the average, $25.30 per month.

Truman's Proposals

THIS is the background against which President Truman's current social security proposals should be viewed. As Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security commissioner, testified this week, these proposals would:

(A) Extend insurance coverage to about 20 million persons, including a large number of salesmen who were denied this protection by the Gearhart resolution enacted by the Eightieth Congress.

(B) Liberalize monthly insurance benefits for retired workers, widows and orphans.

(C) Provide benefits for workers when sick and during periods of extended disability.

(D) Double the payroll taxes on employers and employees.

(E) Increase Federal grants to the States (especially the poorer States) to make such assistance available to all needy rather than only the aged, blind and children.

Subsequently, it was announced, the Administration will present other recommendations to expand unemployment insurance and establish health insurance.

The President's current proposals have evoked cries of "a welfare state" and "how much social security can we afford." But these proposals do not startle those who have kept in touch with the recommendations of responsible groups.

Consider, for example, the recommendations of:

1. An advisory council to the Senate Finance Committee made up of 17 outstanding businessmen, labor leaders and educators headed by E. R. Stettinius, jr., which submitted in January a report on "Recommendations for Social Security Legislation."

2. The Committee on Social Security of the United States Chamber of Commerce which issued a report this week detailing business' proposals for more social security.

3. The Executive Council of the AFL which confirmed in January proposed changes recommended by its Social Security Committee.

4. The Social Security Committee of the Congress of Industrial Organzations as summarized in a letter to the House and Ways and Means Committee this week.

Surprising Agreement

AMONG these four diverse groups there is surprising and substantial agreement as to what should be done about social security.

Business and labor, the Senate Advisory Council (organizations and others immediately affected) and most students of social security agree that old age and survivors' insurance should be extended. It should cover, in addition to those now protected, farmers, self-employed persons, farm workers, domestic servants, employes of nonprofit hospitals, churches, etc., those Federal employees not covered by other retirement plans, and some other public employes.

Indeed, the Senate Advisory Council and the United States Chamber of Commerce would go further; they would extend old age and survivors' insurance to cover all Federal employes and railroad workers as well.

Second, these spokesmen of business and labor agree that retired workers, widows and orphans should receive larger benefits than are now paid. At present a typical retired worker and his wife receive, on the average $58.80; a widow with two children, $68.60 per month. If the Truman proposals are adopted the retired worker and his wife would receive $94.50, and the widow with two children $126. In addition, the President proposes that the minimum benefit for a retired worker be raised from $10 to $25 and the maximum benefit from $85 to $150.

The CIO and AFL recommend substantially what President Truman has proposed. The Senate Advisory Council and the United States Chamber of Commerce would not go as far. Yet all four groups, in varying terms, describe the present benefits as inadequate and recommend that benefits be increased.

Thirdly, all four groups agree with the President that taxes must be raised to pay the bill. The President recommends that taxes on employes and on employers be increased from 1 per cent to 2 per cent by January 1, 1950.

THE Advisory Council would not raise taxes beyond 1½ per cent until the amount required to pay benefits each year has risen above the tax income. The Chamber of Commerce insists that if benefits are to be raised more workers must be covered and taxes increased as well.

There is a fourth—and important—agreement. It is that insurance, for which workers and employers both pay, should be the basic method of providing security for the aged, widows and orphans.

The Administration believes this, even though it recommends larger appropriations for assistance, as Mr. Altmeyer testified last Tuesday. He urged the Congress to authorize larger grants for the poorer States that cannot care as well for their needy. He recommended that the Federal Government help the States foot the bill for assistance to all needy rather than only the aged, the blind and children.

Area of Dispute

DISAGREEMENTS begin here. Labor goes along with the Truman proposals for assistance but has never been enthusiastic about social security payments involving a means test. Spokesmen for the Chamber of Commerce contend the Federal Government has already gone as far as it should or further in financing State expenditures for assistance.

Both the Advisory Council and the chamber look forward to the time when old age and survivors' insurance is available for all in reasonable amounts. "Public assistance will then be necessary," they point out, "only for those . . . with unusual needs and for the few who, for one reason or another, have been unable to earn insurance rights through work."

The major disagreement, however, focuses on disability insurance. Today if a man is unemployed he may receive unemployment insurance. When after 65 he retires, he may receive old-age insurance. But if he is unemployed because he is sick, or if, before 65, he cannot work because of heart disease, tuberculosis or other disablement, he is not entitled to any insurance payment. Unless he becomes destitute and seeks relief he will not receive any public aid.

Both the AFL and CIO indorse the President's proposal that benefits be paid to sick and disabled workers. The Chamber of Commerce opposes on two grounds: first, that voluntary insurance may take care of the sick, and second, that the private insurance companies' experience warns the Federal Government not to attempt to pay disability benefits.

The advisory council offers a middle of the road position. It suggests that benefits be paid to permanently disabled workers suffering from "medically demonstrable" disabilities. That is, to workers the doctors are sure are not malingering. The council proposes benefits be paid to such disabled workers but that no benefits be paid the worker's wife or children.

Time for Decision

THIS is a crucial year for social security. So far the Truman proposals have met with two principal objections. It is said they will cost too much. And the critics object to the Federal Government anteing up 250 million dollars a year for grants to the States to care for other needy than the aged, the blind and children.

The test will come when the Congress faces up to the question as to what it will do about improving and expanding old age and survivors' insurance. The demands for more aid for the aged (and secondarily for widows and orphans) will be met in some way. The choice before Congress is to develop old age and survivors' insurance which business and labor alike recommend or to abandon it as the basic way of providing security.

If Congress does not extend OASI coverage and raise benefits either—

(a) the veterans and the Townsendites will force through a pension for everyone at 65 and a better one for veterans with staggering costs for the national economy, or

(b) the stronger unions will win relatively high pensions for a favored group of employes, and more money will be poured into the relief methods of caring for the aged and dependent children.

MOSCOW (AP).—William Saroyan, Thornton Wilder and Gertrude Stein are described in a current issue of the Literary Gazette as "decadent writers." Literary Gazette says of Saroyan:

The Gallup Poll

Split on 'Fair Deal'

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

THE two groups who are generally given most credit for electing President Truman—the farmers and organized labor—are actually far apart in their views on major items in the President's legislative program.

The most conspicuous differences are on minimum wage legislation and on Federal aid to housing. Drives for passage of both those bills are strongly backed by labor union leaders. But farmers questioned by the institute show a relatively cool attitude toward both measures as compared to union members.

Raising Minimum Wage to 75c an Hour

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opin.
Farmers	51%	43%	6%
Union members	85	10	5

Oppose Higher Costs

FARMER opposition to higher minimum wages stems from a number of reasons. Among them are the facts that raising wages in towns or cities tends to draw labor off the farm, that help would cost the farmer more, and that raises in wages in industry would increase the costs of things the farmer buys.

Federal Aid to Housing

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opin.
Farmers	56%	29%	15%
Union members	79	13	8

The major emphasis in housing legislation is on city slum clearance and low rent housing, rather than on construction in farm areas. This undoubtedly accounts for the difference in attitude between farmers and union members.

An institute poll found that the country as a whole, and manual workers in particular, are more in favor of extending social security benefits to farmers than farmers themselves are.

The vote follows:

Extend Social Security Benefits to Farmers?

	Yes	No	No Opin.
Vote of Farmers	49%	31%	20%
Vote of manual workers	59	19	22
Vote of all persons questioned	57	24	19

THESE RESULTS raise the question of whether the farmer and the union member or city worker see anywhere near eye to eye on the basic issue of Federal aid for social ends. Besides the difference on Federal aid to housing, the institute poll has found divergent views among farmers and union members on Federal aid to education.

Among farmers the division of opinion is almost even, with a slight margin in favor of leaving education aid in the hands of the States rather than bringing in the Federal Government. Among union members the weight of opinion is in the opposite direction—in favor of Federal aid.

Views on Unions

A fundamental difference between farmer and worker is in attitudes toward labor unions.

Only 41 per cent of farmers recently questioned on the issue, "In general, do you approve or disapprove of labor unions?", said they approve, with 39 per cent disapproving and 20 per cent expressing no opinion.

Among manual workers 67 per cent indicated approval, to 16 per cent disapproval and 17 per cent no opinion.

Japanese Show Yen For American Books

TOKYO (AP).—The first dozen Allied books under the occupation translation program have reached bookstores throughout Japan.

Two, Lloyd Douglas' "The Robe," and former Ambassador Joseph C. Grew's "Ten Years in Japan", were sold out before they reached the shelves.

Advance orders for the Grew book exceeded 92,000, and for Douglas' novel 10,000.

In all, 40 translations of Allied books have been cleared by the translation committee of the Japan publishers association. All are to reach the shops in a few weeks.

Several hundred others have been cleared either on a non-royalty or blocked yen basis.

Partisan Lawmaking

By a strict party vote the Senate Labor Committee has reported out the Administration's labor bill without a single change. This arbitrary move makes it impossible to consider amendments that the Republican members intended to propose. The committee's action is not only highhanded, as Senator Taft charges, but, as Senator Aiken says, it "jeopardizes the chances of getting any improved labor legislation at this session of Congress." For the bill in its present form is known to be unacceptable to many Democratic as well as Republican Senators. The fight for corrective and perfecting amendments will simply shift from the committee room to the floor of the Senate. That will lead to endless debate on highly complex and controversial issues. Time is almost certain to be lost, not saved, by the failure of the Labor Committee to present the Senate with a measure that would fill the gaps and correct the deficiencies of the Administration bill, while eliminating those features of the Taft-Hartley Act that are a legitimate target of criticism.

Amendments offered from the floor are virtually certain to result in patchwork legislation that will satisfy no one. If the legislation that finally emerges is to be well balanced and an improvement on the existing law, it is essential to weigh carefully the effect of each amendment on the whole program. Revisions that may appear to be sound when considered separately sometimes prove to be unwise when considered as parts of an integrated whole. This kind of comprehensive appraisal of the merits or demerits of any proposed change is not possible when legislation has to be written from the floor following discursive and often irrelevant debate.

By trying summarily to put over an undigested and inequitable labor program at the behest of the President without even voting on the amendments of committee members the Labor Committee majority has shirked its plain duty. This kind of docile partisanship discredits the Senators who are a party to it and may well defeat their alleged purpose of expediting action on labor legislation.

Budget And Accounts

"The budget and appropriation process," says the Hoover Commission, "is the heart of the management and control of the executive branch." Governmental accounting is "an indispensable tool" in the day-to-day management of administrative affairs. But in its present form the budget does not enable Congress and the public to determine the costs of specific governmental activities, nor does the outmoded accounting system indicate what has been accomplished with the money spent.

To correct these defects the commission recommends what it calls a performance budget that would focus attention on functions and projects instead of personal services, supplies and equipment. To illustrate: the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda receives allotments under 12 different appropriation titles. Without exhaustive and expert research there is no way of determining the cost of operating this institution. But under the type of performance budget suggested operating costs would be shown under a single appropriation head for medical care and could be compared with those of other naval hospitals.

The commission also urges a prompt revision of appropriation practices, pointing out that the present system is a patchwork following no rational pattern. Some appropriation items are too broad in scope; others are too detailed, while the practice of financing single bureaus or functions from a number of appropriations hampers departmental administrators and encourages fiscal irresponsibility. Different kinds of appropriations and contract authorizations add to the general confusion. The commission does not recommend introduction of a single omnibus appropriation measure in place of the numerous bills that now come before Congress. But it does emphasize the need for simplification of present procedures and for more effective checks upon the activities of Government spending agencies to see that they stay within their appropriations.

These recommendations will probably meet with little opposition since they could be effected without entailing any important changes in the functional activities of the agencies concerned with budgeting and accounting. Trouble arises, however, when the commission recommends the creation of a new office of Accountant General in the Treasury to take over the task of prescribing a general accounting system for Government departments subject to approval of the Comptroller General. It is generally agreed that administrative accounting is an executive function that should be divorced from auditing. Nevertheless, the proposal to deprive the Comptroller General of authority over accounting systems brings strong dissent from several members of the commission on the ground that Congress would oppose any attempt to curtail the powers of its own agency in this fashion. Since the GAO, the Treasury and the Bureau of the Budget are currently attempting to work out a voluntary plan for centralizing and improving the present accounting system, it would doubtless be tactically wise to rely upon voluntary action to bring about reforms instead of risking defeat of the whole program by asking for legislative authority to effect changes in the accounting system.

It will take years, possibly a decade, to do a thorough job of reforming the present accounting system. Meantime modification of many of the commission's proposals may become necessary. For such reasons some qualified person may well be selected to supervise and speed these reforms, maintain close contacts with Congress while the work is in process, and persuade it to pass enabling legislation when and if required. Otherwise, there is a real danger that many proposed reforms will never get beyond the stage of being approved in principle. The really hard task of translating precept into practice lies ahead.

Puppet And Master

It would be wishful thinking of the most dangerous kind to interpret the shift in the Soviet Foreign Office as a shift in Soviet policy or as a confession that the "cold war" has been lost. The evidence, such as we have, suggests nothing of the sort. Mr. Vishinsky's promotion is less important to the outer world than Mr. Molotov's apparent retention as Deputy Premier, member of the Politburo, and heir-apparent to Stalin.

Vishinsky has never been a maker of foreign policy. As a former Menshevik, a convert to Bolshevism, he is looked upon by true-blue Stalinists with a certain suspicion and contempt. He is not and never has been a member of the Politburo which rules the Soviet Union. His status has been that of a career official; his duty has been to carry out orders. This he has done with a showman's flourish, whether the orders were to prosecute and liquidate the accused in the great purge trials, or to oust a recalcitrant Premier in Romania, or to bang the big bass drum of Soviet propaganda at meetings of the United Nations.

With Molotov it has been a different story. He, too, has known how to obey orders, but he has been a member of the inner ring where the orders have been decided upon. He not only belongs to the Politburo; he has also been regarded ever since Zhdanov's death last year as one of the two or three men most likely to inherit Stalin's crown. The Soviet people have been told to be proud of him, as if he were being groomed for greater things. With Stalin going on 70, and tired, it is wholly likely that Molotov will be kept close to the throne while Vishinsky handles the drudgery of the Foreign Office and foreign conferences.

Western diplomats will not grieve to see Mr. Molotov disappear from the conference tables. During his 10 years as Foreign Minister, Soviet diplomacy made one blunder after another—the pact with the Nazis, the assault on Finland, and now, after the war, the senseless duel with the West in the "cold war." Yet Molotov proved to be one of the most formidable figures of diplomacy since Talleyrand. Former Secretary of State Byrnes wrote that nothing in all his experience of politics had prepared him for negotiating with Molotov. In persistence, stubbornness and patience, in the ability to exasperate others, and wear them down, in the knack of making his country's basic weakness look like overwhelming strength, Molotov had no equal in the war and postwar period.

Vishinsky's tactics should be easier to cope with. The fact that so obvious a puppet is made Foreign Minister may have a deeper meaning for the West. Nobody outside the Kremlin can ever be certain what the moves inside it may mean. But at least the Foreign Office shift suggests a growing contempt for other countries, a desire in the Kremlin to make foreign contacts unimportant, the emergence of a Soviet isolationism more extreme than any we have known.

A Champ Retires

Joe Louis' resignation of his "world's" heavyweight boxing title ends the fighting career of a great champion. He held the title longer than any of his predecessors and defended it oftener. This alone sets him on a pinnacle among the practitioners of mayhem for money. But there are also other reasons for his popularity. As one of the most prominent members of his race, his modesty and his demonstration that individual ability is what counts have provided a point of reference for better racial understanding.

Unfortunately, nothing has become Joe's possession of the heavyweight title so little as the way he has laid it down. With a wavering indecision he never displayed in the ring, the champion kept changing his mind about whether or not he would, had, or wanted to retire. Now that the decision has finally come irrevocably it is coupled with a plan to become a fight promoter and name his own successor. This, as an inevitable result of the way professional boxing is run in this country, means the end for Mike Jacobs, to whose expert promoting Louis admits he owes infinite thanks for the success of his own career. It means also that the champion will soon be testing his skill in a field where brawn counts for little.

Not In The Script

It becomes more and more difficult to surmise what is happening in the countries beyond the iron curtain in the conflict between the churches and the Communist regimes, but it is clear at least that the Christian resistance is continuing. At Budapest 5 of 14 defendants accused of complicity in the illegal money transactions ascribed to Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, have boldly repudiated their confessions of guilt, which they said had been extorted by police intimidation. At Sofia, the Rev. Landin Ivanov Popov, an obscure pastor of a Pentecostal sect, brought to trial with 14 other Protestant clergymen, denied openly in court that he had ever been a spy for the British and Americans as he had previously confessed. After this episode it was announced that the hearing of further testimony would be abandoned since the evidence against all the defendants was already "abundant and clear." The inference is that since the inquisitors with all their resources had not succeeded in breaking the spirit of Pastor Popov they were fearful of a similar show of courage on the part of some of the 42 persons who were still waiting to be called as witnesses against the clergyman.

But if the day-to-day progress of the conflict of church and state in the areas of Europe dominated by the Soviets remains obscure, the purposes of the persecutions are plain enough. The Communists are seeking to make the churches in those countries subservient instruments of their rule. The existence of any sort of independent church remains a potential threat to the regime, since it inevitably becomes a focus of passive opposition, if for no other reason than the irreconcilable antagonism of the Christian and Communist doctrines. There is some reason to believe that a considerable revival of religious feeling has occurred in the satellite countries and even, if some reports can be trusted, in Russia itself.

This, if true, should not be surprising. The historical evidence is that religious revivals, generally of a mystical character, usually occur in epochs of general calamity. It can be said for the Communist state that it effectively removes the opportunities for material pleasures and success, preoccupation with which is often considered the chief danger to the religious spirit. It has also no doubt the effect of making many persons acutely aware of the ephemeral character of earthly existence.

Thus in the long run the odds in the conflict are not necessarily upon the side of communism. In some countries, notably Poland and the Ukraine, the passive resistance of religious groups appears to coexist with an active opposition in the form of well-organized underground movements. In Poland, where according to every sign the next Communist drive against the Roman Catholic hierarchy is soon to begin, a large number of priests have been arrested as accomplices of the underground. One member of the anti-Communist underground, Jan Malolepszky, is now on trial in Warsaw. According to the government, a band of which Malolepszky is said to have been leader, was responsible for 248 armed assaults against Polish Communists, resulting in the deaths of 43. If this accusation is to be accepted at face value, it amounts to a Communist admission of the formidable character of the opposition in Poland.

Goodwill Dividends

Fourteen years ago a Washington woman invested $100,000 in helping the handicapped of this city to help themselves. Her gift, which made it possible to establish the Goodwill Industries here, was anonymous. Now it has been revealed that this donor was the late Mrs. Ann Hubbard Davis. The work she helped start will be known in the future as the Davis Memorial. It has grown from what in 1935 was a one-room store to a half-million-dollar enterprise. A national training school she also established for Goodwill executives and staff workers of the entire country, and which was in session last week at the District Center, has trained more than 100 persons. Thus did money invested in a good cause pay dividends.

The human dividends would have most interested Mrs. Davis, who had a zeal for helping people not only to help themselves but also to help other people. In the last 14 years, 3111 persons, most of them disabled, who did not want charity but a chance to work, have found employment at Goodwill Industries. And the cast-off clothing and household goods reconditioned by these workers enabled thousands of needy persons to obtain at a nominal price badly wanted goods. Here is a fine example of philanthropy in the self-respecting American tradition.

BROKEN SONG

Why should I grieve that under blowing grass
You, who were all my love, are quiet dust?
The glory has but passed, as all things pass:
The flame has sought its source, as all flames must.
Have I not noons, and high tides of the sea?
Hills, and blue morning glories when I wake?
All summer's roses blossoming for me,
And swaying honeysuckle vines to take?
And there are brooks, and every bird that sings:
Fragrance and touch of purple grapes to know:
The taste of cherries, and the thrill of wings,
And these—the dearest—rain and trees and snow.
For me the dreamy apple blossoms drift.
For me the bright October maples burn . .

So says—sufficient unto self—the swift
Mercurial mind. The heart is slow to learn.

"Capitalist Lie"

We Americans are certainly an ignorant and impudent lot. To make so much fuss over a trifle like circumnavigating the globe in a plane in 94 hours.

We are ignorant because a little research would have revealed that Nikolai Stepanovich Chernozoobov of Saratov on the Volga, in Russia, was first to fly around the earth as far back as 1880, and in 64 hours nonstop instead of 94 hours!

Only the son of the Lenin-Stalin country that was first to discover electricity, to invent the steam engine, to invent the steamboat (and use the sail boat), to invent the electric lamp (and use the pine wood kindle), the automobile (and use the ox cart), the submarine, air plane, radio, television, penicillin (and not be able to make it without American machinery), in fact everything else that modern civilization is blessed with—Stalin's Russia—should have been the "first" to fly around the globe.

What? There were no airplanes in 1880? There was no Soviet Union and no Lenin-Stalin leadership? That is just more lies spread by the capitalist, imperialist Wall Streeters!

Transit Radio Poll

The Public Utilities Commission said it would hold a hearing on "music as you ride" only if sufficient evidence was presented that the program is "adverse to public convenience and public safety." Why not consider public mental health, too? People need the chance for health giving relaxation and meditation afforded by radio-free transit rides.

Probably the most valid evidence now obtainable on how transit radios affect mental health would be the opinion of experts. So I suggest that the local unit of the American Psychiatric Association poll its members and publish the results.

Boxing Commission

Six colored soldiers and two Hawaiians were crowned boxing champions in the world-wide Army championships held at Fort Myer, Va., on February 26. Thirty-five of the 72 champions in the various weight classes of the United States Armies were colored. In the recent Golden Gloves tests held in Washington, D. C., five of the senior winners in the eight weight classes were colored boys and four of the eight novice winners were colored.

Boxing in this area is under control of the District Boxing Commission and the local Amateur Athletic Union. Not a single paid employe or member of the commission is a colored citizen. Not a single colored sports organization is allowed to join the AAU. Only one colored official is sanctioned by the Boxing Commission.

Until mixed bouts were permitted here the promoters and the commission were often operating on a deficit. Over $10,000 is paid out in salaries and commissions but not any of the money—with the exception of one judge of boxing—gets to colored citizens.

Recently, nearly five months before expiration of their terms, the commission wrote the Commissioners of the District that its members would accept reappointment. This the commissioners did.

The haste with which the Commissioners have acted in reappointing the Boxing Commission is added evidence to the necessity for some changes to be made in the interest of democracy and citizenship here in the Nation's Capital.

Bikini Results

In Drew Pearson's February 19 column titled "Bikini Naval Losses Disaster" he implies that the joint Committee on Atomic Energy wants to make public secret atomic information because neither Congress or the American people are "enemies." I hope Senator McMahon and his able colleagues know that anything published in the United States is immediately available to foreign nations.

Next, the brass hats are, says Pearson, trying to cover up their "mistake" in not abolishing warships because of the effectiveness of the bomb. I don't see much action being taken toward abolishing New York, Washington, Detroit, Oak Ridge or other targets which would be extremely vulnerable to an atomic bomb.

It is entirely true that if we lost 61 ships, or even 31 ships, to an enemy bomb at one time, it could be called a disaster. But I don't think naval authorities contemplate anchoring 73 warships in a tiny harbor and asking an enemy country to come over and practice bombing runs on them, then escort the bomber over the target to make sure its bomb drop is made under ideal conditions.

No Room For DPs

Rabbi J. H. Freedman of Harrisonburg, Va., writing on February 27, attempts to refute my argument against admitting more DPs into the United States with the old threadbare and fallacious argument that we are all descended from immigrants.

In 1776, the year he mentions as a beginning point of immigration, there were fewer people in the American colonies than there are now in the State of New York. The empty country of that day could absorb immigrants in large quantities.

Even as late as 1900 the number of inhabitants per square mile in the United States were 25.6, and in 1940 there were 44.2 inhabitants to the square mile.

Competent scientists have estimated that had no immigration come into the United States during the past 75 years, the population would have been nearly as great and it would have been of better quality. As hordes of immigrants from eastern Europe have come into the country the native stock has failed to reproduce itself because it would not lower its standard of living.

Where is the advantage in crowding every acre with a teeming population, to exhaust the resources of the land, and to create a condition akin to European ghettoes in our cities?

"Abuse Of The Schools"

The Christian religion provides us with much undeserved peace, comfort and happiness. For this reason we contribute through our church to missionary work, a part of which is the Arlington County Council of Religious Education, so that others, even children if their parents want them to, will have opportunities to hear the good word, too. That's all there is to it.

Now where's all this "abuse of the schools" indicated in your editorial of March 1?

Rankin's Pension Grab

I would venture the assertion that 90 per cent of the members of the House of Representatives would vote against the Rankin pension bill on a secret ballot. I took the floor and urged the members to do publicly what they would not fear to do privately. The members should uninhibitedly express themselves in opposition to the proposed $90-dollar-a-month pension bill for all veterans beginning at 65 years of age, who served 90 days or more in either World War.

Nor should it be uncomfortable politically for any one of us to follow the dictates of his conscience. We dare not pass the buck—that is, rely on the Senate to act with statesmanlike vigor in killing the bill. We must accept our own responsibility.

I am firmly convinced that the Rankin bill is against the best interests of the Nation and therefore against the best interests of the veteran.

I wish to offer every constructive aid to the veteran, but the veteran resents charity disguised as a pension grab. I believe in greater benefits, especially for the sick, impaired, wounded and disabled veteran. Despite the fact that the current expenditures for veterans is running around six billion dollars a year, I am, nonetheless, desirous of increasing the benefits to the disabled veteran.

The pensions that exist today grew out of wars that were fought with armies microscopic in number compared with the military units of the last war. When those pensions were passed, there was no over-all Federal security program for the aged and indigent. The Rankin bill would completely put out of kilter our Social Security old-age program.

The cost of the Rankin bill would begin at $125,300,000 a year and rise mountainously to six billion dollars a year as the circle of 65-year-old veterans increased. There are 19 million veterans, who with their families total 40 per cent of the population. The veteran and his dear ones would be paying each year 40 per cent of this six billion dollars, because taxes raised to defray the pension costs are always passed on invisibly to all the public.

It is important to remember that the alleged benefits of this bill would be in addition to all other veteran compensation allowances, medical and educational services and awards under the GI Bill of Rights.

Veterans would do well to spurn this misguided effort on their behalf, and concentrate their strength on measures that will truly improve the lot of their fellows, especially of those who are sick and wounded and unable to fend for themselves.

In addition, this bill would seriously interfere with President Truman's economic and financial program.

The first concern of the veteran and nonveteran should be a stable national economy without which no amount of pension can be of help.

Atlantic Pact Objectives

By Andre Visson

What Kind of Strategy

THE CONTINUING debate on the yet unpublished North Atlantic Pact is creating more and more confusion both here and abroad. This confusion is now so great that it has obscured the original objectives of the pact.

It is, however, necessary to bear them in mind if we are to think constructively. The initiators of the pact had the following three objectives in view: 1. to give the greatest possible feeling of security to western Europeans so that they could concentrate their efforts on their recovery; 2, to leave no doubt in the minds of the policy-makers of the Soviet Union that any new aggressive move they made in western Europe would immediately bring the United States into action; 3. to create such conditions—should the North Atlantic Pact fail to prevent the outbreak of war in Europe—as would assure the best coordination of the American military effort with that which western Europe could itself furnish if it received adequate American military aid and equipment.

Now, the chaotic debate about the North Atlantic Pact has revealed that none of these objectives can be achieved by merely affixing a certain number of signatures to a certain text. And that it is perhaps easier to impress Soviet policy-makers than to reassure the peoples of western Europe.

The men in the Kremlin are, indeed, likely to be impressed by America's determination to achieve military power superior to theirs and to use it against them should they make a new aggressive move. But western Europeans ask for something more. They want not only greater American military power, but different American military strategy.

THE FRENCH Premier, M. Queuille, perfectly expressed the feeling of millions of western Europeans when he declared in his interview with the United Press that "the question is that France and western Europe must be spared an invasion." The French Premier knows, as does every intelligent and well informed western European, "that once western Europe was occupied, America would again come to our aid and eventually we again would be liberated." But like millions of western Europeans, M. Queuille can find no comfort in this knowledge. He feels that even if Americans were to come to France's aid "15 days after the invasion, it will be too late . . ."

Now, it is obvious that what western Europeans really want from the United States is not a perfect, fool-proof treaty with an irrevocable commitment for automatic action, but an American military strategy adjusted to their vital needs.

They do not think of the North Atlantic Pact in political terms, but primarily, if not exclusively, in strategic terms. And to justify this thinking they point to the case of the Scandinavian countries. The adherence of Norway and Denmark is supposed to strengthen the defense of the approaches to Great Britain. But this would not have the same importance for France. A friendly and strong Italy is even more important to the security of France than a friendly and strong Scandinavia is to Britain. If the Scandinavian countries had been left out of the North Atlantic Pact, the French could reconcile themselves to the idea of Italy staying out.

But with Norway and Denmark adhering to the pact the French want the strengthening of their own security in the Mediterranean area. In terms of military security the Mediterranean is for the French just a "bay" of the Atlantic! And if Italy is now left out of the pact, not only the French but the Italians themselves will feel unhappy and insecure. Thus, instead of reassuring western Europeans, the pact brings them new worries.

WHAT particularly worries intelligent western Europeans is the realization that in order to obtain from America a strategy which would protect western Europe against invasion, they must, in their turn, offer to American strategists conditions which would make the application of such strategy possible. They must eliminate, or at least render harmless, the huge Communist fifth columns in their countries. They are indeed working toward that end and making progress. But they cannot eliminate them completely without the risk of plunging their countries into civil war.

Meanwhile Moscow is trying to make impossible the strategy desired from us by western Europeans. By instructing the Communist leaders in western Europe openly to make subversive and treasonable pronouncements, Moscow is trying to convince us that we should not put our trust in western European countries as military allies.

It may be argued that we have made a blunder in starting this battle. But the problem of the moment is not analyzing past blunders, but how to avoid future blunders. And the indispensable precondition for avoiding blunders is always to bear in mind that in relations between nations, just as between individuals, the reaction is psychologically at least as important as the action. And since one of the main objectives of the North Atlantic Pact is to reassure western Europeans, we must give more consideration to their psychological reactions — much as we may dislike and disapprove of them.

How the 'Filibuster Rule' Failed

Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) seldom makes a speech. In 1926 Hayden and Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona filibustered for six weeks against the Boulder Dam bill, but that was the one notable interruption in Hayden's 36 years of quiet service on Capitol Hill.

Now chairman of the Rules Committee, Senator Hayden was called upon last week to analyze the faults of the 1917 cloture rule and explain how they would be remedied by the Hayden-Wherry resolution which would enable the Senate to cut off debate on any subject, at any time, by a two-thirds vote. The speech was a thorough exposition of the filibuster problem, and is reprinted here in part:

EVERY Senator on both sides of the aisle completely agrees that the Senate should remain a place where he will have the right freely and adequately to express his ideas as to what is best for his State, for the Nation, and for the world. The sole issue is whether there should be any limitation at all upon that right, and, if so, what is a reasonable limitation.

Those of us who favor the adoption of the pending amendment to the Senate rules are convinced that every legislative body has an inherent right to bring debate to a close in order that it may perform the principal function for which it was created, namely, the enactment of laws.

It is of record that 32 years ago 88 Senators were in favor of the adoption of rule XXII, which provides that by a two-thirds vote of those voting debate may be brought to a close. It is also of record that only three Senators voted against the adoption of that rule. The decision was reached only after due and careful consideration, and the pending resolution does not propose to change the rule except to make it effective.

Unfortunately the rule as adopted in 1917 has proved in later years to be of no practical value. The two principal defects in it are, first, that it does not prevent indefinite debate on motions to amend the Senate Journal; second, that it is not applicable until a bill or other measure has been made the unfinished business of the Senate.

Harrison Discovery

IT WAS five years after the rule was adopted that the first breach was made in it. On November 27, 1922, Senator Samuel Shortridge of California moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. R. 13, the Dyer antilynching bill. The motion was, of course, debatable, but no Senator made any inquiry at that time as to whether a petition could be filed to bring to a close debate on that motion. Another device was used when, on the following day, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi moved to amend the Journal, and proceeded to discuss his motion.

I am advised by Mr. Watkins, the Senate parliamentarian, that Senator Harrison came to him the morning after the proposal to take up the Dyer bill was made and inquire with respect to rule 3 of the Senate, which provides that a motion to amend or correct the Journal shall be deemed a privileged question, to be proceeded with until disposed of. The parliamentarian advised the Senator from Mississippi that a motion to amend the Journal would have a privileged status, and that was the way, on November 28, 1922, it was determined to proceed to prevent the enactment of the Dyer antilynching bill.

Similar motions were made and debated during the succeeding days, until on December 4 the majority leader, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, gave notice that no further effort would be made to pass the bill during the life of that Congress.

In my opinion it was unnecessary for Senator Harrison to adopt the method he chose to prevent the enactment of that bill. I believe he and his colleagues could have relied upon the two-thirds vote provided for in rule XXII. I say that because I am satisfied that more than one-third of the membership of the Senate at that time would not have given approval to a bill to authorize the Federal Government to permit judgments in damages against counties within a State as a result of the occurrence of a crime within county boundaries. My opinion is fortified by the fact that after 16 years of continuous agitation for similar legislation, the Senate twice refused to adopt cloture.

In January and February, 1938, petitions to bring debate to an end on an anti-lynching bill were defeated, one by a vote of 37 to 51, the second by a vote of 42 to 46. In neither instance could a simple majority be obtained.

McKellar Ruling

THE offering of filibustering on amendments to the Journal was the only method used until very recent years, when another way of getting around rule XXII was discovered. The new method was to have prolonged debate on whether a bill should become the unfinished business of the Senate. I believe it was the senior Senator from Tennessee (Mr. McKellar), who, as president pro tempore, first decided that a cloture petition could not be filed until after a bill or resolution had been made the unfinished business.

That decision was strongly reenforced last year by a ruling made by the senior Senator from Michigan (Mr. Vandenberg), who as president pro tempore, was compelled by all the precedents of the Senate to hold that the Senate would first have to make a bill the pending measure before any steps could be taken to bring debate to a close.

The resolution now pending before the Senate will close those two loopholes, and it proposes to accomplish that result, first, by providing:

"If at any time, notwithstanding the provisions of rule III or rule VI or any other rule of the Senate—"

I may interpolate that rule III relates to the approval of the Journal, and rule VI relates to the approval of credentials, motions with relation to both of which are declared to be highly privileged.

"If at any time notwithstanding the provisions of rule III or rule VI or any other rule of the Senate, a motion, signed by 16 Senators, to bring to a close debate upon any measure, motion, or other matter pending before the Senate, or the unfinished business, is presented to the Senate, the presiding officer shall at once state the motion."

The present rule merely states: "To bring to a close the debate upon any pending measure."

The words to be added by the resolution now before the Senate are:

"Any measure, motion, or other matter * * * or the unfinished business."

Your committee is of the opinion that such a change in the text will completely plug up all the loopholes and make rule XXII effective under any and all circumstances.

Reason for Oversight

ANY member of the present Senate will, quite naturally, want to know why the Senators who drafted rule XXII in 1917 did not realize that it was faulty, and so faulty as to be wholly ineffective. The answer is that up to that time, in all the previous history of the Senate, every extended discussion, every filibuster, had been conducted to prevent the enactment of some particular piece of legislation which was regularly before the Senate for consideration.

Whether it was a bill or a resolution it was always a pending measure which every Senator had a perfect right to discuss for any length of time which suited his convenience. Up to that time it was unnecessary for any Senator to seek an indirect way of delaying the passage of any bill to which he was opposed. He could always make a direct attack and keep it up so long as he had the physical strength to stand on his feet and talk.

It probably never occurred to any Senator that amending the Journal or debating a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill was a good way to use up the time of the Senate. If either of those courses of action had ever been an established practice in the Senate, we could be sure that the Senators who drafted rule XXII would have known about it and would have found a way to put an end to any such practice.

What the authors of the rule sought to correct was the evils with which they were all very familiar and that is exactly what rule XXII does. The Committee on Rules and Administration two years ago, and again very recently, has reached the conclusion that rule XXII is basically sound and, with the changes that have been recommended as to its wording, it should remain and will remain a most valuable standing rule.

Considered in 1915

THE history behind the rule I have found to be interesting, and with the permission of Senators I shall review what occurred for a period of two years before the rule was adopted.

An examination of the Congressional Record discloses that changing the rules of the Senate was a subject of consideration during the year 1915. The first definite action taken by the Senate that year was on a point of order by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska that a two-thirds vote was required to suspend the rules. Rule 40, as it is still written, merely requires that one day's notice in writing shall be given of the rule to be suspended.

The reasoning which led the Senate to that conclusion is that the rules are adopted without reference to any particular bill and that a simple majority should have the right to lay them aside in order to secure the passage of a controversial measure.

The same line of reasoning would imply that the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators should be obtained in order to amend a long standing rule of the Senate.

Shortly afterward, in the same year, Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the committee on February 11, 1915:

Resolved, That rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended as follows: Insert after the words "to lay on the table" in rule XXII the following:

"Any Senator arising in his place and asserting that, in his opinion, an attempt is being made on the floor of the Senate to obstruct, hinder, or delay the right of the Senate to proceed to a vote, the Chair shall, without permitting any debate thereon, put the question to the Senate, 'Is it the sense of the Senate that an attempt is being made to obstruct, hinder, or delay a vote?' And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative, then it shall be in order, to the exclusion of the consideration of all other questions, for any Senator to move to fix a time for voting on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto; and the said motion shall be decided without debate: Provided, however, That the time fixed in said motion for taking the vote on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto shall be at least two calendar days after the day on which said motion is made."

On the following day the resolution was reported adversely from the Committee on Rules and no further action was taken on it.

Both Mississippians

IT IS difficult to believe that any time there could have been two Senators from Mississippi who favored cloture by a majority vote, yet such was once the case. I have shown that the senior Senator from the State, Mr. Williams, submitted a resolution to that effect, and I now quote extracts from the remarks of the junior Senator, Mr. Vardaman, made on the day that the present rule XXII was adopted:

I wish to say in the outset that there is no greater necessity for cloture in the Senate today than has existed for the last quarter of a century. Certainly not since I became a member of this very honorable body. I am for this resolution not because of anything that has happened in the immediate past, nor because of anything that has been done or has been left undone by the last session of Congress. I am for it because I am of the opinion that there should be a rule limiting debate—a rule by which questions can be brought before the Senate for final determination whether it meets the approbation of all the Senators or not.

"I have always been in favor of cloture, but I would prefer that the rule would provide for

THIS WEEK'S Life is unusually good. A perfect mirror of a screwball world, it reports everything from the pyramid club craze (a sort of chain letter revival) to French troubles in Indo-China, done with a magnificent picture story. There's an excellent profile of Michigan's young Governor, G. Mennen "Soapy" Williams. A "disclosure" piece on housing conditions for Army families around Army camps does a devastating job of muckraking in four shattering pages. The duPont greenhouse in Longwood, Pa., where 3½ landscaped acres bloom under glass, is beautifully reproduced. A new television show with a bright young dance team (cover) completes the book, with the exception of the Churchill memoires and a preceding story on the Tory party today.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

McCarran Converted to Filibuster

By Drew Pearson

THE filibuster to save the filibuster is supposed to be a Southern show, but a black-sheep Western Senator is set to join the great talkathon. He is Nevada's silver-haired silver lobbyist, Senator Pat McCarran.

He was converted to the Southern cause the other day at a closed-door meeting of Democratic Senators. Majority Leader Scott Lucas called the meeting in a last-ditch effort to head off the filibuster. He tried to waylay the anti-filibuster measure and bring up the bill restoring reciprocal trade instead, though he admitted the Democrats were bound by agreement to take up the former.

Western senators, except for McCarran, refused to dodge the issue. Able Senator Lester Hunt, who went to Wyoming to play baseball and stayed to become Governor and now Senator, jumped to his feet. He warned that there was no "honorable way to withdraw from our agreement."

Earlier, Hunt had tried to keep the anti-filibuster measure bottled in the Rules Committee, because he feared it would get in the way of the President's "Fair Deal" program. But since the Democrats had pledged to bring it up, Hunt now argued that the Democrats must keep their word.

"Let's bring it up and kick it around for awhile," he urged.

His colleague from Wyoming, peppery Joe O'Mahoney, agreed that the Democrats should keep faith with the country and stand by their agreement.

This brought Virginia's A. Willis Robertson to his feet with a threat to filibuster "as long as my breath holds out." Other Southern Senators followed in angry succession. Then, to everyone's surprise, along with the Southerners, Nevada's Pat McCarran reared up and announced he would defend the right of the small States to have their say on the Senate floor.

"The Senate is the last place," declared McCarran, "where the small States have an equal voice."

He would not vote, he served notice, for any rules change that might shut off that voice.

SMART Chinese—Real reason the Communist offensive has stopped short of Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow—though they are ripe for plucking—is that the Communists can't feed all the people. Half the food being shipped into these great Nationalist cities is supplied by the United States. The Communists don't want to risk cutting off this food, so choose to let America continue shipping it in—until the spring harvest. Then, once the Communists' own bread bins are full, they will march in.

Red Cross Feud—A feud between the Red Cross and various hospitals has developed over control of the Nation's blood bank. This is of critical importance in case of war, because radiation from atomic explosions destroys blood cells, and the only treatment is to pump healthy blood into the victims. As a defense measure, the United States has been quietly stockpiling blood plasma, but the Red Cross now wants sole authority over the supply. At a secret conference in New York, however, military doctors put their foot down, bluntly told the Red Cross that any hospital or society that kept blood plasma on hand should have authority to use it in case of emergency.

Red Army vs. Norway—The American Embassy in Moscow has advised Washington that Russia will mass troops on Norway's border if the Norwegians go through with their plan to sign the North Atlantic Alliance. But—and this is important—the embassy also indicates that the Russians will not invade Norway no matter how loud the Kremlin screams.

Vet Housing Frauds—Because veterans' complaints against housing frauds haven't been handled rapidly, Housing Expediter Tighe Woods will shake up and consolidate his staff. However, it is lack of jurisdiction that has kept the government from acting on most veterans' complaints against builders, for housing built after January 1, 1947, does not come under the law. Last year, the Housing Expediter received 200,000 complaints from veterans who felt they had been gypped, but over half had to be turned down because the houses were built after January 1, 1947.

Matter of Fact

Foxy Czech Feels Kremlin Claw

By Stewart Alsop

ACCORDING to intelligence reports considered entirely reliable, a short man, with a sharp face and shifty eyes, is now in jail in Prague. He is awaiting trial before a People's Court for treasonable acts against the state. His name is Dr. Zdenek Fierlinger, and since the coup of February 1948, he has been the "Socialist" Vice Premier of Czechoslovakia.

His recent history is revealing. He was Czech Ambassador in Moscow before the war, and at the insistence of the obscene Joachim Von Ribbentrop, he was expelled at the time of the Nazi-Soviet pact. Nothing daunted, he returned as the emissary of the Czech government in exile. During the war he decided, apparently, on which side his bread was buttered.

In 1944 the Czech military mission in Moscow warned the aging President Benes that Fierlinger was selling out to the Kremlin. Benes ordered him to London. Fierlinger, with the backing of the Kremlin, was already strong enough to defy Benes, replying that he was ill, and "too busy" to leave Moscow.

Beginning of the End

THE first postwar Czech government was formed in the Soviet Union, at a conference between Czech Communists and non-Communists. Fierlinger ostensibly represented the Socialists. His hand strengthened by the Kremlin's backing, he was able to browbeat the non-Communists into yielding key posts to the Communists. That was the beginning of the end of Czech freedom.

Yet Fierlinger still had important services to render his Soviet masters. With Russian support, he became head of the Socialist Party, and Prime Minister. As premier, he turned over Czech Carpathia and the Czech uranium mines to the Russians. He was replaced as premier by the Communist Gottwald in 1946, but he remained obedient.

A revolt was organized against Fierlinger's leadership. In November, 1947, Fierlinger was replaced as leader of the Social Democrats. This in turn endangered the Communists' control of Parliament, which had been safe as long as the Socialists were tied, by Fierlinger, to the Communists' chariot wheels. This new independence of the Socialists could not be tolerated. In February, Fierlinger presented to the Socialists the Communists' demands for complete subservience. The Socialists refused to go along. Then Fierlinger made a crucial telephone call to his Communist friends. The Communists acted on a prearranged plan. Socialist headquarters were taken over by force, and freedom in Czechoslovakia died.

Made Vice Premier

FOR HIS services, Fierlinger was made vice premier in the new government. He was given no power, to be sure, and in June last year his party was dissolved, and its newspaper suppressed. Yet no doubt he felt secure, with his official title and his record of unblemished obedience to his masters in the Kremlin.

Now he is in jail. No doubt he will soon experience certain delicate techniques of persuasion, and will subsequently explain, before a People's Court, how he served as a spy in the service of the Anglo-American imperialists.

The political significance of Dr. Fierlinger's fate is obvious. The terror in eastern Europe will now reach out for even the most willing and subservient of the Kremlin's stooges. Men like Rumania's premier, Petru Groza, are no doubt next on the list.

The terror is itself a measure of the Kremlin's fear of the deep hatred of the Soviet Union in the vast new Soviet empire. That this fear can extend even to so servile a lackey as Fierlinger has real political importance.

Yet there is a larger meaning in Fierlinger's fate. As he reflects on his past services to the Kremlin, and the strange coin in which he is now being paid, Fierlinger is no doubt learning a lesson which others have learnt before him. The men who run the world Communist movement are exceedingly unsentimental people, and their ingratitude towards those who "work with" them, which means to surrender to them, is a good deal sharper than a serpent's tooth.

Hayden Traces Cloture History

the invocation of the cloture by a majority rather than by a two thirds vote. I believe in majority rule."

But to return to what happened in 1915, on February 18, Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended by adding a new rule, as follows:

"Rule 41. It shall be in order during the morning hour to make a motion that any bill or resolution then on the calendar shall be considered under the terms of this rule. Such motion, when made, shall lie over 1 day and shall then be decided without debate. No Senator shall be allowed to vote on a motion to consider a bill or resolution under this rule who is bound by any caucus or conference of Senators to vote in any particular way on said bill or resolution, or any amendment thereto, but when any Senator's right to vote upon such motion is challenged, such Senator shall be allowed to determine for himself whether he is disqualified from voting on said motion.

"When it has been decided to consider a bill or resolution under this rule, the same shall first be considered in general debate, during which time no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall be allowed to speak more than three hours. At the close of general debate the bill or resolution shall be read for amendments, and on any amendment that may be offered no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall speak for more than 15 minutes:

Provided, That any Senator who has not spoken for three hours in general debate shall, in addition to said 15 minutes, be allowed additional time, but in no case shall such additional time or times, including the time used by such Senator in general debate, exceed in the aggregate three hours; Provided further, That if unanimous consent for additional time is asked in behalf of any Senator, either during general debate or when the bill or resolution is being considered for amendment, and the same is refused, it shall be in order by motion to extend the time of such Senator for a time to be named in said motion, which motion shall be decided without debate. When the bill or resolution is being read for amendment all debate shall be confined to the amendment which is then pending."

The resolution was debated and laid upon the table on February 19. The Norris resolution provided for cloture by majority vote but the interesting part of it is that the Senator recognized that pursuant to a binding caucus or conference agreement an actual minority of the Senate could control the enactment of legislation.

Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, stated the case very well when he said:

"Domination by a majority in conference or caucus whereby a minority of this body could determine the proceedings of the Senate."

Studied for Month

EARLY in the following year, 1916, several amendments to limit debate were submitted, two of which were referred to the Committee on Rules. The resolution submitted by Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, reads:

Resolved, That the Standing Rules of the Senate be, and they hereby are, amended as follows: At the close of rule XXII, add the following: "Provided, however, That when any 10 Senators in writing, move that the debate should be brought to a close, the Chair shall, without permitting any debate thereon, put the question to the Senate: "Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate should be brought to a close?" and if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by a two thirds vote of those voting, then the pending question, bill, or resolution shall be in order, to the exclusion of all other questions and business. And thereafter, the motion being so carried, no Senator shall be entitled to speak more than one hour in all on the question, bill, or resolution or amendments thereto, or any motion affecting the same.

"No dilatory motion shall be in order, and it shall be the duty of the presiding officer to declare such motion out of order when the question of order is raised by a Senator or to immediately submit the question without debate to the Senate."

About the same time Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia submitted the following:

Resolved, that the Standing Rules of the Senate be, and they hereby are, amended as follows: At the close of rule XXII, add: "Provided, however, that if 32 Senators present to the Senate before the reports of standing and select committees, provided for in the order of business during the morning hour, a signed motion to bring to a close the debate upon a bill which is the unfinished business, thereupon at the hour of 2 o'clock the chair shall, without debate, put the question to the Senate:

"'Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate should be brought to a close?'

"And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by a two-thirds vote, then said bill shall be in order to the exclusion of all other business.

"'Thereafter no Senator shall be entitled to speak more than one hour on the bill, the amendments thereto, and motions affecting the same, and it shall be the duty of the chair to keep the time of each Senator who speaks. Until the bill is disposed of no dilatory motion shall be in order, and appeals from the decision of the chair shall be decided without debate."

The Smith and the Owen resolutions were given careful consideration for over a month by the Committee on Rules, which, on May 16, 1916, unanimously recommended the adoption of a substitute resolution (S. Res. 195) which was reported to the Senate by Senator Smith of Georgia and is as follows:

Resolved, that the Standing Rules of the Senate be, and they hereby are, amended as follows: At the close of rule XXII add: "Provided, however, that if 16 Senators present to the Senate at any time a signed motion to bring to a close the debate upon any pending measure, the presiding officer shall at once state the motion to the Senate and at close of the morning hour on the following calendar day lay the motion before the Senate and direct that the secretary call the roll, and, upon the ascertainment that a quorum is present, the chair shall, without debate, submit to the Senate by an aye-and-nay vote the question:

"Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate shall be brought to a close?'

"And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by a two-thirds vote of those voting, then said measure shall be in order to the exclusion of all other business, except a motion to recess or adjourn.

"Thereafter no Senator shall be entitled to speak more than one hour on the bill, the amendments thereto, and motions affecting the same, and it shall be the duty of the chair to keep the time of each Senator who speaks. No dilatory motions shall be in order, and all points of order and appeals from the decision of the chair shall be decided without debate."

It will be observed that the addition to rule XXII as reported to the Senate fixed the number of signatures to a cloture petition at 16, or one sixth of the total membership of the Senate, instead of 32, or one third of the membership, as proposed by Senator Smith, or by 10 Senators as proposed by Senator Owen.

The Owen resolution referred to cloture on "the pending question, bill or resolution" while the Smith resolution mentioned only "a bill which is the unfinished business of the Senate." The committee resolution used the term "any pending measure" and later refers to "the bill and amendments thereto."

The substitute resolution was placed on the Senate Calendar on Ma. 16, 1916, and there was discussion in regard to it on two different occasions but no further action was taken during the Sixty-fourth Congress.

Bipartisan Committee

THE present Rule XXII was adopted on April 8, 1917, at a special session of the Senate held at the beginning of the Sixty-fifth Congress The rule was drafted by a committee of five Senators from the Democratic Conference and five Senators from the Republican Conference. There is no record of their names, but there is no doubt that among the 10 there were Senators who had been members of the Committee on Rules during the previous Congress. To clearly indicate that the resolution reported to the Senate on May 16, 1916, was used as the basis for Rule XII as adopted on April 8, 1917, I ask leave to insert in the Record a copy of the rule with the differences between it and the 1916 resolution printed in italics.

RULE XXII

2. If at any time a motion, signed by 16 Senators, to bring to a close the debate upon any pending measure is presented to the Senate, the presiding officer shall at once state the motion to the Senate, and one hour after the Senate meets on the following calendar day but one, he shall lay the motion before the Senate and direct that the Secretary call the roll, and upon the ascertainment that a quorum is present, the Presiding Officer shall, without debate, submit to the Senate by an aye-and-nay vote the question:

"Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate shall be brought to a close?"

And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by a two-thirds vote of those voting then said measure shall be the unfinished business to the exclusion of all other business to until disposed of.

Thereafter no Senator shall be entitled to speak in all more than one hour on the pending measure, the amendments thereto, and motions affecting the same, and it shall be the duty of the presiding officer to keep the time of each Senator who speaks. Except by unanimous consent, no amendment shall be in order after the vote to bring the debate to a close, unless the same has been presented and read prior to that time. No dilatory motion, or dilatory amendment, or amendment not germane shall be in order. Points of order, including questions of relevancy, and appeals from the decision of the presiding officer, shall be decided without debate.

(At this point Senator Hayden listed and described the members of the Rules Committee which unanimously agreed to report the amendment to the Senate.)

Mr. President, knowing those men and the reputation they bore for integrity and fair dealing, I do not believe they helped to write a rule, and urged its adoption, which they knew was defective, and which time has proved to be valueless.

In view of the repeated assertions that the requirement of a two-thirds majority to close debate in the Senate is unfair and undemocratic, I beg leave to quote from a statement that I made to the Committee on Rules and Administration on January 24, when the hearings began on the several cloture resolutions which had been referred to that committee. At that time I said:

"In any event this committee must always remember that under the most favorable circumstances a two-thirds majority will be necessary to amend the existing rule. From a practical standpoint the burden of proof rests heavily upon those who advocate majority cloture. They must not only demonstrate why it should be done but how it can be done.

"In connection with permitting the majority to rule on all measures pending before the Senate, there is a significant fact which this committee cannot afford to overlook. Unlike the House of Representatives, representation in the Senate is wholly without reference to the total population of the United States or to the population of any State. This is a situation that cannot be changed by an act of Congress since the Constitution provides that 'no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.'

"The Senate was created as a curb upon hasty action by the House of Representatives. It is a continuing body with only one-third of its membership to be elected every 2 years. Being solely responsible to the voters in their own States, tenture of office of Senators has no direct relation to the will of the majority of voters throughout the Nation.

No 'Precipitate Action'

IN CONNECTION with the application or the two-thirds rule, I should like to point out that it is necesary that only one more than one-half of the Senators present shall vote for a measure in order to assure its passage by a majority. The two-thirds rule requires that there shall be at least two Senators in favor to each one who is opposed when the roll is called. The difference between the votes of 49 and 64 Senators is not just 15 votes. It is much more than that, because the actual effect is to transfer the balance of power to influence the result from 1 senator to 15 Senators, thereby making it 15 times more difficult to secure favorable action. With but 66 Senators present and 30 absent, the difficulty is at least tenfold, because the majority of 34 must be expanded to 44.

Whatever the number of Senators who may be present when a vote is taken, the two-thirds rule places a sufficient handicap upon precipitate action.

To show that the requirement of a two-thirds majority is not unreasonable or unprecedented, I beg leave to direct attention to the fact that the organic law under which our Federal Government functions imposes that same requirement in eight different instances. . . .

At the time when rule XXII was adopted, there were 34 members of the Senate who had had previous service in the House of Representatives. Frequent reference is made to the great differences which exist between the rules that have been adopted to regulate procedure in the two bodies at either end of the Capitol. It is obvious that time will not permit 435 Representatives to have the same freedom of debate as can be accorded to 96 Senators.

Of the 96 Senators at that time, 34 of them, as I have said, were former members of the House of Representatives. I have no doubt that many of them felt as I did when I first came to this body from the House of Representatives. I must frankly confess that I did not like the way the Senate carried on its business. I had been for 15 years in the other body, and I had come to rely upon its very able leadership, which took care of what was to happen.

It took me some time to realize the freedom which I had as a United States Senator. I would come upon the floor of the Senate expecting to offer an amendment to a bill, but would find some other Senator occupying the floor for an hour or two before I could have an opportunity to say anything or do anything about what I had in mind.

Perhaps I would even have to wait a day. That could not happen in the House of Representatives. But as time went on, I became firmly convinced that I was mistaken, and that there is value in the rules here in the Senate.

Rectifying an Error

IN CONCLUSION, let me repeat what I said in the beginning that all the Committee on Rules and Administration recommends is that the present rule XXII be made effective. It is not criticizing the principles upon which that rule was founded. Members of the committee agree to the wisdom of the Senators who wrote the rule. That they made an error in 1917 by not making it broad enough to cover all situations is obvious.

That is all we are trying to do at this time—to make a rule applicableunder any and all circumstances. But it will be a two thirds rule; it will be a rule that will permit any Senator, even after cloture is adopted, to express his views upon any question before a final vote is taken.

The Senators who took the time and trouble, after two years of study, to devise rule XXII in 1917 were wise legislators and they did a satisfactory piece of work, except that they did not look beyond the difficulties which had theretofore confronted them. Necessity is the mother of invention. After that action had been taken, someone else found that in order to accomplish his purpose and permit unlimited debate he could use other means. We are trying to produce a good, sound rule under which in no circumstances will it be possible to prevent the filing of a cloture petition for the purpose of closing debate.

Marquand Uses an Anthropologist To Dissect Small Town Snobbery

By Sterling North

POINT OF NO RETURN. By John P. Marquand. Little, Brown. 559 pp. $3.50.

PERHAPS a civilization should be known by the social satires it writes. By the time it achieves a Marquand it is becoming mature. By the time it acquires a Petronius, Waugh or Sartre it is becoming decadent.

"Point of No Return" stands with Marquand's "The Late George Apley" as one of the 10 or 12 most "civilized" novels ever written by American authors.

It has a number of qualities rare in American fiction: social perspective without bitterness; scientific detachment blended with warm sympathy; an astonishing grasp of our mores and tribal rites; wit; understatement; almost flawless characterizations, and, finally, form and balance.

In briefest outline, "Point of No Return" brackets one critical week in the life of Charles Grey, assistant vice president of a conservative New York banking house. During that week he revisits his boyhood town, Clyde, Mass., and relives his entire life.

Shocking Classification

A NATIVE'S return after years in the city can be disillusioning. For a number of reasons, however, Charles Grey's visit to Clyde is an enlightening and liberating experience.

Here where his grandfather was a respected judge, his father a complicated failure, where he went "steady" with a girl from lowly River st. and later deeply loved Jessica Lovell, daughter of one of the town's first families, Charles Grey is able to review his own life with friendly candor.

He is aided in this by partially adopting the viewpoint of his friend, Malcolm Bryant, a brilliant social anthropologist, who has used Clyde as a fascinating case study of social stratification, dividing its classes not only into upper, middle and lower, but subdividing each grand division into three substratifications.

Charles Grey is somewhat shocked to learn that although his grandfather, the judge, was "upper-upper class," his own family was "lower-upper." The explanation for this slip in social status lay in the personality of his father, one of the most completely portrayed characters in recent fiction.

Life with father Grey was a trial. Charming, impecunious, unjustifiably optimistic, boringly witty, pompously erudite, gently tyrannical, lacking in class consciousness, juvenile in his enthusiasm for his fire brigade, open-handed with those outside his family, scandalously inept with family finances, a social rebel and a stock market plunger—these were but a few of the attributes of John Grey, who quietly took poison after the stock market crash in 1929.

His son, Charles, is well aware that he has spent his entire life attempting to be the precise opposite of everything this father was, everything he stood for—a blueprint for personal rebellion which has enmeshed him all but irretrievably in dignity, dependability and Brooks Brothers clothing.

Fascinating Layer-Cake

WHAT is delightful about this book is the perception with which Marquand has portrayed small, significant social phenomena.

No one has captured the silken, subtle internecine warfare among ambitious young bankers as has Marquand. He has done equally well by modern suburban and country club life.

But his really masterful analysis is his picture of Clyde, Mass., in recent decades. The gradations between life on grimy River st., comfortable Spruce st. and fashionable Johnson st. reveal all the delicate nuances of small town snobbishness—ludicrous were they not of such vast import to American "democracy." First generation wealth cannot crack this society. But unearned inherited wealth is the open sesame.

Seen through the merciless eyes of social anthropology, this layer cake of New England society becomes as fascinating and as amusing as any study of African aborigines. And its basis is about as admirable.

Into this Procrustean bed are fitted each of the characters: Jessica Lovell, her smoothly vicious father, Charley's mother, brother and sister, the aunts and uncles, the neighbors next door, high school classmates, and all the other citizens of Clyde who seem to be acting out foredoomed lives in a pattern imposed upon them by the community.

Marquand appears to be saying that within the hive each of us has his assigned role. And that the only freedom any of us may enjoy is knowledge of our plight.

Charles Grey, returning to his suburban family, his bank and his possible promotion to a vice presidency, achieves that negative freedom through his new appraisal of his past. It is as near a happy ending as any satirist dares pen, circa 1949.

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

IT IS NOT the writing Capt. Walter Karig, but the writing Karigs now.

Mrs. (Eleanor) Karig and their two daughters, Mrs. Patricia Archer and Miss Keating Karig, are finishing a book of their own. Working title of the book, to be published by Rinehart, is "The Care and Prevention of Pets."

The subject is not surprising, since the Karig house at Seminary Hill, Alexandria, has long borne a suspicious resemblance to another author's demesne, Dr. William M. Mann's Zoo. At present the Karigs' holdings are down a bit, however.

"We're practically scraping the bottom of the barrel," Captain Karig says, "with only six Siamese cats, a Shetland pony and a Dobermann pinscher."

The old Count de Spotz, a coachdog and gentleman if there ever was one, is gone now, passing away in his thirteenth year. "He might have lived longer," Captain Karig says, "but a penchant for chasing after horseback riders overtaxed his heart."

Mrs. Karig and the girls are also illustrating their book, which is natural, inasmuch as Mrs. Karig was at one time supervisor of art in the Portsmouth, Va., schools and Mrs. Archer is a commercial artist.

As for Captain Karig, who happily considers himself "the only self-liquidating officer in the Navy," since his books have brought the Navy more in royalties than his salary costs it, he is finishing up the fifth and final volume of "Battle Report." The volume covers the period from Leyte Gulf to the Japanese surrender and will be completed in two or three weeks. It is slated for December publication.

Nicolay Milestone

MISS HELEN NICOLAY is due for twofold congratulations Wednesday. It will not only be her eighty-third birthday, but Longmans, Green is releasing that day her biography of her father, John G. Nicolay—"Mr. Lincoln's Secretary."

Nicolay, a newspaper editor in Pittsfield, Ill., met Lincoln in 1856. When Lincoln several years later became a candidate for President, Nicolay became his private secretary, a position he held throughout the Administration. Subsequently, with John Hay, he wrote the classic Lincoln biography.

Miss Nicolay, who was born in Paris and has lived in Washington since she was about 7, says, "I lived all my life in father's study." Her first literary task was to finish, after his death in 1901, a one-volume biography of Lincoln that he had started.

"After that, Century asked me to do a boys' life of Lincoln." It was published in 1906, and every several years since then she has had a book coming out. The most recent was a boys' life of General Eisenhower published by Century in 1945.

Publication of "Mr. Lincoln's Secretary" also marks another event. The Nicolay papers, deposited by Miss Nicolay at the Library of Congress, will be open to the public.

Sophomore Cynicism

'Historical' Novel New Low for Lewis

THE GOD-SEEKER. By Sinclair Lewis. Random House. 422 pp. $3.50

SINCLAIR LEWIS
. . . Dreary, repetitious

SINCLAIR LEWIS has written some remarkably bad books in his life, including the five which preceded "Main Street" and six of the nine which followed "Dodsworth." But "The God-Seeker" may easily prove to be the most vapid and callow of his long and uneven career.

This dreary, repetitious, cantankerous "historical" novel purports to relate the pilgrim's progress of one Aaron Gadd, carpenter son of a bigoted New England Calvinist, who goes West to save the souls of the Sioux in Minnesota territory.

Here he wrestles with Satan in the forms of sex, personal ambition, pride, skepticism, distaste for his fellow missionaries and momentary admiration for the native religion of the Indians, ending by marrying the half-breed "Princess" Selene Lanark, returning to his role as carpenter and joining a union.

Such a plot might have produced a noteworthy book filled with richly rewarding character studies and a thoughtful reconstruction of America's mid-eleventh century years of decision.

Instead, Lewis has used this "affirmative" novel for his usual soap-box orations, fulminations against creeds and sects, juvenile attempts to shock the godly, his usual crude views on sex and a rogue's gallery of totally unbelievable caricatures.

Nothing Lewis has to say about Methodists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and the various lesser communions is new or important. All of it has been said better by Robert Ingersoll, Brann the Iconoclast, H. L. Mencken, Voltaire, Renan and other scholarly skeptics.

But Lewis' thoroughly sophomoric cynicism could be forgiven if he had not tied it to a wild west Hollywood scenario of bad men and Indians, murder and melodrama, blizzards and daring rescues all enacted by the phoniest pioneers and red warriors this side of the Hal Roach comedy lot.

No character ever speaks in character in this book. They all rant in a sort of Sinclair Lewis dialect made up of atrocious grammar, debased theological verbiage and polysyllabic gibberish.

Don't waste your money, your time or your patience on this fifth-rate performance.—S. N.

Nazis' Misuse Of Medicine Documented

DOCTORS OF INFAMY. Alexander Mitscherlich, M.D., and Fred Mielke. Henry Schuman, Inc. 172 pp. $3.

The black history of German medicine distorted to human experimentation under Nazi doctrines has had full play in the press.

"Doctors of Infamy," translated by Heinz Norden, is a scientifically terse recounting of those criminal acts set down for posterity. It is also a general indictment of the profession that raised no hand against perversion of that profession in all of Germany.

All the atrocities performed in "the interest of science" are presented actually. Human guinea pigs subjected to high altitude, low pressure, freezing water, typhus and jaundice infections, amputations, bone grafts, mustard gas; sterilization and other tests, and mass exterminations.

The accounting emphasizes several points that received less stress in public print: (1) That the experiments, even when viewed with the impersonal eye of science, were of no real value and (2) that scientific reports of the work did appear in German scientific periodicals and evoked no protest from the medical profession of that country.

For the latter reason, "Doctors of Infamy" might well be a must document on the bookshelves of every physician in this country. Documentary evidence that not all the guilty ones paid for a nation's and a profession's shame: that even the noblest profession can be weak and corruptible.

Twenty physicians and three persons closely associated with the profession were tried for an assortment of crimes—including tortures, bestiality and sadism—by the American Military Tribunal in Nuernberg. Seven were condemned to death, nine were sentenced to jail and the rest acquitted.

The book makes clear that justice has not prevailed if the common man ever accepts the belief that the slate is clean, that the guilty have paid for their crimes.

Three Capek Novels Make Solid Fare

THREE NOVELS. By Karel Capek. Wyn. 469 pp. $3.75.

KAREL CAPEK, born in a small town in northern Bohemia in 1890, won an international reputation while still in his early thirties for his robot play, "R. U. R.," which in this country was popular with amateur groups as well as professional. Capek, however, was also an essayist of civilized wit, and a novelist.

Among his last works, before his death at Christmas, 1938, were the three novels translated by M. and R. Weatherall, in the present volume. They include "Hordubal," "An Ordinary Life," and "Meteor."

In the opening story, Juraj Hordubal returns to his native heath after a long sojourn in America, where he has been sweating it out in the coal mines and sending his money home to his wife. When finally home on the farm again, poor Hordubal finds himself practically an Enoch Arden: His wife has taken up with a dashing Magyar hired man, whom even Hordubal's young daughter prefers to her strange father.

In the end, Hordubal is stabbed in his bed. Was it just before he died in an advanced stage of tuberculosis contracted in the mines, or was it just after? Was it by his wife or by the hired man? It is for the reader to ponder.

"Meteor" concerns the identity of a fatally burned man, victim of a plane crash, and "An Ordinary Life" concerns a retired civil servant who, in writing his autobiography, finds difficulty in attempting to delimit himself, so much is the individual a part of all life.

These are not chichi stories backed by a big advertising appropriation, but good, solid philosophical novels worthy of the serious reader's attention.—L. G.

A Distinguished Biography

'Massive' Garrick Still a Hero

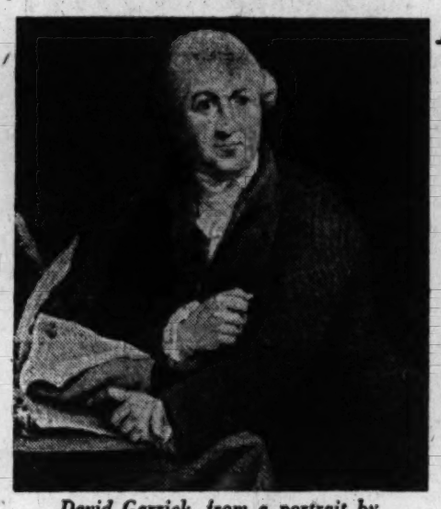
By Richard L. Coe

GARRICK. By Margaret Barton. Macmillan. 299 pp. $5.

NOTHING IS QUITE so ephemeral as the memory of a celebrated actor. Until the questionable perfection of the cinema, the great players lived on as stubborn ghosts in the writings of contemporary critics, letter writers and casual observers. How they sounded, how they achieved effects may have been approximated. Yet this is unsatisfactory, for acting that is acceptable one decade may seem ridiculous the next.

Of all the English-speaking players, none has achieved the posthumous repute of David Garrick. He gave his final performance the year of Bunker Hill, but, 173 years later, the magic of his 35 years on the stage still glows in the fading green rooms of his profession.

Margaret Barton now publishes yet another life of this actor. Her "Garrick" is a distinguished biography, notable for its painstaking research and fine prose. Miss Barton previously collaborated on three books with Sir Osbert Sitwell, which should give you a proper notion that her style is neither dry nor slovenly.



David Garrick, from a portrait by Robert Edge Pine

Just 'A Gentleman'

MISS BARTON sets her hero's stage by describing the style of acting to which mid-eighteenth-century London was accustomed, a form we would consider based on massive dignity, heavy elocution and disdainful perorations. To this setting the young actor who was billed as "A Gentleman" for "Richard III" one October night in 1741 for an out-of-the-way theater, brought liveliness, motion and what then passed for naturalism.

Garrick was short (5-feet-4, according to his own measurements), but he evidently made strong use of his face, quite a feat when you consider that the stage of that time was lighted only by candles.

In Miss Barton's words: "Overemphasis was essential in order to evoke the emotional response demanded by the parts Garrick played, and the subtleties of the modern stage production would have been lost on a dimly lit stage. Garrick did not set out to imitate the reactions of the man in the street. 'If you act only according to your own standard,' he said, 'or indeed according to the most natural model that exists, you will never be more than mediocre'."

Possibly Paralyzing

GARRICK'S arrival from Litchfield, where Dr. Johnson had been his tutor, was at the right period for his style. "An actor can only be judged by his ability to transport an audience of his contemporaries into a world of illusion, and it is dangerous to compare the technique and merits of an actor of one period with those of an actor of any other . . . In acting, as in all arts, a technique that helps one generation to expression is apt to paralyze the next."

Miss Barton's "Garrick" is by no means limited to theorizing. She traces his wanderings, gives you his family background neatly and ties the ends together with the death of his widow, an Austrian ballet dancer, at the age of 98, 40 years after her husband's passing.

She goes into long-forgotten quarrels, his unpopularity with his fellow actors, his relationships with Johnson, Goldsmith and others of The Club. Admitting his faults, Miss Barton remains enchanted with her chief actor.

There are some 16 handsome period reproductions as well as a brief appendix of Garrick's more noted writings and a particularly fine chapter on the physical theater of the period, "The Manager."

An Easy Laugh Is Had by All

Pollsters Bidden to Go And Misguess No More

By John J. Corson

THE POLLSTERS. By Lindsay Rogers. Knopf. 239 pp. $2.75.

THE PEOPLE KNOW BEST. By Morris L. Ernst and David Loth. Public Affairs Press. 169 pp. $2.50.

THE poll takers, Gallup, Roper, Crossley and all the rest, have been fair game for critics and punsters, as well, since last November 3. The New Yorker, the Police Gazette and the Journal of the American Statistical Association alike have filled their pages with more or less devastating post mortems. Now the book publishers enter the fray.

ROGERS

Ernst and Loth's book shows many evidences of their haste to have a part in the fun. More than half of this book is a scissors and paste-pot assembly of the wrong guesses and false prophecies of pollsters, editors, columnists and radio commentators. Their words are reprinted for all to see how wrong they were. Such accompanying comment as is offered is largely a rubbing of salt into these sore wounds.

In retrospect, their statements are more amazing than amusing. Not only do the doctors of the science of polling look bad. But Republican and Democratic newspapers, liberal and conservative columnists and always-objective commentators, too, all revealed how little their opinions could be relied upon.

Ernst and Loth are not concerned alone that these opinion forming writers and speakers were wrong. They object principally to the air of authority with which they led the reader or listener to place credence in their opinions. They point to claims of oracular knowledge and scientific understanding subtly implied in writings and statements which encouraged the consumer to accept and act upon their statements.

Appeal for Doubt

THESE writers appeal to citizens to prevent another case of such debacle by exercising "A steady skepticism, a healthy doubt, a critical mind." Simultaneously, they urge the press to review, in the light of this debacle, its own responsibility; its responsibility for publishing a higher standard of professional reporting and polling upon which citizens may place greater reliance.

Lindsay Rogers' book, as its title suggests, concentrates on "The Pollsters." He is no more merciful in his appraisal; his criticism is scathing, but also witty and, at times, profound.

First, Dr. Rogers makes a good case that the pollsters have never agreed among themselves as to what "public opinion" is. He quotes Gallup, Roper and others to support his point. And then in a similar manner, he argues that the pollsters are unable to measure, in any scientific sense, the public opinion they write about but can not define.

Turning to the science of polling, Dr. Rogers trots out the principal skeletons in the poll takers' closet. He describes the weaknesses as well as the accomplishments of "sampling." He illustrates that in asking the questions the pollers can influence the answers they receive. And he reviews again the reasons why the forecasts of the 1948 election went wrong.

Inaccuracies Cited

DIGGING still further into the closet, he emphasizes the simple fact that many of those who are polled either are uninformed on the matters about which they are asked, or have no opinion. And he presents a number of quotations to show the inaccuracies with which the poll results have been published.

By and large, his criticisms of the "science" and techniques of polling are well founded, if sometimes overdrawn. But Dr. Rogers is more interesting and convincing when he sticks to his last. He is a political scientist by trade, and one of the best in the business. And his observations as to the influence of polls on the workings of a democracy are more significant.

Ours, he makes clear, is a representative Government in which elected representatives rule, not the people. This, he argues, the pollsters have overlooked. Indeed Gallup et. al. contend, he writes, that once the people have been polled and their "yeses" and "noes" counted, the legislators should act accordingly. Dr. Rogers, as did Edmund Burke and Lord Bryce before him, heartily disagrees.

We do not have a Government by "national town meeting" he argues, and we want statesmen, not politicians who will wait around until the pollsters have told them what they should do or how they should vote.

Of these two books, Dr. Rogers' is far more substantial. It is entertaining and readable, too. It leaves no place for polls of public opinion. But it recognizes the utility of polling techniques in market research and even in the forecasting of elections—if the pollsters will go to work, improve their methods and straighten out their thinking.

His Most Reactionary Tract

T. S. Eliot Does Better at Poetry

NOTES TOWARD THE DEFINITION OF CULTURE. By T. S. Eliot. Harcourt, Brace. 128 pp. $2.50.

THE MERE FACT that T. S. Eliot took the Nobel Prize for literature in 1948 and has written over the years a sheaf of provocative poetry, should not blind us to the fact that as a social philosopher he leaves much to be desired.

T. S. ELIOT

Expatriate, classicist, royalist, apologist for British Toryism, Anglo-Catholic convert and outspoken reviler of the middle and lower classes, this St. Louis poet and critic has finally become the intellectual Colonel Blimp of English letters.

To compare him to Henry James is unfair to James, who was always able to criticize sharply the wastrel international set with whom he ran. To compare him to the bitter Henry Adams is likewise unfair, since Adams was at least a sound historian and never merely a dilettante.

But, like James and Adams, Thomas Stearns Eliot takes an unholy delight in underscoring the approach of chaos. Instead of helping to create new values or even adapting old ones, he withdraws into his ivory tower and chants his Jeremiads.

His latest book is merely the most sharply reactionary of his many political tracts—the most egotistical, authoritarian and confused.

Here are a few typical dicta from the tablets:

". . . if it seems monstrous to him (the reader) that anyone should have 'advantages of birth'—I do not ask him to change his faith, I merely ask him to stop paying lip service to culture."

". . . no culture can appear or develop except in relation to a religion."

"What is important is a structure of society in which there will be, from 'top' to 'bottom,' a continuous gradation of cultural levels . . ."

". . . to insure the transmission of the culture of these different levels, there must be groups of families persisting, from generation to generation, each in the same way of life."

"It is important that a man should feel himself to be, not merely a citizen of a particular nation, but a citizen of a particular part of his country, with local loyalties. These, like loyalty to class, arise out of loyalty to the family."

"In a healthy stratified society, public affairs would be a responsibility not equally borne; a greater responsibility would be inherited by those who inherited special advantages, and in whom self-interest, and interest for the sake of their families ('a stake in the country') should cohere with public spirit."

"The equality-of-opportunity dogma . . . derives emotional reinforcement from the belief in the mute inglorious Milton. This myth assumes that a great deal of first-rate ability . . . is being wasted for lack of education."

"And we know that, whether education can foster and improve culture or not, it can surely adulterate and degrade it . . . destroying our ancient edifices to make ready the ground upon which the barbarian nomads of the future will encamp in their mechanized caravans."

Along with incidental slurs at American democracy and American "imperialism," a forthright attack upon public education and a smattering of half-understood sociological and anthropological concepts, this constitutes the new book by the latest Nobel Prize winner in literature. Probably not since the prize went to Rabindranath Tagore has it been so carelessly conferred.—STERLING NORTH.

Poland's Friend as Biased as Foes

POLAND STRUGGLES FORWARD. By William Cary. 192 pages. Greenberg. $3.

IS THERE something in the air of present-day Poland that prevents the writing of honest and truthful books about it? Ever since the war we have had a succession of one-sided books accusing the Polish government of numberless crimes, and minimizing or ignoring Poland's economic recovery. Now we have a book that lurches just as far in the opposite direction.

The author, William Cary, taught at Bowdoin and Harvard, served for a few years in Government housing agencies, and then spent 18 months in Europe as associate director of the Unitarian Service Committee.

He visited Poland in the summer and fall of 1947, and found nothing to criticize and everything to praise. His book could not have been more flattering if it had been written by the Polish Information Service.

One might respect it more if it simply told the story of Poland's astonishing comeback. As it is, the author seems to have absorbed the official "line" with the ease and skill of a sword-swallower.

He repeats the grotesque charges that General Bor-Komorowski, leader of the tragic 1944 uprising in Warsaw, "abandoned the city to the Germans" instead of "fighting" to join the Red Army just across the river—the Red Army which sat immobile for weeks within sight and sound of the holocaust in the capital. He ignores the Soviet invasion and annexation of eastern Poland, and deals in perfunctory fashion with the elections the West found "fraudulent." One passage, perhaps, is enough to sample the flavor of the book:

"It is no longer entirely a secret, despite powerful efforts to keep it so, that such countries as Great Britain, France, western Germany and Italy are politically and economically bogged down; and that, at the same time, Poland and other countries of eastern Europe are moving ahead at a rapid rate."

Really, the Polish people deserve better defenders and apologists than this.—FERDINAND KUHN, JR.

Chinese Reds Void Labor Of Years

THE MAJOR FOREIGN POWERS: The Governments of Great Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China. By John C. Ranney and Gwendolen M. Carter. 865 pp. plus 142 pp. of notes and index. Harcourt Brace. $7.50.

THE FATES have not been kind to these two members of the Smith College faculty. They have written a gigantic college textbook on comparative government, really four volumes in one, and have crammed it with research that must have taken years of their lives.

Yet almost a fifth of their vast book deals with the government of China, and the volume appears at the very moment when Kuomintang China is in dissolution. Except for a survey of Chinese history and social conditions, and a few pages on Chinese communism, this section of the book has nothing but an antiquarian interest now.

The book is worth its weight and bulk for its facts and judgments on Britain, France and the Soviet Union. This is a sounder guide to Socialist Britain than, for example, Francis Williams recent one-sided book on the subject. It contains one of the fullest accounts in existence of the Fourth Republic in France and how it works. It makes a gallant effort to be unprejudiced in explaining the Soviet system.

The authors are not wishful thinkers; they see no sign that the Kremlin is ready to relax its iron grip; or that the Soviet Union will learn how to combine liberty and security in the foreseeable future.

It is too bad that this book, like so many college texts, is so forbidding in its format. One pities all the college boys and girls who will have to carry this monstrous volume around the campus. Yet they and general readers will find knowledge and guidance in it, and a better understanding of the world we live in.—F. K.

Kinsey Landslide

LAWRENCE SAUNDERS, whose firm of W. P. Saunders published Kinsey's "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," said the other day that when the manuscript reached him, the firm tried to assess its sales possibilities, and checked with the author and with a well-known organization that takes public opinion polls.

Kinsey predicted a big sale; the pollsters' considered scientific opinion was that this best seller would not sell at all.

A Faint Hope For Maturity Of Mankind

By N. S. Haseltine

THE MATURE MIND. By H. A. Overstreet. Norton. 295 pp. $2.95.

MAN since man began has been man's greatest enemy, and still is his only hope.

That's the boiled-down thesis of Harry A. Overstreet, phychologist, who sees a faint, and only a faint, hope that man can conquer his immaturities, the cumulative stumbling blocks of the ages.

For man, says the author, is the almost helpless victim of his parents, his society, his institutions and almost everything that is his life. And the only bright spot on the atom bomb-clouded horizon is a nebulous thing termed the maturity concept.

Just as the ages have piled up their woes, so have the past wisdoms accumulated into this new concept, or philosophy, the author argues. But whether it will nurture and spread enough to avert the seemingly inevitable, atom-exploded end, is psychologically debatable, he writes.

"So far in the history of the world, there have never been enough mature people in the right places," G. Brock Chisholm, psychiatrist, has said.

That, too, is Overstreet's thesis, but he adds that since more and more persons are aware of this and have the clues to realize "that the evils of our life come not from deep evil within us but from ungrown-up responses to life" there is still hope.

In his more understandable portions, the author discusses the evils inherent in present-day religions, the radio, newspapers, and educational institutions, the premiums set on wealth, nationalism as opposed to internationalism, down to "aggressive egocentricity" (rugged individualism) as opposed to sociocentricity, the understanding of one's relationship to others.

In a Nutshell

IRMA AND THE HERMIT, by Irma Tennant Materi. Norton. 256 pp. $2.95.

A HUMOROUS blow-by-blow, round-by-round description of Yankee ingenuity against Oriental wiliness, at its best when the author keeps to the everyday events of her life in Korea. Irma, wife of an American Army officer stationed in Korea during the postwar period, finds Korea, the "Hermit Kingdom," the ideal place NOT to bring up an infant. The issue between Irma and the Hermit remains in doubt to the bitter end, with the reader enjoying belly laughs in every chapter. Sex even has its day, as Irma, in the manner of a meek Richard Halliburton, relates the activities of two American officers on a one-night visit to a "Keesang House." A well-done chronicle of American attempts to better the lot of a friendly nation, satisfied with its way of life for 2000 years. Stripped of its travelogue chapters, this book could be a Grade A screen comedy.

IRMA TENNANT MATERI
Author of "Irma and the Hermit"

THE INNOCENT, by Evelyn Piper. Simon and Schuster. 241 pp. $2.50.

THERE is only one truly normal character, a walk-on part, in this "novel of suspense," as it proclaims itself on the jacket. There is no question about the suspense; it is built up in successive crescendos. A woman gets her man on the bounce, after the death of his first wife, and in her new husband's apartment finds a typewritten manuscript which shatters her happiness and her security and almost shatters her mind. But Charles Carter, a beautiful hunk of man with the primitive emotional equipment of a small boy pulling the wings off flies, is the stark character in this book. In a sense, he is the innocent of the title. You won't be able to lay this one down until it's finished.

THE CASE OF THE DUBIOUS BRIDEGROOM, by Erle Stanley Gardner. Morrow. 267 pp. $2.50.

THE usual courtroom sequence occupies only the last 80 pages of this Perry Mason mystery, which is unusual restraint for Counselor Gardner. Prior to that there is a satisfactory spate of action by plane, auto, telephone and .38-caliber revolver between Los Angeles and a tourist court in Tijuana. It apparently involves the attempt of a shady promoter to shed his first wife by Mexican divorce in favor of something much younger and prettier. But the mystery goes deeper than marital spite, you can just bet. Up to Perry Mason par.

DISCOVERERS FOR MEDICINE. By William H. Woglom, M. D. Yale. 229 pp. $3.75.

THE point to this book must be that some of the most significant advances in medicine were contributed by "amateurs," experimenters outside the profession. Dr. Woglom roots back, like a genealogist on scent, to report out the discoverers of such things as blood pressure, heredity, vaccination, milk sickness, respiration, the throat mirror and spectacles. Nothing startling, but not uninteresting either.

THE WRATH AND THE WIND, by Alexander Key. Bobbs-Merrill. 366 pp. $3.

SLAVE RUNNER Maury St. John looses a dread epidemic of yellow fever in the port of St. Joseph on the Gulf Coast of Florida when he arrives with a load of diseased slaves. In deep repentance, he calls upon his medical skill, once abandoned, to fight the plague. Two beautiful women have major roles. One is a sadist, the other a mute. Many of the scenes are stark, none more so than when the gentlemen assemble at a special auction to bid on beautiful octoroons. In the end, a hurricane sweeps clean this spot of pestilence and sin.

THE 37TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN WORLD WAR II. Infantry Journal Press. $7.50.

THIS is a 366-page history profusely illustrated with photographs and maps. In addition, there is a fat appendix listing dates of all general actions; chronology from September 26, 1940, to December 18, 1945; Medal of Honor winners; unit citations; commendations; casualties, and considerable detail on Yamashita's surrender.

THE SHADOW AND THE BLOT. By Nathan D. and Griselda G. Lobell. Harper. 240 pp. $2.50.

LOBELL is a former SEC attorney, and his wife also has studied law. Between them, they have created that rara avis, a "different" detective. Actually, he is the D. A.'s expert on commercial frauds, who sidetracks himself into an investigation of a strange death which eventually involves the clandestine sale of Nazi art loot, and some art forgery on the side. The characterization is what makes this an unusual story of its type. Mortimer Mandel's East Side background is brought in so skillfully that you seem to have known the guy all your life, and in the widow and the mistress of the dead man the authors have shown their virtuosity by delineating Old Fifth Avenue and late Park Avenue types. Bewildered observers of modern art might also get some ideas as to the Freudian and non-Freudian meanings of the stuff. The "mystery" is too contrived, but all in all, this is good reading.

THE CASE OF THE PLATINUM BLONDE. By Christopher Bush. Macmillan. 192 pp. $2.50.

IT ALL takes place in the Sussex village of Cleavesham, where Ludovic Travers, the percipient amateur, is convalescing from an operation. A blackmailer, who in turn is being blackmailed, is exposed by his own murder as a convicted embezzler. Then the Chief Constable's wife, the platinum blonde, commits suicide, according to the coroner's jury. With some paltry help from Inspector Wharton of Scotland Yard, Travers runs the double murderer to ground. At this point, Author Bush wraps up the case neatly with a suicide's confession. No question that the killer wrote the confession, understand. Then Bush reopens the case and pins the works on another party. He thereupon shakes hands with the killer, walks out and leaves the whole thing hanging. This is a new device, and you can have it.

8 Short Stories Far Superior to Capote's Novel

A TREE OF NIGHT, And Other Stories. By Truman Capote. Random House. 209 pp. $2.75.

IN THIS collection of eight sensitive, penetrating short stories, far superior to his novel, "Other Voices, Other Rooms," Truman Capote stands out as a master of fear and the borderland between sanity and the neurotic wastes of the mind.

CAPOTE

The characterizations are sharp and have impact, especially that of the male "heel," and while the stories as a whole reveal an absorption with the eccentric individual, there is an occasional flash of sympathy with the vast distress of the average human being that is not displayed in "Other Voices, Other Rooms."

Remarkable, too, is the quality of suspense Capote achieves, especially since these are stories relying largely on characterization.

As for the writing, it is unobtrusively beautiful, particularly in "Shut a Final Door" and "Miriam," both of which are O. Henry Award winners.

This is a superlative book.—L. G.

Economists Trace Interest Of America in Arabian Oil

ARABIAN OIL. America's Stake in the Middle East. By Raymond F. Mikesell and Hollis B. Chenery. University of North Carolina Press. 201 pp. $3.50.

THIS BOOK by Mr. Chenery, a former engineer now an economics instructor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Prof. Mikesell of the University of Virginia, who has served as a Government economist in the Middle East, offers a broad if somewhat superficial background of a highly complex and too little understood field of our foreign affairs.

The authors point out that 98 per cent of our foreign oil reserves are owned by five companies, which are among the 17 largest industrial corporations in the United States. Recent events in the Middle East illustrate the influence their interests and operations can have on our own foreign policy.

"The vast bulk of American petroleum operations," the authors say, "is in the hands of a few giant companies frequently allied with one another and with large foreign organizations . . . Production and marketing agreements . . . operating over wide areas of the world . . . have far-reaching international, economic and political implications."

They favor some sort of international understanding to insure that the world's oil will be used "for the benefit of mankind generally, and not become a source of rivalry among the great powers or a source of hatred and resentment among the smaller powers which lack access to sources of supply."

Major attention is given to the Arabian American Oil Co. concession in Saudi Arabia, with emphasis on the use of oil royalties for scientific development of the country.

Interesting discussions are included on cartels, Gulf Coast and Persian Gulf pricing systems, and United States export and import policies. BEN PEARSE.

Free State's 'Subversive' Bill Is Toughest in the United States

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

TWO OFFICIALS of the House Un-American Activities Committee provided the first impetus 10 months ago to Maryland's proposed Subversive Activities Act of 1949, already passed by the Maryland Senate.

They were Robert Stripling, chief investigator, and Representative (now Senator) Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), coauthor of the pigeonholed Mundt-Nixon bill to control communism.

The proposed law would give the Free State the most sweeping powers in the United States against the wide range of subversive acts defined in the law.

Senator Mundt has admitted that the Maryland bill "goes beyond" the national bill which he helped to write.

The Maryland bill has encountered vigorous opposition from all hues of the political spectrum, although the opposition was slow in gathering its forces. Proponents of the measure were on the job early and in strength.

The bill passed the State Senate with surprising speed less than a month after it was introduced. The vote was 26 to 0. Final hearings by the House were held Thursday, and the bill seems certain to pass.

The Subversive Activities Act of 1949 specifies certain subversive acts: Committing, attempting to commit, helping to commit, advocating, abetting, advising, or teaching to commit overthrow of government by force or violence or alteration of the government by "other unlawful means."

The bill makes these acts felonies, punishable by up to 20 years in prison and fines up to $20,000.

Broker Was Inspired

THIS BILL establishes a special Assistant Attorney General "in charge of subversive activities" and gives him broad police powers.

The act also disqualifies "subversive" persons from holding any public office, appointive or elective. Teachers are included. All present and future State government employes would be thoroughly screened for loyalty under penalty of perjury.

All private institutions of learning which receive funds from the State would be required to file their procedures for screening subversives. Many Maryland colleges and universities, including Johns Hopkins, receive such funds.

The preamble of the Subversive Activities Act of 1949 was taken largely from the Mundt-Nixon bill of 1948.

The advice of Mundt and Stripling was sought 10 months ago by Maryland State Senator Wilmer C. Carter, a Baltimore insurance broker, who took a vow in April of 1948 to "fight Communist infiltration" for the rest of his life, after he heard an address on the subject at a Kiwanis luncheon by a former FBI agent.

With Mundt-Stripling impetus, Carter sparkplugged a movement, which, working quietly and efficiently, caught its opponents off guard and in less than 10 months successfully:

1. Spent thousands of dollars working for passage of a constitutional amendment to bar "subversives" from public office in Maryland.

2. Established an interim commission to study subversive activities in Maryland and recommended legislation.

3. Organized 45 fraternal, social and patriotic organizations into the Maryland Committee Against Un-American Activities to fight for the legislation.

Views Are Extreme

THE bill has provoked extreme views, with little middle-of-the-road opinion.

Fundamentally, proponents believe Maryland is seriously threatened today by Communists within its borders.

Opponents believe there is no such threat and the bill would authorize a mass witch hunt jeopardizing individual freedom.

The proponents are firmly convinced that Maryland is threatened by Communists, 2700 of them. They say they have positive proof, but refuse to describe the nature of their proof or its source. Maryland is one of the few States that lacks any sedition statute. A special Assistant Attorney General is necessary, they say, because a law without a man to enforce it is useless.

Communism is a world conspiracy and not a political party, they contend, and the bill is aimed at Communists.

"We might as well be blunt about it," Frank B. Ober, Baltimore lawyer who headed the legislative commission which drew up the legislation, has said. "We are talking about Russia."

Education alone is not a sufficient weapon against communism, because education alone has not provided to date a sufficient defense, they say. States must legislate against subversive activities, because the Federal Government has not done so. Federal laws do not give States sufficient protection. Teaching communism would not be subversive unless the teacher also advocated communism.

Senator Mundt says that teaching communism would be subversive, because by definition teaching means education to accept.

Seek to Amend It

AS a matter of political wisdom, the opponents of the measure have concentrated their fire on amending the bill rather than defeating it.

The opponents maintain that Maryland is not threatened by Communists. The bill would create a police state, a Maryland Bureau of Investigation with a dangerous concentration of power in the hands of one man, they say. The language of the bill is dangerously vague.

They ask:

"What does "alter the government by other unlawful means" mean?

Does that include picketing, urging the abolition of segregation?

The bill declares subversive any organization controlled directly or indirectly by a foreign power. Does this include the Catholic Church, with its spiritual allegiance to the Vatican? Or foreign language organizations? Or groups raising money for foreign governments like Israel?

The bill declares it subversive to teach philosophies which would unlawfully alter the government of Maryland. Does this include teaching communism, socialism, Rosicrucianism? Under the bill it will be impossible to prevent innocent people from being smeared, say its foes. Where in the bill is there protection from gossip mongers?

Convinced at Luncheon

THE subversive activities bill was born on April 22, 1948, at a Kiwanis luncheon in Baltimore.

The guest speaker was Edward C. Morgan, former FBI agent, and now a Washington lawyer; the spellbound listener was Carter.

He got the Kiwanis Club to appoint a special committee on un-American activities. He was made chairman. He raised $1600 immediately.

With this money and more raised subsequently, 300,000 pieces of literature urging passage of the amendment to the Maryland constitution outlawing subversives from office were distributed. The amendment was passed by a vote of more than two to one last November.

Next a Statewide Committee Against Un-American Activities was formed. Carter was named chairman. Led by the American Legion, more than 40 fraternal, religious, civic and patriotic organizations, representing approximately 90,000 persons, enlisted. Another $4000 was raised.

Carter introduced a joint resolution in the special legislative session of 1948 establishing the Ober Commission. Carter was named to the commission.

Just before Governor William Preston Lane, jr., named the 11 members of the commission, Ober delivered a speech before the American Bar Association in Atlantic City, N. J., on the subject of sedition legislation. Ober was named to head the State Commission.

Special Witnesses Heard

THE commission worked for six months on its report. It met often, in subcommittees and as a committee of the whole. They held no hearings but heard special witnesses.

Information on subversion was given to the commission by "very reliable" sources. Members of the commission will not disclose the identity of these sources, nor will they disclose the information they received.

The members of the Ober Commission, three State senators, three delegates and five Baltimore lawyers, sincerely believe in their bill.

Ober is 59, a lawyer, a graduate of Princeton and Harvard, and never a politician. He speaks softly, earnestly and effectively.

Carter is a slight, nervous man of 57, frankly suspicious. During an interview he demanded to see this reporter's credentials. "Maybe you're a Commy," he said. He then asked if the reporter were Jewish. "Not that it makes any difference," he added.

Other members of the Ober Commission included Howard W. Jackson, former Baltimore mayor; William C. Purnell, general counsel for the Western Maryland Railroad; Senator Henry Herbert Balch, a lawyer; Delegate T. Raymond Burch of Prince Georges County, who heads a county organization against un-American activities; Delegate Leona M. Rush, a housewife; Senator David K. McLaughlin of Washington County; Delegate Charles M. Bandiere, a businessman, and Morton E. Rome and John W. Avirett, Baltimore lawyers.

Proponents Work Hard

WHILE opposition to the Ober bill was slow in materializing, proponents of the measure were working busily. The Maryland Committee Against Un-American Activities, sparkplugged by Carter and Kenneth Hammer, of the American Legion, bombarded the State with literature in support of the Ober Commission.

Legionnaires throughout the State were asked to write the General Assembly supporting the measure. The committee also sought and received the support of the Catholic Daughter of America, the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, the Baltimore Association of Commerce, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Before the first hearing, called by the judiciary committees of the House and Senate, an overwhelming majority of opinion expressed had been in favor of the legislation.

At that hearing, however, opposition materialized.

Philip Frankfeld, chairman of the Maryland Communist Party and husband of a Baltimore kindergarten teacher fired last year because of her admitted Communist views; leaders of the State Progressive Party, and certain labor unions and some individuals urged outright defeat of the bill.

Teachers Urge Section

THE teachers wished to add a section which would make it punishable to accuse persons false of disloyalty or subversion.

The section calling for creation of a special Assistant Attorney General with wide police powers drew most of the fire: from Attorney General Hall Hammond, from State Superintendent of Education Thomas G. Pullen, jr., from independent citizens, groups of ministers, university professors, artists, civic leaders and lawyers.

Hammond said the law was necessary, but that the felony of subversion should be prosecuted as other Maryland felonies are prosecuted—by the State's Attorneys.

"There is no point in sugar-coating this special Assistant Attorney General," Hammond said. "He is a Maryland FBI, and if he is needed, a Maryland Bureau of Investigation should be created."

Pullen agreed that a bill should be passed "and not an innocuous one," but said that so much authority should never be given one man, and would not be consistent "with democratic procedures."

The citizen groups submitted exhaustive amendments eliminating the special Assistant Attorney General, charging that "this concentrated power of investigation can become an instrument of oppression." By definition the special assistant must "get results," the groups said.

"We believe that this type of pressure upon a political appointee, especially in an atmosphere charged with fear, will inevitably result in witch hunting and in the infringement of political rights," the group stated.

Questions Remain

DESPITE public hearings on the controversial bill, many questions remain unanswered today.

Will a person who makes charges to the special Assistant Attorney General be immune from suits for libel and slander?

Who will decide what organizations are subversive? Before a grand jury can decide, will not some State official have to decide who or what is subversive enough to merit prosecution?

Where does criticism of domestic policy end and disloyalty begin?

What does the law mean by advocating "alteration" of the government by "other unlawful means?" Would not the woman's suffrage movement have been declared subversive under this law?

Which is preferable: to risk a very few subversives, or to jeopardize freedom?

Since there are already laws against force, violence, attempts thereat and incitement thereto, is the Ober bill necessary?

The decision now lies with the 20-man House Committee on Judiciary, headed by Bernard S. Melnicove. He has said he thought the action of the Senate was "incredible" and "showed lack of courage."

Melnicove also has said his committee feels the act is good in principle.

By late next week, the bill will be ready for the House floor.

Critics Say Virginia 'Cure' Is Worse Than Poll Tax

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

NEXT NOVEMBER, Virginia voters will have a chance to wipe the poll tax from their State constitution.

In the regular fall election, they can pick or reject an amendment banning use of "any tax, assessment, or fee as a prerequisite to register . . . or vote."

Amendment supporters call their 4500-word brainchild "the best answer we can provide" to guarantee a free franchise. In the amendment, the $1.50 poll tax, which Virginians now must pay to vote, would be dropped.

But critics think the "cure is worse than the ailment." They feel the amendment is loaded with gimmicks, calculated to split the liberal, anti-poll tax vote.

They point to other amendment provisions which would:

(1) Give the Virginia General Assembly power to prescribe literacy tests if it so desires.

(2) Require annual registration of voters in place of permanent registration.

(3) Close registration books four months before elections, instead of 30 days.

(4) Give the General Assembly authority to levy a new $3 annual school tax, and permit localities—with Assembly approval—to assess a $1 capitation tax for local improvements.

Nine on Commission

HOW DID the poll tax repeal amendment start? Who drafted it before the General Assembly took it over?

In 1945, the Governor, then Colgate W. Darden, jr., appointed a special nine-man suffrage commission to look into the election laws in general. The move coincided with growing criticism of the poll tax.

This commission included two Republicans: W. R. Shaffer, of Woodstock, a member of the House of Delegates, and Judge John Paul, of Harrisonburg, Federal judge for the Western District of Virginia.

It included Dr. Charles J. Smith, president of Roanoke College, and regarded as a "middle-of-the-road" Democrat.

The other six members have generally been closely allied with the Byrd Democratic faction. They were:

State Senators Robert C. Vaden of Danville and William D. Medley of Arlington; Delegates Vernon C. Smith of Grundy, and Stuart B. Campbell of Wytheville; and W. L. Prieur, jr., clerk of Norfolk Corporation Court, and J. Frank Wysor, Pulaski County treasurer.

In general, the amendment this group recommended to the Governor was the same amendment the Legislature passed. There was, however, one significant change. The commission report felt that "the present requirements for reading and writing are reasonably adequate, in determining voter eligibility."

At present, if the voter applies for registration in his own handwriting, it is considered a sufficient test of literacy. But the General Assembly provided that the voter "meet such tests as to literacy and such further requirements as the General Assembly may provide."

Dropped by Alabama

ALABAMA recently dropped a two-year-old literacy clause when the courts held the restriction unconstitutional. The clause provided that all registrants be able to understand and explain the United States Constitution. State courts held this law was "intended to . . . discriminate against applicants on the basis of race or color."

The suffrage commission, in its report, declared that the poll tax serves a definite purpose in "providing the only effective check on continued residence," and in rooting the deadwood from the voting lists.

Since the poll tax paid list would no longer be used under the proposed amendment, the report said, then "periodic renewal of registration seems the most logical and effective means of furnishing this proof, as well as providing a currently correct list of voters."

Hence, the commission recommended—and the Legislature approved—annual registration of voters. Senator Medley pointed out that many other States—including New York—require such periodic registration.

Actually a Head Tax

THE POLL TAX is actually a head tax of $1.50 on every citizen over 21 years of age. You cannot vote without having paid your poll taxes for the three years preceding—but not including—the year in which you wish to vote.

In past years, the commission pointed out, this poll tax has raised about $900,000 annually, with two-thirds of the sum applied exclusively to aid public schools and the other third returned to the localities for general use.

In dropping the poll tax as a source of revenue, the General Assembly turned to other sources. Thus, it gave itself potential authority to levy a $3 head tax for school purposes, and the localities power to assess a $1 tax for local needs.

Under the amendment, residents would not have to pay the $3 school tax in order to be able to vote. But the Legislature did provide that payment of the $3 could be required before citizens could get licenses or permits "for any privilege."

On the matter of annual registration, the commission had several important things to say.

Registration, it recommended, could be accomplished in one of several ways:

(1) By direct application of the voter to the local electoral board.

(2) By payment before the penalty date of all personal taxes, other than real estate taxes.

(3) By the simple act of having voted in the preceding year.

These suggestions are not included in the constitutional amendment. They are left for the Legislature to determine if and when the amendment passes.

Preview of Dissents

BUT Commission Member W. L. Prieur, jr., in a minority report, took vigorous exception to point two.

He felt "that no citizen . . . should be deprived of his vote because of his temporary inability to pay taxes or his oversight in not paying same on the due date."

Commission Members Vernon C. Smith and J. Frank Wyson objected to another phase of the commission report—the elimination of the poll tax itself. "But," they added, "if this is done, we recommend the plan proposed as a substitute therefore."

Both Republican members of the commission, Charles J. Smith and Judge John Paul, said they disliked continuance of the absentee voting privilege in the proposed amendment. But Senator Medley, another member, said he thought the entire recommendation was "the best answer we can provide," and "should make the franchise more general."

Indorsed in Arlington

IN A RECENT MEETING, the Arlington Republican Club cautiously indorsed the amendment as "better than nothing at all." President Stephen M. Smith said the measure is "unpalatable, and made so purposely by the Democrats," but represented the first chance in years voters have had to eliminate the poll tax.

The Virginia League of Women Voters took a similar stand last year, when the matter was before the Assembly. The league urged passage, but warned that "it would be a travesty . . . to abolish the poll tax only to replace it with laws that would even more effectively restrict voting."

If voters ratify the amendment, the league added, it will "further urge the Legislature to exercise extreme care lest any enabling legislation, passed to bring the amendments into effect, serve to restrict and obstruct registration and voting."

Moss A. Plunkett, Roanoke lawyer and anti-Byrd man, said that if no Federal legislation banning State poll taxes is forthcoming, "I'm inclined to think we'll have to support" the amendment. But Plunkett said that "liberals all over the State are confused and haven't yet made up their minds on it."

Apparently there is no confusion on the issue in the mind of Franklin County Commonwealth's Attorney Virgil H. Goode, who says he is organizing "Statewide opposition" to the amendment. Goode told a reporter he organized his campaign after receiving "about 75 letters" from all parts of Virginia opposing the franchise change.

Although he described himself as a long-time opponent of the poll tax, Goode said the proposed amendment is "something much worse." He declared he had been promised support in his stand by "several members of the General Assembly and by various organizations." He refused to give their names "at this time." This spring and summer, he said, he plans to organize a speaking tour of the State opposing the amendment.

Repealed and Restored

THE VIRGINIA poll tax was first imposed in 1876, repealed in 1882, and finally inserted in the State constitution by the constitutional convention of 1902, with a 47 to 38 vote. The amendment never was ratified by voters.

In 1945, one hole was made in the poll tax when voters ratified another amendment allowing men in military service to vote without paying the tax.

The current amendment, although it got its final Assembly clearance last March, was not offered to voters for ratification last fall.

Virginia liberals say this was done so the amendment would not come before the voters in a presidential year, when the vote is heavy.

When the amendment does come up for ratification next November, voters may be a bit confused by the way the Assembly hastily boiled the 4500-word statement down to ballot size. Here's how the amendment, as abbreviated, now reads:

"Shall sections 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 28, 31, 38, and 173 of the constitution of Virginia, which sections relate to the elective franchise (and, among other things, provide for the elimination of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, registration, and renewal of registration of voters, and the establishment of a State Board of Electors, and the levying of a school tax in lieu of the present capitation tax) be amended," (parentheses, mine.)

Obviously, the sections of the present constitution do not relate to such matters as elimination of the poll tax, annual registration, and levying of a special school tax.

The amendment, not the constitutional sections listed, is what would provide for elimination of the poll tax.

Confused by the measure in full, many Virginia voters may be even more baffled by this capsule condensation if it appears on the ballots next November.

N. C. State Thumps G. W., 55-39, for Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

ORLANDO, Fla., March 5.—Florida's Governor Warren had a tongue-in-cheek greeting for Hialeah's record crowd of 28,359 fans on the closing day at the track . . . Over the public address system, he announced: "We welcome you here in Florida. You may lose on some races, but the State will make money on all of them" . . . Jimmy Norris, the Chicago grain tycoon who is one of the two backers of Joe Louis as a fight promoter, can sit back and enjoy Louis' promotional duel with Madison Square Garden. He is also a hefty stockholder in the Garden . . . When Mel Ott celebrated his fortieth birthday this week, it was the first time since his sixteenth that he was out of a New York Giants' uniform . . . Alex Carrasquel, the Venezuelan pitcher who jumped to the Mexican League when he was traded by the Nats to the White Sox three years ago, has asked Clark Griffith to intercede for him on his plea for reinstatement . . . But Griffith has pointed out that Commissioner Chandler has reinstated only the minor leaguers who jumped to Mexico, and not a single major leaguer . . . The Dodgers are paying Shorstop Peewee Reese $500 extra after naming him field captain.

POVICH

IN HIS BANQUET speeches, Gabby Street, the only man ever to catch a ball dropped from the 555-foot height of the Washington Monument, tells about it . . . And he quips, "I was in my twenties then. When I make the catch again, I'll throw the ball back up" . . . Herbert Guggenheim, Clark Griffith's aide-de-camp, has joined the Nats' board of strategy in Orlando. He welcomed Griffith to Washington in 1912 . . . The mutuel betting at Hialeah's 40-day meeting fell off only 4 per cent below 1948, after early fears that the drop would be as much as 15 per cent . . . Baseball Commissioner Chandler has the power to force the St. Louis Browns and Cardinals to reach an amicable agreement on the Brown's attempt to raise the Cardinals park rental . . . Unless they agree on what Chandler deems a fair figure, he has the authority to fine either or both clubs heavily "for actions detrimental to the best interests of baseball" . . . The Browns are dissatisfied not only with the mere $35,000 yearly rental the Cardinals pay, but also want the park maintenance costs of the Cardinals upped in proportion to their greater attendance.

BUCK NEWSOM is griped because the Washington club hasn't invited him to work out, or offered him locker room space . . . He'll have a job with some major league team, he says, "As soon as some of these clubs look over their pitchers and realize what a help I'd be to them" . . . The first hit of the Washington training camp was made by two sports-writing gentlemen who arrived in a snazzy red, convertible jeepster . . . Promoter Joe Louis had scarcely announced he was matching Jersey Joe Walcott and Ezzard Charles for his vacated title in June when the bookies announced the odds: Walcott the 9-to-5 favorite . . . If Walcott does wind up with the title, the heavyweight division will have a champion one year older (35) than the age at which Louis retired . . . Zeb Eaton, the .359 hitting outfielder Connie Mack is bringing up from Birmingham, is no stranger to the American League. With Detroit's pennant-winning Tigers of 1945, Eaton was listed as a pitcher . . . John Ganzel, general manager of the Nats' Orlando, Fla., club, formerly worked for Clark Griffith in another capacity. In 1904 he was the first baseman of the Griffith-managed New York Yankees.

BASEBALL COMMISSIONER CHANDLER, who once ordered ball players to stay away from horse race tracks, made no mention of dog tracks . . . So Manager Casey Stengel of the Yankees is permitting his players one night a week at Tampa's course for the hounds . . . Manager Leo Durocher says he isn't banning golf as a pastime for the Giants in spring training, but warns them:

"When I see a player on the golf course, I know he hasn't been getting enough work at the ball park" . . . With a lighter boat than Gar Wood's, Race Driver Harry Lynn is shooting at the former's American record of 124 miles an hour at Miami Beach, despite Wood's warning that drivers should be cautious about attempting to exceed 100 miles an hour with too much motor and not enough boat.

Celebrities Golf Will Be Played at Army-Navy

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

The third annual National Celebrities golf tournament will be played over the sporty Army-Navy Country Club layout either May 21-22 or June 4-5.

A choice between those dates will be made within the next few days when it is determined which weekend is more suitable to some of the tournament's ke · figures.

Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Arthur Godfrey have promised to participate in this year's event along with more than 50 other headliners from stage, screen, radio, sports and Washington's official family.

Crosby was a central attraction in the 1947 and 1948 tournaments, but Hope and Godfrey will be in the field for the first time.

Notables Aplenty

This year's tournament will have a backdrop of big-name golfers far surpassing that particular phase of the first two tournaments.

Ed Dudley, honorary president of the Professional Golfers Association, and Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the Women's PGA, are assisting in making arrangements for leading men and women professionals to play here.

Babe Didrikson, a star performer in the previous Celebrities events, will be back. Patty Berg, Louise Suggs, Grace Lenczyk and other top-flight women players are being invited to compete with the Babe.

Among the professional greats in the men's division who are expected to participate are Byron Nelson, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Tommy Armour, Horton Smith, Craig Wood, Lawson Little, Jimmy Thomson, Henry Picard, Freddie McLeod, Dudley and others.

Evans Returns

Francis Ouimet, veteran captain of America's Walker Cup team; Frank Stranahan and Willie Turnesa, two best amateurs in the game today, and Chick Evans, old-time star and a Celebrities standby, head up the amateurs' list.

Many of the ranking Army and Navy people have attended the Celebrities tournament, including Gen. Omar Bradley, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, secretaries of the Army and Navy, heads of the Air Forces and Marine Corps and others.

Officials of the Army-Navy Country club accepted with the characteristic enthusiasm of service people, the invitation to be host to this year's tournament.

For Worthy Cause

Maj. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, chairman of the club's board of governors, said:

"In view of the fact that The Washington Post sponsors this tournament for the purpose of raising funds in support of Attorney General Tom Clark's juvenile delinquency work, the Army-Navy Country Club takes great pleasure and pride in being able to assist you in this project.

"I trust we will have delightful weather, big crowds."

The first two Celebrities tournaments, which established this affair as one of the first-flight sports events nationally, were held at the Columbia Golf and Country Club.

Colonials' Zone Play Collapses in Second Half

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., March 5.—North Carolina threw a strangling back court press on George Washington and with it the Wolfpack squeezed out the Southern Conference basketball championship, 55-39, here tonight.

Worn and weary after Friday's triple overtime success against William and Mary, the haggard Colonials went to pieces in the second half when the Staters pressed them and the Wolfpack paraded to its third straight league title.

The Colonials were in the thick of things as late as midway the second half, but at that juncture Freshman Bobby Garrison rammed in a long set shot to put State in front, 39-38, and the Raleigh Rebels increased their bulge as the game progressed.

The vise that the Wolfpack applied on George Washington was so tight that the Colonials were scoreless for the last 7 minutes of the game and made only one field goal in the last 11 minutes and 15 seconds.

GW Uses Zone Defense

George Washington had a little strategy of its own, a zone defense, for the occasion and did right well with it until the pressing moments after recess.

State couldn't penetrate the shifting GW zone in the first half and the one-point lead the Wolfpack had at halftime, 25-24, was the work of Center Paul Horvath and who followed up four set shots to score as many tap-ins.

Four points was the biggest margin separating the two clubs in the first half, but Bill Cantwell trimmed that down quickly with two fast jump shot baskets only to have Horvath shoot a foul in the last second to bring State to one-point lead it owned by halftime.

Zone Defense Wilts

With Phil McNiff alternating with Gene Witkin in front of Cantwell, Maynard Haithcock and Jimmy Moffatt and Ace Adler defending behind them, the Wolfpack was unable to resort to its driving, crisp-passing game and had to shoot from outside.

The Colonials folded up completely after Garrison's set shot had restored the lead to NC State.

Bill Dickey and Sam Ranzino hounded the GW guards trying to bring the ball up court. This resulated in wild, inaccurate passes which State either intercepted or deflected and the GW strategy of working the ball up slowly to spring either Witkin or Small open for a set shot was discomboberated.

Leading 46 to 39 with less than five minutes to play, the Pack then began to freeze the ball. The crowd, remembering that GW had pulled the same stunt but at a different time against South Carolina here Wednesday, cheered widely as the Pack gave the Colonials a taste of their own medicine.

The NC State victory was not an individual achievement, but a team triumph. The Staters applied the press perfectly and when the Colonials went to pieces under the strain of it, State merely took advantage of the errors and rolled to victory.

Horvath tapped in two more baskets in the second-half spurt which saw State roll up 16 points in 7 minutes while holding the Colonials scoreless.

The two baskets brought Horvath's total to 12, the same number Cantwell scored to tie the North Carolina State center for the night's scoring honor.

Caps Falter, Lose to Stags Again, 106-95

The Chicago Stags proved last night they've mastered the trick of scoring more than 100 points against the Caps at Uline Arena.

With the aid of the usual fourth-period fadeout by the locals, Chicago walloped Washington, 106-95, in a BAA contest applauded by 2599.

It was only last Saturday that these same Stags galloped away from the Caps, 103-90. That was the first time in three years that an opponent ever humiliated them before the home folks by scoring more than 100.

Principally, four Chicago villians saw to it that last night was the second time. Mighty Max Zaslofsky and Gene Vance did most of their scoring in the first half when the Stags gained a 54-53 edge.

Mikan Gets 19

After intermission, Stan Miasek tallied 15 of his 16 points and Big Ed Mikan gave a reasonable impersonation of brother George, winding up with 19 points.

In the final accounting, Zaslofsky was high with 23 points—11 of them made on 12 foul tries. Vance, who got 15 points in the first half, scored 19.

Until the Caps faltered in the final session, it was a tremendous ball game. The Eastern Division champs trailed by only 73-72 when it started. And when they wound up 11 points behind they hadn't loafed; they were just tired.

Only alibi the Caps did have was the absence of Bones McKinney who was called to Durham, N. C., when his sister died.

Feerick's Try Futile

Bob Feerick was high for the Caps with 21 points and it was he who tried futilely to rally the team in the last session. They got within two points once, but at the end the Stags were going away.

Little Freddie Scolari was runnerup with 18 and the fat man

Comedian Will Play Both Days in Golf Tournament

When the above Wirephoto picture hit the sports desk last night, the long distance operator was asked to "see if you can get Bob Hope on the wire at Tucson, Ariz., at the Cleveland Indians' training camp."

She reported in a few minutes:

"Would you just as soon talk to Lou Boudreau? He's on the other end of the line."

Thanks, but sorry, it's a personal call; only Mr. Hope will do.

A few minutes more pass, the phone rings again.

This time the operator says: "Go ahead, Mr. Hope on the line."

"Hello, hello, that you Bob," we said.

"Yes, this is Bob Hope."

The business of identifying yourself so that Hope would recall talking with you a couple of times, and a little chit-chat about "hope your Indians win the pennant by 10 games as Boudreau and Bill Veeck say they will."

Then the big question:

"Does it still look, Bob, as if you will be able to make the National Celebrities golf tournament this year?"

"Sure, I'm counting on that," he said.

"Would the dates of June 4-5 fit your pistol?"

"Sure, that's all right. That a weekend?"

"Yes; that's a Saturday and Sunday."

"It looks like Sunday for me.'

"Be swell if you could make it for both days, Bob."

"Well, I will. Sure, I can be there Saturday, too. I'll fly to Washington right after my show Friday night. I can get in there in time Saturday to tee off. I'll be there both days, for sure."

"That's wonderful, Bob. We'll send you all of the dope."

Sitting down to write this piece for you readers, this thought repeated itself: "That's the kind of a guy you like to deal with. He gives you no guff."—BUS HAM.

Deming Quits W-L; May Go To Bullis Prep

Harry Deming, highly successful football and track coach at Washington-Lee High of Arlington since 1941, is leaving in June, and will be replaced by his assistant, Ken Batson.

Deming, last night, would not explain why he is quitting, but it was learned that he is in line for the football coaching job at Bullis Prep.

The Bullis post has been held by Jack Maddox of Mercersburg, Pa., for the past two years. But it is understood that Bullis is looking for a football coach, who will also teach classes during the off-season.

Maddox doesn't want to teach. And Deming, captain and star tackle of George Washington University's football team in 1935, is qualified to teach. He was cited by the G. W. U. faculty at his graduation for his "outstanding scholarship" and has a Master's Degree.

Batson, 30, was a star halfback on the G. W. U. team in 1940, and has been associated with the physical education department of the Arlington schools since 1941. He's been one of Deming's chief aides for three years.

Since he succeeded former-GW athlete Johnny Baker in 1941, Deming's W-L football teams have won 58 games, lost 19 and tied two. His 1943 team was undefeated.

His eight W-L track teams have won all their dual and triangular meets except three, which they lost by one point each.

Deming first gained recognition here as a 240-pound place-kicking tackle on the GWU teams which boasted the great Tuffy Leemans.

Deming's best year was his last, 1935, when he played in every GWU game, despite three broken ribs, a broken nose and a trick knee. His field goals that season beat West Virginia, 10-7; Oklahoma, 3-0, and Tulsa, 3-0.

Kentucky Wins Title

Louisville, Ky., March 5 (AP).—Kentucky, NCAA champions, wrapped up its sixth successive Southeastern Conference basketball championship here tonight with a 68-52 victory over Tulane before more than 8000 fans in the Jefferson County Armory.

Caps Interested In Avatus Stone, Armstrong Star

Coach Red Auerbach of the Caps last night invited Armstrong Tech Coach Charlie Baltimore and Center Avatus Stone to Uline Arena ostensibly to discuss arranging a scholarship for Stone at Columbia University. Auerbach may have been looking ahead four years when Stone would become available for pro basketball.

The rugged 6-foot 3 inch Stone averaged 13 points per game in pacing Armstrong to the Negro Interhigh and South Atlantic High School League championships.

Baltimore, an old friend of Penn State Coach John Lawther, said last night that he had already prepared to send Stone to Penn State next year

Carnegie Names Part-Time Coach

Pittsburgh, March 5 (AP).—Frank (Mel) Cratsley was today named basketball coach at Carnegie Tech on a part time basis.

Cratsley, who has served two years as assistant coach under Bill Donohoe, starred on Tech cage teams from 1936 to 1939. He is employed in Pittsburgh. He succeeds Coach Donohoe who resigned in December.

Hoyas Lose To Penn State

State College, Pa., March 5. Penn State closed its 1949 basketball season tonight with a 61-42 victory over Georgetown, avenging an early season loss to the Hoyas at Washington.

It was no contest after the first 10 minutes as Penn State's superior height and greater accuracy left the visitors trailing by a 28-15 margin at the half.

Lou Lamie, led the Lion scorers with 14 points, followed by Joe Tocci with 12, John Mazziotta of Bronx, N. Y., was high for the losers with 10 points.

The win brought Penn State's record to 7 and 10 for the season, while Georgetown now shows a mark of 9 and 14 with only a Monday game against Villanova yet to play.

Hoyas Whip A. U. Boxers

Georgetown boxers defeated American U., 7-1, at the American gym last night. Don Chessmann registered American's lone point when he decisioned Pat Ruel in the 165-pound bout.

Stan Grogan, American U.'s slugging 155-pounder, was decisioned by Jim Tully in a wild bout. Grogan charged in wildly, at one point going through the ropes. Tully jabbed and evaded Grogan's blows very well.

In the heavyweight encounter, Georgetown's Ray Larrow won a clear-cut decision from Paul Hubbard. Larrow had Hubbard, a lefty, on the deck in the first round and again in the third. In the third Larrow landed a solid right hand and Hubbard folded up and slid to the floor for a nine-count but lasted out the round and the fight.

125 POUNDS—Nick Szabo (G) decisioned Jim Duley.
130 POUNDS—Bob Connolly (G) decisioned Martin Ries.
135 POUNDS—American forfeited.

Oklahoma Tops Nebraska, 56-49

Lincoln, Neb., March 5 (AP).—Oklahoma threw the Big Seven basketball race into a two-team tie tonight by whipping Nebraska, 56 to 49, in an overtime game. The Oklahoma win earned a tie with Nebraska for the lead, both with eight wins and three defeats, and each with one game to play.

Three Horses Die In Charles Town Race Track Fire

Charles Town, W. Va., March 5. Three horses died in a fire at the Charles Town race track late this afternoon.

The horses were Belstan, 7-year-old sprinter; The Shot, half-mile favorite, and an unidentified stallion owned by Joe Camac. W. W. Miller owned Belstan and The Shot.

The fire was confined to one barn and was put out by volunteer fire departments. Damage was estimated at $3000. Twenty-four stalls were destroyed.

Hustle, Performance Won Raise

Ed Stewart, Nats' Fair-Haired Outfielder, Checks Into Camp to Battle for Berth

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 5.—The outfielder who hits .278 ordinarily commands no salary raise, but Ed Stewart did, and for more than one reason. There were at least two.

His modest batting average was tops on the Washington club and he drove in more runs than anybody else on the team. Clark Griffith is happy to have him around, and the same goes for Griffith Stadium fans.

Stewart was the people's choice among the club's customers last season, with his energetic scrambling on the bases and high good hustle in every direction. He ran out infield grounders as if they were triples to the deepest corner, and Griffith observed "I wish I had nine like him."

Stewart's fiery play relieved the drabness of the Washington club and at the end of the season the Nats' owner labeled him as "one of the three players I won't trade."

He was a bargain buy for the Nats last May when they got him from the Yankees for $15,000 and Outfielder Leon Culbertson. Before the season was over, Manager Bucky Harris of the Yanks was frankly saying "I wish we had him back."

Stewart checked into the Nats' camp today for his first workout, and he was talking about the Yankees. "I felt like a sadist when I was hanging around with the Yanks. I was just waiting for somebody to get hurt before I had a chance to break into their outfield," he said. "I was low-man on their outfield list."

The Yankees brought him up in 1948, after he had batted .358 at Kansas City and all but won the league batting title. But with New York he found himself low-rated behind Hank Bauer whom he had outhit by 43 points in the K. C. outfield, and Cliff Mapes, whom he outhit by 50 points.

"The Yankees were more interested in players younger than myself, I guess," said Stewart honestly.

The Washington roster lists him as 31, and Stewart proved himself an extraordinary ball player when he pointed out there was a mistake about that. "I'm 32," he said, an admission that might point him toward the Hall of Fame.

He led the American League in triples for most of the season despite missing the first month of play, only to be nosed out in the final week, 14 to 13, by Tommy Henrich, of the Yankees. He grounded into fewer double plays, four, than any player on the Nats,

Hitters Can't Field

Eddie Dyer Would Like To Use Two-Platoon System

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—Eddie Dyer, who could find himself in a dire position this year, said today it would be very nice for his St. Louis Cardinals if football's two platoon system could be worked in baseball.

"Pal, if there was ever a ball club that needed the two platoon system, it is the Cardinals," he said. "I've got great fielders who can't hit and hitters who can't field. I've got the best defensive catcher in the National League who can't hit and I've got a kid who can hit, but who still may have a lot to learn about catching."

The drawling Texan still gave his club a "very swell chance to take the pennant if we can just polish up in a few spots."

"But I still have those problems and they very definitely are bothering me," he said.

"Take center field. If I put Erv Dusak or Chuck Diering out there I know that they aren't going to hurt defensively. But then the fans will start saying, 'what's the matter with that fat head Dyer keeping a .321 hitter like Ron Northey on the bench.'

"So I put Ron in there and, boom, a fly ball goes sailing over his head that a faster man could nab. Then the fans will start saying oh what a dope that Dyer is, keeping a fine fielder like Diering on the bench."

Dyer said the same situation applied behind the bat where Del Rice, whom he described as the league's top catcher, leaves "a great big hole in the batting order because he hit only .197 last year."

"Oh for that two-platoon system."

Royals Win Over Rollers By 81 to 64

Rochester, N. Y., March 5 (AP).—The Rochester Royals broke loose in the late minutes to whip the Providence Steamrollers, 81 to 64, in a BAA battle before a turnaway crowd of 4278 tonight.

It was the tenth straight win for the Western Division leaders who stretched their lead over second-place Minneapolis to two and one-half games.

Norlander celebrated his twenty-eighth birthday with 17 points. The biggest splash Johnny made all night was two seconds before the end of the first half. Trying a desperation shot, he smashed one of the bulbs high in front of the basket. The players had to duck the shower of glass.

Chandler, Cards Browns Discuss Sportsmen's Park

Sarasota, Fla., March 5 (AP).—The heads of the St. Louis Cardinals and Browns will meet here March 9 with Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler to discuss the dispute over Sportsman's Park.

The Browns, owners of Sportsman Park, have told the Cards they can't use the park after April 1. The two clubs have been arguing for some time over the playing site. Fred M. Saigh of the Cardinals claims his team has a 12-year lease on the park.

Pete's 69 Tops Palmer By a Stroke

By F. T. Macfeely

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP). — Florida's champion, Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra Beach, showed his heels to the touring professionals today as he grabbed the third-round lead in the St. Petersburg golf open.

Cooper flashed a strong finish to post a two-under-par 35-34—69 for the par 71 Pasadena course today and run his 54-hole total to 204.

Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., pro, who shared the halfway lead with Cooper, scored a one-under-par 36-34—70 and was one stroke back with 205.

Cary Middlecoff, young non-practicing dentist from Memphis who was an early favorite, shot toward the top with 34-33—67 over the 6260-yard links. He had 208 for third place.

Two strokes back at 210 came five golfers with an outside chance to grab the title in tomorrow's final 18-hole round.

Bob Hamilton of Landover, Md., the first day leader; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill.; Jerry Barber, Los Angeles; Ted Kroll, Philmont, Pa.; and Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, N. Mex., make up the fivesome.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo was the best of the amateurs with 211. He had plenty of company with eight pros at the same figure.

Cooper, a native Floridian, came in with birdie-birdie-par. Those birdies on the 16th and 17th holes were what put him out in front.

He played it safe on the long par-five 18th and his fourth shot stopped just short of the hole to cost him a birdie there.

Oxon Hill Ok'd By Race Board

The Maryland Racing Commission yesterday approved the Rosecroft Raceways at nearby Oxon Hill, Md., slated to open for 20 nights of racing starting May 26. The huge layout has a half-mile track.

William E. Miller, president of Rosecroft Trotting and Pacing Association, and William Graham, secretary of the Racing Commission, took part in ceremony of driving the first piece of steel into the ground for the fashionable clubhouse that will accommodate 2000.

The grandstands which will accommodate 4000 are almost complete. When finished Rosecroft will hold 20,000 people. The stables are virtually ready for use now.

Following the Rosecroft meet, Laurel Raceway will open its 20-night schedule June 24. Laurel, in its second season, is offering more than $112,000 in purses.

Staunton Wins Swimming Meet

Charlottesville, Va., March 5 (AP). Staunton Military Academy swimmers dominated the scholastic invitational meet here today in the Pniversity of Virginia's Memorial Gymnasium pool. The Staunton team scored an easy triumph with 74 points.

Augusta Military Academy scored 48, the Richmond YMCA 31, Massanutten Military Academy 6.

Thigpen Tops Frenchman Again in 1000

New York, March 5 (AP).—Phil Thigpen of Seton Hall won the 1000-yard run at the Knights of Columbus indoor track and field games in Madison Square Garden for the second straight year tonight, beating Marcel Hansenne of France by two yards in their advertised grudge duel.

Thigpen, the IC4A champion, came from behind to take the lead with more than a lap to go and completed the distance in 2:19.9 before a crowd of 12,000 to retire the Bishop McIntyre Trophy.

Hansenne, French 800 and 1500-meter champion, made a gallant effort to score his first United States triumph on his ninth and last appearance in this country but didn't quite have the stuff.

It was the first meeting of the two since their duel of elbows in the National AAU meet which cost both a chance for victory and resulted in Thigpen's disqualification.

Hansenne, who now has finished second five times in nine appearances in this country in 1946 and 1949, departs for home tomorrow and will retire after this year.

Roscoe Browne of the New York Pioneer Club nipped George Thompson of Villanova for third place with a sprint finish.

National AAU Champion Billy Dwyer, former Brown star, took the 60-yard dash by an eyelash over Ed Conwell of Jersey City in 6.2 seconds. It was Dwyer's fourth straight sprint triumph here this season. Bill Mathis of Washington, D. C., was a close third.

Harrison Dillard, National hurdles champion and Olympic 100-meter sprint winner, went down to his first defeat since the Olympic tryouts in the final of the 60-yard high hurdles.

Jim Gehrdes of Penn State won the event in 7.2 seconds, equalling the meet record shared by Dillard, Fred Wolcott and Charles Hlad. He finished third, far behind Ed Dugger of Dayton, Ohio. Bill Mitchell of Georgetown, fourth man in the final, tipped two hurdles and fell before reaching the tape.

Willy Slykhuis of Holland wound up his American campaign by capturing the Frank A. Brennan Columbian Mile in 4:11.4.

In hanging up his fourth straight mile triumph, the Dutch Olympian defeated Fred Wilt of the New York Athletic Club by four yards.

Carl Joyce, national prep school champion from Seton Hall, John Twomey of the Illinois Athletic Club and Netil Pratt of Syracuse finished in that order.

Matter of Rules

'C' Club Track Carnival Has Interhigh Loop in Quandary

The Interhigh Track League faces a boycott by its Virginia and Maryland neighbors unless it either forsakes the annual "C" Club track meet or convinces its sponsor to change the meet rules.

The High School Principals' Association, policymaker for the Interhigh League, will make the next move, probably within two weeks, to drop out of the "C" Club meet or require a rule change.

The boycott threat is the climax of a three-year-old feud between the Central High Alumni "C" Club, sponsor of the meet, and the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations, of which Maryland and Virginia are members.

The Federation has never sanctioned, nor permitted its members to participate in the "C" Club meet because the event violates two basic Federation rules:

1. The meet is not sponsored by the public schools.

2. The meet allows high school and prep school boys to compete against each other in the same events.

The District high schools do not belong to the Federation, although, outside of the "C" Club meet, their rules closely parallel those of the national group.

Nevertheless, the Federation has informed its Maryland and Virginia members that they cannot compete in track meets in which the District schools are entered, because the District of Columbia schools compete in the unsanctioned "C" event.

According to Bob Newby, secretary of the "C" Club, "we steadfastly refuse to change our rules to conform to the dictates of the Federation, which has its office in Chicago, and doesn't understand the conditions here."

Affected by the boycott are: The George Washington High Memorial Relays April 12 in Alexandria, and the "C" Club meet at Central and Metropolitan Washington meet at Wilson High, both in May.

G. W. High Athletic Director Al Doran said last night, "we are forced to make our relays plans without the D. C. schools, unless they either junk the "C" Club meet or meet the Federation rules."

Richard R. Fletcher, president of the Virginia affiliate to the Federation, said: "So far as I can surmise, the so-called boycott affects only track."

Said Birch Bayh, head of health, physical education and safety in the District schools: "It looks like we're caught in the wringer."

Navy Edges Army, 44-42

Annapolis, Md., March 5.—(AP) Navy's basketball team fought off a late Army uprising tonight to gain a 42-40 victory in the annual cage classic between the two service rivals.

A couple of sophomores, Chet McDonough anad Dave Mullaney, led the Midshipmen to the triumph which evened the series between the academies at 13-13.

Both teams played cautiously throughout, seemingly more interested in controlling the ball than in taking chance shots.

The Cadets got off to an early lead which they held up until two and a half minutes before the half when McDonough's field goal put Navy ahead 19-18. It was 21-18 by halftime.

The Middies were never behind after that, although heir lead was whittled to one point twice in the frantic second half.

Moe Mosny led the Army scorers with 14 points.

McDonough anad Mullany each had 13 points to top Navy scorers.

The superintendents of both academies, Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, jr., aand Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, were present in the crowd of 4000 which packed Dahlgren Hall.

After the victory, the Midshipmen swarmed their team and Coach Ben Carnevale. The victory preserved Carnevale's perfect record against Army in the three years he has coached Navy.

AAU Decides Gymnastic Titles

The first annual A.A.U. gymnastic competition was held last night at the Central YMCA before a crowd of 300.

Results:

Wisconsin, Ohio State Tie for Title

Champaign, Ill., March 5 (AP). Three records were smashed today in an unprecedented Western Conference indoor track meet which produced cochampions—Wisconsin and Ohio State—for the first time in history.

The surprising Badgers, led by double-winner Don Gehrmann, captured the last event on the program, the mile relay, in record-breaking form to tie Ohio State with 38 points apiece.

Wisconsin's baton team of Gene Whipple, Mel Goldin, Gehrmann and Bob Mansfield sped the mile in 3:18.6 to knock three-tenths second off the conference mark posted by Michigan in 1939 and matched by Ohio State in 1947.

The Buckeyes, defending relay champions, grabbed second place in the thrilling windup race to pocket eight vital points that provided them with a split title. Ohio State's team, consisting of Ed Reilly, Mark Whitaker, Harry Cogswell, and Mal Whitfield, turned in 3:20.1.

Illinois Finishes Third

The Buckeyes won the team crown last year with 43 points. The 38 scored this time was the lowest winning tally since Ohio State's 37 total in 1942.

Illinois, third in the mile relay, finished third in the meet with 35 points, followed by Purdue with 21½, Minnesota 21, Indiana 18, Michigan 13½, Northewestern 10, and Iowa with a complete blank.

Gehrmann, a disappointment in his mile specialty, which he won in his poorest time of the season—4:16.1—apparently saved himself for the 880. In this race, the slight, 130-pounder strode to a 1:53.1 to clip eight tenths second from the old conference mark held jointly by Charles Hornbostel of Indiana (1933) and Herb Barten of Michigan (1947).

Barten, who figured to repeat for the 880 title, floated home in last place after cutting the throttle when his bruised foot began paining. Ohio State's Don Washington was second to Gehrmann, about 25 yards behind.

Purdue's Jewell Daily hoisted the third meet record with a 24-foot 7-inch leap in the broad jump. It was 1¾ inches better than the old mark set by Paul Miller, also of Purdue, two years ago.

Duff Also Double Winner

In addition to Gehrmann, the only other double-winner was Lloyd Duff of Ohio State. Duff, the star of 1948 show, repeated as the 7 yard high hurdle champion in :08.7, three tenths second off the record. He also won the 70 yard lows in :08, two tenths shy of the mark. Michigan's Jim Mitchell was second to Duff both times.

Hal Omer of Purdue replaced Indiana's Charlie Peters as 60-yard dash champion with a :06.3 clocking. The Hoosier was runner-up. Mal Whitfield, Ohio State's Olympic star, took the 440 with the Badgers' Mansfield next. Defending 440 champion, Harry Cogswell of Ohio State, was fourth.

Jim Urquhart of Wisconsin pulled the biggest upset by beating out Illinois' Vic Twomey in the 2-mile. The husky Badger pounded in ahead for the first time with one half lap to go and shot to a 5-yard victory in 9:25.7—15 seconds off the record beam. Defending champion Dick Kilty of Minnesota, ill most of the week, dropped out of the 2-mile pace about midway.

9 Records Fall

Army Upsets Yale Team in Heptagonal

Boston, March 5 (AP).—Nine records were broken and one equalled tonight as Army scored in every event to upset favored Yale in the fifteenth Heptagonal Games at Boston Garden.

Army tallied 54 5/6 points to Yale's 44. Their nearest competitor was Cornell with 27.

Trailing in order were Princeton with 20 points, Penn 16, Harvard 15 1/3, Dartmouth 10 1/3, Brown 9, Columbia 9, and Navy 3½.

In the final event of the night, for which the great majority of 3227 fans remained, Dick Phillips of Brown cleared 6 feet 8 inches in the high jump.

His leap was the ninth new record of this Ivy meet started with seven teams and expanded to ten with the additions of Army, Navy and Brown. Phillips' effort was four inches higher than Bill Vessie of Columbia jumped a year ago and a quarter of an inch better than the IC4A mark held by NYU'S Irving Mondschein.

The American indoor mark of 6 feet, 9¼ inches was set in 1937 by Edward Burke of Marquette.

Other marks bettered, in addition to the high jump, were the two-mile relay, the shot put and weight toss, the mile and two mile runs, pole vault, 600 and 1000-yard runs.

Bob Mealey of Cornell, the National AAU champion, sped to a new meet record, which also exceeded by a full second the IC44 mark, in winning the 1000-yard run.

Content to run in second place until the start of the last lap Mealey finished in 2:12.8, about eight yards ahead of Tom Kirwan of Penn. Kirwan eased into second place with a half lap to go, slipping by Yale's Henry Stoltman, the early pacesetter. The record set last year by Harvard's Frank Gurley was 2:16.

Content to let Princeton's Ron Wittreich set the pace until the gun barked denoting the final lap, Yale's George Wade romped to an 18-yard victory in the mile in the great time of 4:12.7.

He improved the meet record by almost nine seconds and was only seven tenths of a second slower than the IC4A mark. Brown's Josh Tobey was third.

Navy's Jim Oberholtzer, winner last year in 4:21.5, cast his left shoe in the first lap. He continued three more laps, staying up with the leaders, before leaving the track.

Two other meet records were broken earlier at Harvard's Briggs cage where some of the field events were conducted.

Cadet James Scholtz threw the 35-pound weight 57 feet 11¼ inches to win that event and establish a new record.

However, Scholtz's effort was 8¼ inches under the American indoor record which he had been figured to exceed. He bettered the existing IC4A record of 57 feet 9 inches.

The old mark for the meet was set a year ago by Harvard's Sam Felton.

and he tied Gil Coan for the home run leadership with seven. He hit more balls over the right-field fence in Washington, three, than any other man.

He likes the whole idea of playing for the Nats, and says they can finish in the first division without surprising him. "We have some power this year that we didn't have last season. Buddy Lewis and Eddie Robinson will ride the ball for us, and I aim to help. Our left-handed power looks better."

Stewart sees a vast improvement at shortstop, too. "I played against Sam Dente when he was at Louisville and we always knew he belonged in the majors. He makes all the plays. If our pitching picks up, we'll make the first division."

He had his first big league trial with the Pirates in 1941 after they bought him from San Diego. That followed graduation from UCLA, where he was a basketball and soccer ace. The Pirates retained him for two seasons, and war work and the Army occupied him until 1946, when he was optioned to Hollywood and thence bought by the Yankees for service at Kansas City in 1947.

He was under something of a cloud early last season with the Yankees when he didn't hit a lick in spring training. "But neither did Joe DiMaggio, who batted only .120," Stewart points out. "The difference, though, was that the Yankees knew what Di Mag could do, and I was on trial."

Stewart wound up playing center field regularly for the Nats last season and that's the job he expects to hold again, despite the competition from John Simmons and Clyde Vollmer, the long-hitting rookies from Montreal and Syracuse . . . That pair checked in too late for today's workout . . .

The Nats stepped up their workout today with nearly an hour of hitting practice . . . They open their exhibition season a week from today against the A's at Palm Beach . . . Paul Calvert, the free agent from Baltimore, pitched to hitters today and the Nats are expected to sign him . . . Despite his one-and-five record at Atlanta, Rookie Southpaw Mason Leeper is given a chance to stick with the Nats, if he can curb his wildness. His stuff is immense. . . . The longest drive of the batting drill was delivered by, of all people, a pitcher. Milo Candini whaled a hit far over the scoreboard in left field, a 400-foot smash.

Once Around the Training Camp Circuit

Bill Veeck Talks to His Three Holdouts But Results Are Kept Secret

Los Angeles, March 5 (AP).—President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians talked contracts today with three of his unsigned ballplayers but he kept the results a secret, temporarily.

Veeck, who flew in from Florida, said he was flying out again immediately to the Indians' training camp at Tucson, Ariz.

He said any announcement about whether Pitcher Bob Lemon, Infielder Johnny Berardino and Pitcher Russ Christopher had signed would come from Tucson. Lemon evidently is basing salary demands on his 20 regular season and two World Series victories last year.

Hope Works Out

Tuscon, Ariz., March 5 (AP). Cleveland's Indians held only a mild workout today as Radio Comedian Bob Hope and a group of newsreel cameramen took over their training headquarters.

With 2000 amused spectators looking on, Hope was filmed reporting to Manager Lou Boudreau as a young recruit and undergoing the rigors of spring training.

Hope, who owns a small amount of stock in the club, quipped:

"Really, I came down here to get Boudreau's trophies. I'm going to melt them and go into the copper business."

Bucky Eyes Mound

Tampa, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—Bucky Walters was debating today whether he should double in brass this season—as manager and pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds.

"There is a strong possibility I may go back to pitching," Walters revealed. "But I'm going to wait until I'm sure because I wouldn't want to put myself on the active list and deprive some other pitcher of a chance until I am convinced I can make a go of it."

Rowe Signs Up

Clearwater, Fla., March 5 (AP). Lynwood Schoolboy Rowe signed his 1949 contract today, leaving the Philadelphia Phillies with one lone holdout. Only Second Baseman Buddy Blattner, acquired during the winter from the International League, is unsigned. Rowe had been a holdout and threatened to stay in his Arkansas home rather than work for less than he received last year.

Hodges Hits Triple

Vero Beach, Fla., March 5 (AP). Gil Hodges' triple was the only extra base hit today as Peewee Reese's team shut out Bruce Edwards' unit, 2-0, in a 6-inning intra-squad game of Brooklyn Dodgers. It was the first of the training season.

Hodges, battling for the first base job, subsequently scored on Reese's second-inning single, while a Dodger farmhand, Lefty Dan Bennett, was pitching.

Yanks Play Tuesday

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP).—Manager Casey Stengel announced today the New York Yankees would stage their first Regulars vs. Yannigans games next Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Today, Bobby Brown drilled at shortstop. Joe DiMaggio, still cautious and concerned about his sore heel, took part in the morning and afternoon workout without voicing any new complaints.

Giants Play Game

Phoenix, March 5 (U.P.)—Walker Cooper and Monte Kennedy, upon whom Manager Leo Durocher is depending to make the New York Giants a flag threat, will have their first trial in competition tomorrow.

Cooper will catch three innings in an intra-squad game, to see how his damaged knee stands up under actual working conditions. Without Cooper, Durocher would have to patch together a catching corps.

Cards Listen to Ump

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinal pitchers who probably will disagree with Umpire Bill Stewart many times before the season ends were under his personal guidance today as he instructed them in the new balk rules.

Joe Takes It Easy

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—Joe DiMaggio, the big and all-important question mark of the New York Yankees' training camp, still wasn't doing any running today and Manager Casey Stengel couldn't guess when the angular outfielder will be able to play.

Outside of DiMaggio, Stengel reported the squad in excellent condition and scheduled intra-squad games for Tuesday and Wednesday. All the pitchers except Frank (Spec) Shea already have started to unfurl their curve balls.

Blackwell in Camp

Tampa, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—Pitcher Ewell Blackwell and Outfielder Johnny Wyrostek arrived today to complete the Cincinnati Red roster with the exception of Pitcher Harry Gumbert, the club's lone holdout.

T-Day for Bosox

Sarasota, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—The Boston Red Sox were fixing a minor celebration for tomorrow—the day slugger Ted Williams is scheduled to arrive.

Williams, who already has agreed to terms for 1949, will sign hiis contract. Outfielder Stan Spence is the club's lone holdout. All non-battery men also are due to report tomorrow and the pitchers, who have been getting ample batting practice all week, will lose that privilege.

A's Begin Games

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 5 (U.P.).—Al Simmons and Jimmy Dykes will be the rival managers tomorrow as the Philadelphia Athletics stage their first intra-squad game here.

Joe Coleman and Lou Brissie will pitch for Dykes' team, with Bob Schoonover and Dick Blauman, a couple of Mack farm hands toiling for Simmons' regulars.

ON ROLLER SKATES—Youngsters who roller skate got a big kick out of the Stauber brothers' log-rolling act at the opening performance of the second annual Sportsmen's and Outdoor Show at the Armory yesterday. Ray Corley Selected as Outstanding

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

By a narrow three-point margin, Georgetown's Ray Corley was voted the outstanding college basketball player here in an official poll of the District's five leading coaches.

Corley had 46 points to 43 for George Washington's Maynard Haithcock. And close behind was GW's Johnny Moffatt with 39.

Selecting the 10 best players in the District for The Washington Post were Georgetown's Elmer Ripley; George Washington's George Garber; Maryland's Flucie Stewart; American's Staff Cassell and Catholic's Abe Rosenfield.

Corley received two first-place votes, two seconds and a third. Ten points were awarded for each first-place vote, nine for each second, etc.

Haithcock, tremendous defensive player, also received two first-place votes and a second but two fourth-place ballots brought down his total.

Rounding out the first five were Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe, 28 points, and American's Ron Garshag, 20. Garshag led all scorers in the District with 323 points.

A point behind Garshag were American's Bob Lamon and Ray (Ace) Adler, GW's tall man. Also gaining second-team honors were little Gene Szklarz, Catholic U.; Roy Ishman, American, and Bill Cantwell, the fourth GW man to make the first 10.

Corley, second to O'Keefe for Hoya scoring honors, long has been acclaimed the man who makes Georgetown go. Team captain, Ray is a smooth ball-handler and passer and also a deadly set shot.

Haithcock leads Colonial scorers and is particularly dangerous under the basket. In addition to his coolness and point-making talent, the GW cocaptain is one of the finest defense men in college ranks.

Blonde Johnny Moffatt is a spectacular player. He received one vote for the No. 1 spot; one second and two thirds but one coach rated Haithcock and Adler above him.

American's Ron Garshag is a much improved 6-foot-6 pivot man. A third-stringer last year, Garshag developed a devasting hook shot that principally was responsible for his 323-point total in 26 games. Against Bucknell, he bagged 38 points for the high single-game total around here.

Good-looking Tommy O'Keefe is the other half of Georgetown's one-two punch. For the second straight year, Tommy outpointed Corley with 286 points made principally with the same set shot weapon.

The District's 15 leading scorers, play-offs included:

	G.	FG.	F.	PF.	T.
Garshag, American	26	122	79	70	323
O'Keefe, Georgetown	23	113	60	60	286

Lamon, American	26	111	40	48	262
Cantwell, Geo. Wash.	25	86	40	77	238
Haithcock, Geo. Wash.	25	80	78	53	238
Corley, Georgetown	23	98	40	62	236
Losty, Catholic	21	89	57	50	235
Brawley, Maryland	26	78	71	52	227
Mack, Maryland	27	96	35	74	227
Szklarz, Catholic	20	85	40	42	210
Smith, Maryland	27	79	49	64	207
Moffatt, Geo. Wash.	25	72	63	88	207
Connor, Catholic	20	70	49	58	189
Brown, Georgetown	23	62	63	74	187

The Coaches' Team

Here's how the District college basketball coaches ranked the players. Point totals are in parentheses:

1. Ray Corley, Georgetown (46).
2. Maynard Haithcock, George Washington 43).
3. Johnny Moffatt, George Washington (39).
4. Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown (28).
5. Ron Garshag, American (20).
6. Bob Lamon, American (19).
7. Ray Adler, George Washington (19).
8. Gene Szklarz, Catholic (13).
9. Roy Ishman, American (13).
10. Bill Cantwell, George Washington (11).

Honorable Mention: Lee Brawley, Maryland (5); Spence Wright, Maryland 5); George Lambacher, Catholic (4); Gene Witkin, George Washington (3); Vin Leddy, Georgetown (3); Johnny Brown, Georgetown (2); Jim Losty, Catholic (1); Charley Mack, Maryland (1).

Kramer, Penn Manager, Has Most Entries

Lou Kramer, manager of the Penn Recreation Center, carried off top honors in obtaining entries for the third annual Washington Post bowling tournament which ended recently.

Kramer pulled the upset when he tallied 1175 entries to beat out his friend, Hap Newman, pilot of Chevy Chase Ice Palace.

Newman, who thought getting the most entries was "in the bag" for him, was stunned when he discovered that Kramer was high man.

Newman wound up with 1150, confident no one would come close to him. But Kramer, who conversed nightly with Newman, never tipped his hand.

Fact is, Newman has approximately 25 more alley beds than Kramer, which makes the Penn manager's victory the more impressive.

Manager Julie Singer of Greenway, official scorekeeper, still is pouring over the record-breaking list of more than 10,000.

The first women's match-game championship will be held today at Takoma alleys. Twenty-four bowlers will compete, starting at 2. p. m., today, with everyone getting a prize, cash or merchandise. Another round will be held next Sunday.

Arlington Bowling Center will do its bit to help the Arlington Boys' Club today in the annual handicap tournament. First prize is $75, entry fee $3.25. Scratch is 128, with three-fifths handicap.

Army Swimmers Swamp Middies

West Point, N. Y., March 5 (AP). Led by Jackie Craig, who counted victories in both the 220-yard and 440-yard events, the Army swimming team whipped Navy, 48-27, today in the Cadets' pool. Craig splashed home first in the 220 in 2:16.7, and in the 440 in 5:12.8.

A's Coach Reluctant To Let His Son Catch

By Red Smith

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., MARCH 5 (NYHT).—The big kid squatting in the batting cage in the Athletics' training camp looked familiar. It was difficult to place him right off, though; he was no veteran, obviously, and yet it seemed that a few years ago—

"That's Gidge," said Earle Brucker, curator of Connie Mack's pitchers.

Red Smith

That explained it. Gidge is Earle F. Brucker, jr., and it had been a few years since he was last encountered. On the last occasion he was in uniform, too, but that suit had the bell-bottom trousers which the Navy deemed de riguer for places like Guam. Now he is a rookie catcher with the A's, a very large one and a moderately rich one with a $30,000 bonus in the bank.

"But how's this?" his parent was asked. "Didn't you always say catching was the last position you'd want him to play?"

Brucker Pere had stated his opinion on this point to Connie Mack several years ago. Gidge used to work out with the Athletics, catching batting practice, and Connie liked the look of him and said to his father: "You're going to make a catcher out of him, aren't you?"

"WELL," SAID BRUCK, who used to be a catcher himself, "he'll probably be too big for the infield. If he's too slow for the outfield and can't pitch, why, I might have to let him try it behind the plate. But not otherwise."

"Why not?" Connie demanded, faintly nettled, for he used to be a catcher himself.

"Because," Bruck said, "a catcher does more work for less money than anybody else on a ball club. He's working with all that armor on, calling the pitches, running the game, busting up his hands, blocking off those big draft horses at the plate, hauling himself around and sweating, and the other guys get the money."

"But now, here was young Gidge catching.

"It just happened," his father explained. "He was playing the outfield as a kid but one summer we took him around the league with us and there's no place on a road trip for a kid outfielder just going along for the ride.

So he caught batting practice and one day in an exhibition game at Gratersford Prison in Pennsylvania he hit a ball a couple of miles over the upper cell block.

"That settled it for Mr. Mack. He made me promise that if and when the kid was ready to play professional ball, the A's would have a chance to bid on him. Naturally, I'd have seen to that in any case, although I wasn't too anxious for Gidge's sake to have him on the same club with me. Sometimes that can be a little rough.

"Gidge was going to San Diego State out home. The idea naturally got around that the A's had him tied up but when anybody asked me I explained that wasn't so. Bill Essick, of the Yankees, was one of the guys interested, by the way.

"FINALLY ONE FELLOW asked me, 'if we make an acceptable offer, will you say yes?' I told him no, not right off, first I'd have to give another club the right to bid. Well, the fellow said $30,000—I promised not to divulge his iame—and I said I'd let him know. I told Mr. Mack about it and at first he said he guessed he'd have to back off.

"But the A's thought about it some more. I was kind of arguing against them making an offer. But it was a funny position. If they let Gidge go somewhere else and he turned out well, the Philadelphia fans would have a right to holler.

"Finally the A's decided to match the offer. So Gidge signed and now he's a catcher, it says here."

Sportsmen's Show Has Everything

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Now I've seen everything.

By looking at some 467,000 items at last night's opening of the second annual Sportsmen's and Outdoor Show at the Armory, my sightseeing experience is complete.

Nothing can surprise me now—not even the Grand Canyon.

If the League of Maryland Sportsmen left anything out of their display, it wasn't missed. The five or six thousand customers who turned out for yesterday's two shows, to be duplicated every day through next Sunday, probably thought there were such things as live elephant hunts being staged somewhere off in the corner.

Your first impression is that the Armory is a nice place to stage a carnival. No rain and no sawdust. The many booths, food concessions, barkers and flying balloons give you that idea. It's a fact you can buy vegetable slicers, soda bottle tops, flashy jackets, lawn mowers and gyroscopes.

You can fire a machine gun (for a fee), shoot arrows, or if you're a sports writer, get a free scotch and soda. These activities are infrequently connected with the woodsy sports of hunting and fishing.

On the more legitimate side—if you're in a buying mood—you can acquire a 60-foot cabin cruiser which is on display. Just the thing for a Potomac cruise. You can get all the fishing tackle, all the instruction in fishing, all the clothes and gear you can carry.

You can buy one of 10 or 12 trailers on display, or a jeep or station wagon to pull it. You can pick out from a stuffed animal display the kind of game or birds you want to hunt.

Chief Henry Red Eagle, a real Algonquin Indian in ceremonial dress and blue silk socks, is master of ceremonies. In very interesting succession he brings on log rollers (Charlie and Joseph Stauber), canoe tilter (Red Farnum and George De Long), a cute little fly-caster (Aunalee Crusey), six retrieving dogs (handled by Clarence Hauwiller), pistol and rifle experts (Mary Brown and Norm Willard), and a bow-and-arrow artist (Carl Josephs).

It's a thorough show, anyway. In our book the best part, however is May's exhibition of insects. They've got a foot-long centipede. Honest!

Pantos Tops All-Metro

Central Star And Kingsbury Only Repeaters

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The 1949 All-Metropolitan Washington scholastic basketball team, announced today by The Washington Post, has scoring punch, brains, height, experience, speed, smart ballhandlers, and most important, Jimmy Pantos of Central.

The Viking Jack-of-All-Sports is captain and most valuable player on the All-Metro, selected from the cream of The Washington Post's All-Interhigh, All-Suburban and All-Prep teams.

Pantos and Roger Kingsbury of St. Albans, the hottest scoring center in local schoolboy basketball history, are the only repeaters on the All-Metro.

Star quarterback on Central's championship football team, Pantos was given similar responsibilities on the basketball team. But, in addition to calling the plays, he set 'em up and usually did the scoring, too.

It wasn't that he was hoggish. He was the best player on the team, and without him, Central wouldn't have come close to winning two straight Interhigh court championships.

Only 5 feet 10 inches, the shrewd Pantos made up for his height deficiency with split-second reflexes and deception. His 26 points against Anacostia set a modern Interhigh scoring record.

Six-foot, four-inch Kingsbury is the most accomplished center in the area, with his fakes, pasoffs, hook shots and tap-ins. He averaged 27 points per game, amazing considering the high schools play only 32 minutes. He reached his peak against Boys Latin of Baltimore when he dropped in 45 points.

Pantos' running mate at forward is Western's 5-foot, 11-inch Bucky Poston, whose shotgun set shots, fired practically from the hip, earned him the Interhigh scoring championship.

The two guards are Gonzaga's Tippy Larkins, a defensive ace, and Jim Gahagan, whose playmaking enabled George Washington of Alexandria to amass the only undefeated record in the area. Both are 6 feet, 2 inches tall, Larkins a driver, and Gahagan a good shot from long distances.

Catholic U.'s Boxing Team Ranks With Best in East

Cards Have Won Eight in Row

THERE HASN'T been an athletic scholarship granted at Catholic University since 1940, but there's not a thi teurish about the perform of its undefeated boxing team.

De-emphasis notwithstanding, boxing is the major sport at C. U., and the Cardinals once again must be considered one of the East's ring powers.

This season they carried over a four-match winning streak from 1948 and promptly stretched it to eight with triumphs over Syracuse, Georgetown, The Citadel and Army. The West Pointers were walloped, 6½-1½.

Maryland finally slowed down the victory march by achieving a 4-4 tie last Thursday in a weird evening at College Park.

But right now, C. U. is looking ahead to its participation in the Eastern Intercollegiates at State College, Pa., next Friday and Saturday. After a long wait, C. U. finally has been admitted to the exclusive six-school association.

The members include Penn State, Syracuse, Army, Virginia and Western Maryland.

Then dual matches remain with John Carroll at Cleveland, March 19; University of Virginia here, March 26, and Miami, Fla., there on April 1.

THERE'S AN amazing job being done at CU by an amazing little guy, Edmund R. LaFond, director of athletics and boxing coach.

His titles easily could be reversed. LaFond's love for boxing started in 1924 when he organized a team as a student. He took over officially as coach in 1930.

Bucky Ennis, 155-pounder, is considered the knockout artist of the squad and 165-pound Billy Maher has an enviable record against classy opposition.

MAHER LOST a disputed decision by a point to Jim Rollier, Syracuse's Eastern champion. He came back to beat The Citadel's Dale Matthews, Southern Conference champ. Matthews, 19-year-old son of The Citadel's Coach Matty Matthews, never had lost a fight in his life and had a collegiate streak of 22 bouts.

Maher's a strong body-puncher and a deceivingly hard boy to hit. Most consistent boy for the Cardinals is Tommy Cronin, 125-pounder with nine consecutive wins. Five times this year, little Tommy has secured that valuable first point.

Jack Redmond, 130-pounder, nearly matches Cronin's consistency. He was undefeated after eight bouts until decisioned by Maryland's Spence Hopkins.

Johnny Arnold started out as the 135-pounder, but has a jammed hand and Joe Incernato is taking over for him. Capt. Cal Nisson is out for a while, too. Nisson, who has to work at night, was falling behind in his studies. Filling in capably is Dick Trumper, 145.

The Cards were supposed to be weak in the top classes, but Lightheavyweight Cliff Sisler has won four and engaged in a draw.

Heavyweight Charley Rohr won the Syracuse match when he sprang one of the biggest upsets of the year, outpointing Marty Crandell, Eastern champion. And Rohr decisioned Maryland's Harry Swartzwelder for the vital point that tied the match after Catholic had been down, 4-1.—JACK WALSH.

65,000 See Rose Beau Finish 3d

Arcadia, Calif., March 5 (AP).—Miss Grillo, long-distance running mare from the Argentine, closed out her racing career in victory today when she won the $50,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap before the largest crowd of the season at Santa Anita park.

Sixty-five thousand fans saw the 7-yera-old Belle of the Pampas come from behind and capture the closing day attraction at Santa Anita over a field of eight younger rivals.

Speeding into contention in the last quarter of the long mile and one-half grind, the Mill River Stable contender pounded into the lead in the stretch and won the $38,100 top money by a length and a quarter.

Dinner Gong Second

Abe Hirschberg's Dinner Gong was second, and a length behind was the Foxcatcher Farm's Rose Beam.

Fourth place went to I. J. Collins' golden chestnut, Vulcan's Forge, winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap a week ago and burdened with high weight of 122 pounds.

Miss Grillo, third only a length behind the Vulcan at a mile and one quarter last Saturday in sloppy going, was the heavy favorite at the extra distance today. With Johnny Adams turning in a skillful ride, she justified it.

The winning time was 2:29 over a track that was ranged just between good and fast.

The winner paid $4.80, $3.10 and $2.60; Dinner Gong $3.30 and $2.70; Rose Beam $3.60.

Sun Dries Out Track

A bright sun beamed down, drying it out rapidly as the day wore on. The weather gave the track a break too, as the biggest throng of the meeting swarmed all over the vast plant and played the merriest tune on the pari-mutuel machines this season.

Miss Grillo, Trainer Horatio Luro announced prior to the race, is to be retired from racing and bred to the crack Alsab.

She is owned by Mrs. Barclay Douglas of Newport, R. I., and New York.

Trailing the first four in were Natural, Cordiner, Fast And Fair, Chagin and Rialto, the latter also trained by Luro and coupled with Miss Grillo in the betting.

Rose Beam broke on top, with C. S. Howard's English-bred Fast And Fair and Vulcan's Forge quickly moving to the front. The Britisher and Vulcan's Forge held the pace down past the grandstand the first time, held it on around and down the backstretch, with Dinner Gong and Miss Grillo laying back.

Rose Beam Rallies

Rose Beam came up again, and entering the stretch it was a duel between the Foxcatcher challenger, Vulcan's Forge and on came both the Gong and Miss Grillo. Miss G. Swept on by Dinner Gong and Vulcan's Forge fell back.

A total of $633,905 was wagered on the race, a boost over the previous high for the meeting amounting to $593,429 registered in the Santa Anita Handicap.

"This is the greatest distance running mare in racing today," Adams said later. "I wish we could have caught a track like this last week." Twice winner of the Pimlico Cup at marathon distances, Miss Grillo adios was a shining one.

With today's purse her total winnings rose to $250,930.

Navy Wrestlers Win Over Penn

Annapolis, Md., March 5—(AP) Coach Ray Swartz's Navy wrestling team completed its regular season today with a 23-9 victory over the University of Pennsylvania. The midshipman have a record of six wins, one defeat and one tie.

Penn, winning only one fall in eight bouts, suffered its fourth loss as against three wins and a tie. There were two draws.

Army Outshoots Navy

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP).—Army's rifle team gained revenge for a 1948 defeat by outscoring Navy 1414 to 1402 today in the regular season's finale for both teams.

Freeman Wins Singles Title

London, March 5 (U.P.).—Dr. David Freeman of Pasadena, Calif., today won the singles championship in the All-England Badminton tournament by impressively defeating Ooi Teik Hock of Malaya, 15-1, 15-6.

Teik Hock and his partner Tech Seng Khoon, won the doubles title by beating Freeman and Wynn Rogers, also of the United States, 15-5, and 15-6. The mixed doubles championship went to Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Stephens of the United States.

Navy Fencers Baffle Army

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP). Navy's undefeated swordsmen baffled Army 16-11 today for their eighth straight fencing victory.

The midshipmen's sabre team led by Sam Powell provided the margin of victory as Navy gained revenge for an unexpected defeat at West Point last year.

Mott's Chen Triumphs in Redland Hunt

P. T. Mott's Chen ran off with yesterday's Inauguration fixture at the Redland point-to-point meet, held on Dave Martin's farm at Oakdale, Md.

Chen was ridden by the well-known show ring rider, Joe Mackey, from Kansas City, Mo. Running well up the entire distance Chen was an easy victor for Redland's master with plenty in reserve.

Marian Curran's Lump Sum, ridden by Marian Curran, jr., made the feature race a contest from the start. Though given a well-rated ride, was not good enough to withstand the strong-hearted drive of Chen.

Advance Guard Third

Clifford Smith of Warrenton, Va., piloted his Advance Guard to a third in the feature test, with creditable performances being made by W. T. Gary's Jerry and Justin Funkhouser's Heriade, ridden by Frank Gall.

Judy Johnson aboard Tony Auth's Carverdale Lee had her mount well placed when unfortunately a billet broke and she had to pull up. Lord Loudon, one of the favorites from Leesburg, Va., found the going too tough and folded up crossing a ditch just before the fourteenth fence.

In the Terpinning pair race, Dorothy Kershaw's Klassie Teddy, ridden by Joan Randall, and Marian Curran's Free Kite, with Bill Wilson up, led from start to finish to annex the first place. P. T. Mott's Melody Spar and D. Van Schaick's Kelly finished in second place.

Posh Buckler Winner

Marilyn Himes, on the good brown mare, Wood Secret, from Middleburg, Va., and Dr. John R. Keeler, on Bill Carl's Sir Rowdy, pulled up after the eighth fence and did not finish.

The heavyweight race was a decisive victory for Albert Stabler's weight-carrying Posh Buckler, ridden by Ray Moffit, who had to tote about 30 pounds in his saddle cloth. Justin Funkhouser's G. I. Joe with an equal amount of dead weight was a tiring second, though given a well-judged ride by O'Sullivan Farms' Frank Gall.

P. T. Mott's Leap Year led off the first half of a double for the Auburn Farm as the smooth-running chestnut gelding galloped to first place in the Gap-Hunters Race with Thomas T. Mott, jr., in the saddle. Ruth Van Schaick's Alert was a good second with Nancy Hanna in the irons. Albert Stabler's Nancy, ridden by Frank Gibson, saved enough ground to finish in the show position.

Blue Peter Tops Derby List of 113

Louisville, Ky., March 5 (U.P.).—Lured by the gold and glory which goes with victory, 113 three-year-olds were nominated by 77 owners today for the 1949 Kentucky Derby to be run on May 7.

Th list of candidates for the seventy-fifth running of America's most publicized horse race was announced by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs. It included the top juveniles of the 1948 season with the exception of Myrtle Charm, the filly champion.

Led by Joseph M. Roebling's 2-year-old champion, Blue Peter, who won six stakes and $189,185, there were 23 stakes winners and 12 other horses which placed in stakes on the list.

Clifford Mooers' Old Rockport, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, and Fred W. Hooper's Olympia, who took the other outstanding winter 3-year-old classic, the Flamingo Stakes, also were among the nominees which included such outstanding performers as Mr. Busher, Capot, Ocean Drive, Johns Joy, Illuminable, Palestinian, Prince Quest, Sport Page, Stone Age, Wine List, Ol' Skipper, Provocative Algasir, Curandero, Admiral Lea, Model Cadet, Alsab's Day, Duplicator, Okey Smokey, Swap Out and Commodore Lea.

Since the Preakness and Belmont stakes have been reduced to $75,000 this year, the Kentucky Derby will be the only event in America's triple crown carrying $100,000 added money this year.

Blue Peter Derby Winter Book Choice

St. Louis, March 5 (AP).—Joseph M. Roebling's champion juvenile, Blue Peter, is favored for the Kentucky Derby in winter book odds posted by Betting Commissioner James J. Carroll today.

Blue Peter is marked at 3 to 1 to win, 3 to 2 to place, and 3 to 4 to show.

Close behind is a Greentree Stable entry, Capot, at 4-1, 2-1, and even in the three categories.

Sonny Boy West Will Tackle Buster Tyler Here March 24

Sonny Boy West, 19-year-old local boxer, ranked sixth among the lightweights nationally, signed yesterday to oppose Buster Tyler, highly regarded welterweight, at Uline Arena, March 24, in a scheduled 10-rounder on the first boxing show of the Liberty Athletic Club this year.

Promoter Goldie Ahearn said that West was forced into the heavier class to find someone willing to fight him. West gained national ranking by his victory over Johnnie Williams in Baltimore recently.

World's Lightweight Champion Ike Williams refused a $5000 guarantee to fight West at Uline's in a nontitle bout, and Johnny Bratton, Paddy DeMarco, Lew Jenkins, Terry Young and Eddie Giosa were others who rejected Ahearn's offers.

Tyler, originally of Miami, Fla., is probably the toughest big man Sonny Boy has yet met. Buster holds decisions over Beau Jack, Tommy Bell, Vinnie Rossano and has boxed to a draw with Kid Gavilan, who defeated Tyler in a close decision in a return bout.

Ahearn predicts that West, will figure prominently in the world's lightweight championship picture within six months. "We are pointing for the world's lightweight championship, and are willing to box anybody in order to get a championship shot at Ike Williams," says Mel Stevenson, manager of Sonny Boy.

Blackwood Has Tough One Monday

Joe Blackwood, middleweight who invaded Washington so successfully he's going to settle here, meets his toughest local test tomorrow night in the Turner's windup.

Joltin' Joe faces Philadelphian Georgie Hill, seeking his fourth straight triumph.

Blackwood, who has lost only 5 bouts in 65, came here last November and decisioned Ken Stribling. He had Stribling down in the late rounds and showed it wasn't accidental in two fights here since.

Al Wright was kayoed in two rounds and, in his last start, Blackwood cooled Chet Vinci in the first.

Hill Beat Him Once

Blackwood, managed by Bill Daly, is handled locally by Gil Striner. Striner hopes to steer him into some of the big-name outdoor bouts scheduled here this summer. The 21-year-old middleweight has done most of his boxing in New England. After coming here, he liked the town so much he plans to live here.

Hill will be the big test for Blackwood. The boys have fought twice and Hill inflicted one of those five blots on Blackwood's record in the first bout at Salem, Mass.

They're still talking there about the sensational scrap the boys waged. It was good enough to have a rematch at the Boston Gardens and Blackwood won that one on a split decision. Hill, himself, has lost only three in 30-odd fights.

Top Contender

Blackwood's one of the best fighters to apear here in some time. He's considered a top contender for the middleweight crown and Matchmaker Gabe Mendez has and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has offered Champ Marcel Cerdan a nontitle bout with Blackwood on Bert Lytell, rated just behind Cerdan at the moment, beat Blackwood in Madison Square Garden but it was an unpopular split decision.

In a special eight-rounder cocky Danny Petro will meet Cincinnati's Jackie Goode. Petro leads his own cheering section and has been clamoring for a bout with Jimmy Cooper.

Scott Richardson meets Gene Harley in a five-rounder and two four-round prelims include Puggy King vs. Little Dynamite and Les Johnson vs. Bobby Page.

Short of Centers, Quarterbacks

Navy Has 11 Veterans For Monday Grid Drill

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP).—Eleven letter-winners, just enough for lineup, will be among the 150 Midshipmen who open spring football training at the Naval Academy Monday.

It's a cinch all 11 won't be on the Los Angeles Coliseum turf when Navy and Southern California kick off their 1949 seasons next September 24.

Take the varsity holdovers alone and there wouldn't be a man to start a play. No center and no quarterback.

Coach George Sauer has veteran ends to choose from, the right number of tackles and guards, and three backs. But, laments the big Midwesterner about to start his second year as Navy Coach:

"We have to find a new center, who passes the ball back, and a new quarterback, who hands it off. They put an offense in motion."

Ferd Gambke, a fourth-stringer on the Navy squad that lost eight before its stunning 21-21 stand-off with Army last year, is the only candidate with any major league experience at center.

Billy Earl, a fiery little fellow who has subbed two seasons for Halfback Pete Williams, gets first crack at quarterback.

Both of them are in for a time at the hands of a crop of Plebes, anxious to unseat their Midshipman superiors.

Centers Bill Bryson and Walt Schifferli, Ball-Handlers Bob Zastrow and Mike Sorrentino were mainstays of the Plebe eleven which knocked off all eight opponents last fall.

On the ends, Sauer has Captin-elect Phil Ryan back, along with Harrison Frasier, Willie Wilson and Kit Carson.

Jim Hunt, a Baltimore husky, and Bob Renneman are again available at tackle, Walt Wagner and Charlie Cooper at guard.

Bill Powers and Roger Drew, fullback and placekick specialist, return with Earl in the backfield.

'Dr. Christian' Wills Collection to Library

Cut Proposed In Overseas Plane Fares

A plan to slice flying fares to Europe by a third was announced yesterday by Juan Trippe, president of Pan aAmerican Airways, after he watched Margaret Truman christen the plane he hopes will make the plan feasible.

The new Pan American clipper ship America, first of 20 Boeing Stratocruisers ordered by the company, was christened by Miss Truman in ceremonies at National Airport.

With a ship like the Stratocruiser, largest commercial airplane in the world, with a 75-passenger capacity and a cruising speed of 340 miles per hour, Trippe hopes to inaugurate a tourist class air service this fall with a one-third reduction in fares, if foreign governments permit, he said.

Speaking in the presence of Mrs. Truman, Cabinet officers, Congressmen and high-ranking military officers, Trippe said tourist travel to Europe "will add a great new flood of tourist dollars to the dollars American taxpayers are generously giving western Europe under the Marshall Plan."

This appeared to be a pointed statement for the benefit of foreign airlines which, it is understood, have opposed Trippe's tourist travel ideas

Vice President Alben W. Barkley, speaking at the ceremony, which was attended by some 2000 persons, said that "the airplane can and must become the most powerful messenger of peace."

The America has been in Washington making final crew-training flights before starting regular service to Hawaii. Company officials said the plane will be on display at National Airport from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. today. Visitors will be allowed to walk through the ship.

The two-decker "Clipper America" planes are scheduled to enter service between Honolulu and San Francisco-Los Angeles about April 1, and between New York and Bermuda April 15. They are expected to begin flying passenger schedules between New York and London about June 1.

Pan American received the third of the new planes from the Boeing Airplane Co. last week. Seventeen more on order are scheduled for delivery before the end of the year.

The $1,500,000 planes can fly 5 miles high to avoid rough weather, the company said. They are equipped with a lower-deck lounge and snack bar, and an eight-generator electrical system with an output large enough for "brilliant lighting of 25 five-room homes, with enough left over to operate their radios, refrigerators, stoves and heaters—and the small boy's electric train."

Army Orders Boots

St. Louis, March 5 (AP).—The International Shoe Co. said today it had been awarded an Army contract for 431,000 pairs of combat boots. One lot of 275,000 pairs is for delivery in May, June and July. The rest is for August and September delivery.

Building Material Sales Dip Seen

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—Sales of United States Gypsum Co., large building material manufacturer, will decline about 3 to 5 per cent in the first quarter this year as compared with 1948, W. L. Keady, president, said today.

"We are hopeful that business will improve in the second quarter," Keady said, "but the fact is that prospects are based on hopes.

"A year ago there was a good demand for houses. Construction activities were already proceeding and we sure of satisfactory business for several months ahead.

"Today, with all of the uncertainties brought on by Government-restricted credit and the threats of public housing and rent control, we do not know how much business we will have for the second quarter.

"We hope that Congress will reject the President's proposals for public housing and rent control and his program for controlling inflation. Confidence would then be restored and we could then expect a reasonably good year."

Terps Begin Spring Drills Monday, Too

Maryland begins six weeks of spring football drills Monday with some 100 candidates expected to turn out.

There should be quite a scramble for the ten first-string spots left by graduation. Some of them may be taken over by members of last year's good freshmen eleven.

Coach Jim Tatum figures his biggest job is building up a new backfield combination and a good offensive center to replace Gene Kinney.

Bib Moe Modzelewski, triple-threat fullback, and Buck Early, speedy halfback, from the 1948 frosh crew may help Tatum solve that backfield problem.

Also he has four good candidates for the quarterback slot vacated by Vic Turyn—veterans Joe Tucker of Washington and Stan Levine of Pittsburgh, Pa., and George Howard of Baltimore and Andy MacDonald of Flint, Mich., both up from freshman ranks.

Tatum plans to put the boys through weekly intra-squad scrimmages starting the second week.

Virginia Boxers Draw

Charlottesville, Va., March 5.—Scoring in the last three bouts, Penn State managed to squeeze out a 4-4 tie with the University of Virginia before a capacity crowd of 4000 at the Memorial Gymnasium here tonight.

The surprise decision was in the 139-pound class in which Virginia's Al Hollingsworth, after being knocked down twice, punched out a victory over Johnny Benglian.

Last year's meeting also resulted in a 4-4 draw.

Washington D. C's contribution to the Virginia team, Heavyweight Al Smith, dropped a close decision to counterpunching Charlie Drazenovich.

Scribes Against 16-Team Plan

Durham, N. C., March 5 (AP).—The executive committee of the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association today took a stand against a coach's proposal to enlarge the conference basketball tournament field by 16 teams.

By unanimous vote the committee went on record as opposing any change in the present eight-team system. It gave the following reasons against changing the setup:

Lions Whip Rockets, 5-4

Philadelphia, March 5—The Washington Lions finished their season series with the Philadelphia Rockets by gaining a 5-4 decision in their American Hockey League contest here tonight before 2000 fans.

Although they lost the Rockets beat the Lions six out of eight games this season.

Harry Frost spearheaded Washington to its eleventh victory of the year as the Lions tallied three times in the opening period and once in both the second and third periods.

The Rockets got one in the first period and there in the final period. Frost scored twice and had two assists.

American U. Swimmers Romp

American University closed its swimming season with a decisive 56-19 trouncing of Roanoke College in a dual meet at American yesterday.

The win gave American an impressive season's record of nine and one, beaten only by Loyola of Baltimore. American is looking forward to avenging this defeat when they meet Loyola in the Mason-Dixon Conference meet Friday and Saturday at Loyola.

In yesterday's meet American took six out of eight first places.

Quantico High Wins Group 3

Fredericksburg, Va., March 5 (AP).—Quantico High captured the Group III Northeast District basketball crown here today by defeating Carolina High of Bowling Green, 45-34.

The win earned Quantico a bid to the State Group III tournament to be held at William & Mary at Williamsburg, starting Friday.

Navy J. V. Wins on Mat

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP).—The Navy junior varsity wrestling team closed out an undefeated season today with a 24-6 victory over Penn University for its third straight win.

Terps Play Nine

The University of Maryland football team will play a nine-game schedule next season. The Terps will meet West Virginia on Thanksgiving Day in Washington.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—With corn showing the most strength, grains had a steady tone on the Board of Trade today. Best gains were not held through to the close, wheat backing down nearly a cent in late dealings from highs scored during the first hour.

Prices opened higher and moved up in a fair display of strength during the first hour. Buying was mainly a continuation of the sudden upsurge which got underway late in yesterday's session. A good deal of it was attributed to previous short sellers.

Later the trading pace slowed, with the trend down slightly in wheat and oats. Corn, however, held up well. Purchases of cash corn on a to-arrive basis fell off to 30,000 bushels, indicating some slowing up in offerings by the country.

Wheat closed 1⅛@¼ higher, corn was ⅞@1⅛ higher, oats were unchanged to ⅛ higher, rye was 2½ to 3 cents higher, soybeans were 1 to 1½ higher and lard was 20 to 30 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Different Logic, Same Purpose

There's a curious contrast and parallel between the position of the Council of Economic Advisers today and the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion right after VJ-Day.

Today Leon Keyserling and John D. Clark, two of the three members of the Council, are reassuring President Truman and the nation that inflation is still to be more feared than deflation. And so Keyserling and Clark muster economic rationale for the President's political program—higher minimum wages, higher unemployment compensation, broadening of the social security base, and standby price and rationing controls.

Livingston

After the war, Robert R. Nathan, then deputy director for reconversion, was interested in a legislative program too. He wanted a higher minimum wage, higher unemployment compensation, a broadening of the social security base, and continuance of price and rationing controls. But his economic pitch was almost the reverse of Keyserling's and Clark's. Nathan said the country faced widespread unemployment— 8 million to 10 million—during reconversion. He wanted the Government to provide social cushions against the shock. Price control would sustain purchasing power, likewise higher unemployment compensation.

Nathan encouraged labor to demand higher wages on the ground that profits were ample to pay them. Now Keyserling, who is the most articulate member of the President's Council, takes a similar tack. At a dinner in New York he urged delegates of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, AFL, to avoid becoming "labor statesmen."

He declared: "'Labor statesmen' is a fine-sounding expression. Too often it is used to mean that labor should make the sacrifice play first. I don't ask you to do that. I ask you to be good trade unionists, to be militant trade unionists in the best sense of that word. We can raise our living standards and our real wages, which I believe means raising our money wages, year after year."

Projection of the Fears

Nathan's worst postwar fears were never realized. Unemployment during the reconversion period hit a high of 2,700,000 in March 1946. Yet his forecasting error is understandable. He was projecting his apprehensions. The great problem in government in the fall of 1945 was to ease the transition, to get businesses converted from war to peace production, to find jobs for displaced workers, to get veterans located, to build housing. The memories of the 1929-33 depression were still vivid. A repetition was to be guarded against at all costs. Few persons feared inflation. Most Government forecasts—and preparations—were for deflation, as the economic eventuality hardest to handle.

The parallel applies today. Much thinking in the Government, as the result of inflation, is still directed at inflation. Suggestions have been made to drop the peg on Government bonds, to reinstate price controls, to limit wage increases, to cut Federal expenses, and so on. Government economists feel they know how to handle deflation. Merely spend money, increase public works. They learned that from John Maynard Keynes. So, naturally, they're inclined to concentrate on the problem that hasn't been solved.

Questionable Strategy

Keyserling's advice to labor may be unstrategically timed. He may be getting too far out on a limb. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, is somewhat more reserved about the outlook than his colleague. Nourse feels we're in a period of "disinflation," a word used by Economist Alexander Sachs in the summer of 1947 to mean "relief from or easing of upward pressures on the price structure." And disinflation—a diminution of demand for goods, services, and labor—can hardly be described as a good signal for making big wage demands. Labor can hope to make economic gains over the years, but not necessarily every year.

Three developments underline the disinflation:

1. The drop in the cost of living (see chart). True, it's only 2 per cent from the high, but the full effects of declines in wholesale prices have not yet been felt at retail.

2. Relaxation by the Federal Reserve Board of installment credit terms. Apparently, the board feels that production of most consumer durable goods has caught up with demand and that consumer credit expansion is no longer likely to get out of hand.

3. Henry Ford 2d and John S. Bugas, vice president in charge of labor relations at Ford, have changed their minds about the inevitability of a fourth-round wage increase.

In November, Ford and Bugas said an increase was in the "atmosphere." Now Bugas has written Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, and all Ford employes, that a wage increase or a pension plan would have to be paid for by "our customers in higher car prices." But he added, "we are convinced that too many of them would not stand for this."

The point is simple. In a seller's market, wage increases can be passed along to customers. And this is a buyers' market.

Farm Equipment Supplies Reported Largest Since 1942

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—Users of International Harvester Co.'s farm equipment and motor trucks will be able to obtain more new machines this spring than at any time in the last seven years, John McCaffrey, president, said today.

In his quarterly review, McCaffrey said, "This year, for the first time since the beginning of the war, inventories of finished machines have accumulated in a somewhat normal way in our sales channels and in the hands of dealers in the field."

McCaffrey said the company's sales in the first quarter of its fiscal year (November through January) totaled about $230,360,000, highest for any first quarter in history. They were up 23.4 per cent from the first quarter a year ago.

"Refrigeration sales showed the largest percentage increase for the quarter over a year ago, followed by farm tractors, farm implements and industrial power equipment," McCaffrey said.

African Import Ban Stirs Frantic Buying

Johannesburg, South Africa, March 5 (AP).—Frantic buyers stripped shops bare of luxuries today after publication of a a list of imports banned to save sterling and dollars for the union's quaking economic set up.

Commercial men in Johannesburg said the government, with one pen stroke, has created the biggest black market Africa ever has known.

Whisky of any kind was unobtainable and storekeepers said imported cosmetics won't last a month at the present rate of buying. One woman paid a city chemist £200 (about $806) for his entire stock of her favorite brand of cosmetics.

Baltimore Markets

Baltimore, March 5 (AP) (USDA).—CATTLE—Compared last Friday: slaughter steers under 1100 lbs. steady to 50 cents higher; heavier weights weak to 50 cents lower; mixed yearlings and heifers steady to strong; cows generally steady; bulls fully steady to 50 cents higher; stock cattle fully steady to strong; bulk high-medium to high-good slaughter steers, 23.50@25.40; common to average-medium, 21.50@23.00; few small lots medium and good mixed yearlings, 848-1125 lbs., 23.50@23.75; mostly odd lots common and medium heifers, 19.50@20.00; common and medium, 17.50@18.50; canners and cutters, 15.00@17.00; odd shelly canners down to 12.00; good sausage bulls, 21.00@24.00, few late to 24.50; common and medium, 16.00@20.50; lightweight canner bulls down to 16.50; few lots and short loads medium and good 610-934 lb. stocker and feeder steers, 22.00@23.75.

CALVES—Compared last Friday: all grades about steady, but undertone weaker. Week's top, 35.00; good and choice vealers, 31.00@35.00; common and medium vealers and slaughter calves, 19.00@31.00; odd culls, 10.00@19.00.

HOGS—Compared last Friday: top 50 cents higher, but otherwise steady; around three loads decks good and choice 180-222 lb. rail-shipped barrows and gilts, 22.25@22.75; bulk good and choice 180-225 lb. trucked-in barrows and gilts, 21.75@22.00; 225-250 lbs., 21.00@21.25; 250-275 lbs., 20.00@20.25; 275-300 lbs., 19.25@19.50; 300-350 lbs., 18.25@18.90; 350-400 lbs., 17.25@17.50; over 400 lbs., 16.25 down; 120-140 lbs., 19.00@19.25; 140-160 lbs., 20.75@21.00; 160-180 lbs., 21.50@21.75; sows under 400 lbs., 16.50@16.75; 400-450 lbs., 15.50@15.75; heavier weights 14.50 down. Odd stags discounted 2.00 from price paid for same weights fews. Garbage-fed hogs discounted 2.00@2.50 from price paid for comparable weight grain-fed offerings.

SHEEP—Compared last Friday: wooled slaughter lambs and ewes too scarce to permit accurate comparsion prices. Quotations nominally unchanged. Odd head choice lambs sold upward to 25.00 the quotable top; choice ewes were quoted to 11.00, but only odd head common offerings were noted at 6.00.

Grain Market

D. C. Finance Firm Reports Record Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

Lincoln Service Corp. reported net income of $358,512 or $8.97 a common share for 1948, compared with $329,756 or $8.01 a share in the previous year.

DELMAR

The personal finance firm, whose head offices are in Washington, operates 35 units in seven States.

President Charles Delmar said yesterday the company, established in 1931, set new records in earnings and volume of business during the past year. Six offices were established in Florida in 1948 in a new expansion move.

Operating income aggregated $1,440,437, compared with $1,199,372 in the previous year. Notes receivable at yearend totaled $4,923,703, against $4,095,826 on December 31, 1947.

Delmar indicated that the company plans to establish "a few more offices during the current year in another State that has been surveyed."

KREWSON FETED — Earl D. Krewson, manager of the Washington branch office of the New York Life Insurance Co., was honored yesterday with a luncheon. He has retired after 47 years with the company. Among the 150 who attended the affair in the Mayflower were Dudley Dowell, vice president; Romney L. Campbell supervisor of agencies; Charles O'Connell and F. M. Bishop, agency service supervisors, and Edward McPherson, comptroller. Krewson has to his credit the beginning of life insurance careers for many successful agents, nine managers and assistant managers, all of whom attended the testimonial. Clark Gearhart of Denver was introduced as the new local manager.

DUMONT COMMENT: The Wall Street Journal says that preliminary reports indicate that sales of Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., last year were more than double those of 1947. "Profits rose some 400 per cent. Volume in 1948 probably topped 26 million dollars, compared with slightly more than 11 million in 1947. Profit, which in 1947 was $563,677, exceeded $2,600,000 last year. Since the turn of this year, it is understood, DuMont has been operating at the rate of 50 million dollars a year." The company's A stock, traded over-the-counter here, is reported by local brokers to be in active demand.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Douglas M. Boone, veteran of 26 years in hotel business, has been appointed manager of the Sheraton Hotel here. While at the Miles Standish Hotel in Boston, Boone battled the censors and came out victor in getting clearance for waitresses to wear transparent skirts . . . Martin I. Scott, president of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, will address the D. C. Chapter at a luncheon Wednesday in the Army and Navy Club . . . A. Alan Ziegler, manager of United Air Lines ticket offices in Washington, has been commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

SALES GAIN: Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported February sales of $3,657,354, a gain of 3.5 per cent over the same 1948 month. Volume for the first two months aggregated $7,391,025, up 5.5 per cent. Treasurer W. H. Churchill noted that the chain operated 141 stores in February, against 136 in the like month last year.

C. & P. REPORT: Operating revenues and net income of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., reflecting heavier investment in plant, rose substantially in January. Gross was $2,930,230 against $2,595,296 in the same 1948 month. Net totaled $328,243, as compared with $242,018. For the 12 months ended January 31, 1949, the company showed an average return of 4.24 per cent on investment against 2.78 per cent in the previous 12 months. Directors approved a further outlay of $121,000 for new construction and improvements.

80TH BIRTHDAY: Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. last Thursday observed the 80th anniversary of its chartering by Congress. Back in 1869, members of the mutual relief association paid $1.10 each on death of a fellow member, whose beneficiary got the proceeds. The association showed no progress in its first 25 years. Its growth dates back to December, 1893, when William Montgomery, now president, was elected secretary. The one-man society has grown to assets of nearly 200 million dollars today and now has about 1400 full-time employes.

EARNINGS: Container Corp. of America reported net income of $10,424,593 or $10.12 a common share for 1948, compared with $10,273,603 or $10.09 a share in 1947. Other earnings reports:

Are You in a Rut?
Are you finding it hard to meet your obligations on the salary you now receive? Are today's inflated prices slowly eating into your savings? Do you and your wife both work or are you working 2 jobs in order to make both ends meet and pay the bills?
How much longer can you hold out? What will you do next? Would you like to buy a home, or live in a better apartment—in a better neighborhood? Are you and your wife reading ads—hoping to find a higher paying job? How can you know what lies behind an ad after you read it? Could you get along with the man who wrote it, or would you be happy and successful, while working with his company under his direction?
YOU WILL NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU INVESTIGATE!
You're looking for a larger opportunity? Well, we're looking for 8 good men and the opportunity we offer you paid the following men last week as follows:
J. J. J., $102.74.
J. K. D., $161.45.
H. R. G., $145.25.
J. J. H., $122.24.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MARCH 6, 1949

NECKLINE interest is the important detail of this Paris import, a black and white faille dinner dress by Jacques Fath. Cut low in front and back, it points upward at either side to form a dramatic petal frame for the face and shoulders. Skirt has huge pockets and leather belt. This gown and the coat, by Jean Desses, at lower right, are from the group of French and English imports brought to Washington by Woodward & Lothrop

U. S. Debut by Dior

Paris, Main Street Meet—in a Flurry Of Buttons and Bows

By Peggy Preston

WITH A FLURRY of buttons and bows, spectacular evening gowns, and slit-skirted suits, Christian Dior's first American collection made its Washington debut yesterday.

The occasion was noteworthy in several respects. But perhaps its greatest significance lay in the fact that American women were looking at clothes made for them, in this country, by one of the greatest French couturiers of them all.

This is something entirely new in the fashion field. In the past, a girl with a yen for a Paris original accepted designs meant primarily for Frenchwomen. Now, like the mountain coming to Mohamed, M. Dior has lent his talents to a collection designed to suit the figure, taste and mode of life of the American woman. He offers ready-to-wear clothing that brings the boulevards of Paris to the main street of the U.S.A.

PARIS imports are still important fashion news in this country, however, and one group of them arrived in Washington this week, another is expected within a few days. None of Dior's French designs have been shown here at the time of this writing, but in order to point up the differences in the two types of collections we have included on this page pictures of both.

The photographs at upper left and lower right are from the Paris collections of Jacques Fath and Jean Desses. Shown in the French capital a few weeks ago, they were flown here in time for a press preview Friday.

THOSE FAMILIAR with the Paris designs of M. Dior will note a studied difference in his American models shown yesterday. They weigh much less, for example, than their French counterparts, have fewer hooks and eyes and are easier to get into. The designer, noting the pace at which the average American woman lives, evidently decided she needed clothes that were simple and free.

There is a marked absence of buckram lining in skirts, stiffening being present in only one or two of the voluminous evening skirts.

Wearable little suits are important, a salute from M. Dior to the American career woman who would look efficient, but pretty, at her desk.

Of high fashion interest in the collection are the use of pockets. These details spring out surprisingly on almost every costume. Sometimes they circle the sides of the hips and at other times are actual hip pockets, complete with long red handkerchief.

Waistlines are well defined and are generally slightly lower in back than in front, a line which this designer favors strongly. Shoulders are rounded and the length of the skirts vary from 13 to 14 inches, depending on the type of dress.

Bow-knot necklines are distinctive touches as are Dior's provocative use of bows on most of the dresses. One frock, entitled "Virginia," has a bodice composed entirely on a huge bow of fabric.

THE "FRANCE TO AMERICA" feeling of the collection extended to the audience and the occasion as well. Staged in the Blue Room at the Shoreham Hotel, the showing was the highlight of a luncheon for the benefit of the "Fonds de Solidarite Universitaire de France," an organization which aids young French students.

In the throng of more than 700 guests were men and women prominently associated with French welfare projects in this country; and representatives from diplomatic, official and social circles in Washington.

Handy Booklet Insures If Diplomat Dooms Us, He Will Do So Politely

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SINCE Marcus Cheke, H. M.'s vice marshal of the Diplomatic Corps, effected his literary debut in this column via excerpts from his privately printed tome on helpful social hints for the rising young diplomat, Washington's British Embassy has been subjected to considerable ribbing. Bright boys have called, asking H. M.'s diplomats to "turn the other Cheke" (actually, Mr. C. HAS a brother); the word "cheke" and "chic" have become almost indistinguishable, and an embassy official, hailing from Wales, has been facetiously nicknamed this department's "Welsh leak." (For those shaky on emblemology—a leek is the former national emblem of Wales. However, fairly recently the Welsh sissily swapped the odoriferous herb for a daffodil!)

Thursday night, at the most recent in a series of lectures on labor problems, given privately for qualified State Department personnel, speaker Jay Lovestone, David Dubinsky's assistant, talked on the importance of free trade unions as a bulwark against communism. The former general secretary of the Communist Party, now a violent anti-Communist, continued, he hoped the State Department would train diplomats to understand and know trade union practices, the meaning of the international labor movement rather than in how to act at a funeral.

BECAUSE of this humorous accumulation at British expense, it's only fair to note our State Department gets out its own little volume for presentation to novice diplomats embarking overseas. Our booklet is not half as fascinating, since it's fairly factual and hence minus the personal asides which lend the Cheke effort such tone. Our little gem presumes the embryo American diplomat possesses no more elaborate social experience than an Elks carnival in Ashtabula—table manners no further progressed than manipulation of single fork, knife, spoon, and a wardrobe equipped with a disassorted miscellany. No instructions are given about toying with the Smart Set, presumably our lads are too green to handle such complexities, they're just left to sink or swim in sophistication. And no wonder, after reading Mr. Cheke's gloomy appraisal; "Anent the Smart Set—a prospect expensive and exhausing. But even in this existing state of affairs, it may be that the Smart Set enjoys a mysterious prestige in the eyes of parvenu politicians of the official world, so that to entertain the Smart Set may give the embassy, in the eyes of the [local] Government, certain prestige."

Our young men, however, are minutely instructed in the mysteries of the calling card, invitation answering, but should they attempt hosting a dinner and become bogged down by precedence,

"JANOT" is the name of this two-piece spectator sports dress of imported linen from the Dior collection. The backward line, which he favors in almost every costume, is evident here in the sweep of the pockets which extend around the sides of the jacket, and in the sloping waistline, slightly higher in front

SHORT, slim skirt is favored by this designer for his "Mademoiselle" costume. Black and brown are combined in this youthful dress which was shown yesterday at the benefit luncheon and show at the Shoreham Hotel. Made of brown and white check wool, it has gabardine bolero jacket and cummerbund of black. Dress is side buttoned, starting from the neckline

Secretary of Defense Johnson Values Art—Mainly of Defense

By Marie McNair

LOUIS JOHNSON, newly named Secretary of Defense, is a big, stouthearted man. But his brown eyes are as appealing as a cocker spaniel's.

The man who would assume the responsibilities of our national defense organizations is something of an art collector. He's particularly fond of the work of Winslow Homer, and considers his one Homer original as fine as that which hangs in the National Gallery of Art.

The wife of the newest Cabinet member is soft spoken, with a trace of Southern accent, and has a mass of silver gray hair. She's very much an individual in her own right, is the mother of two

House of Mercy Phantom Dinner Subscriptions Still Solicited

THE ladies' board of the House of Mercy announced yesterday that subscriptions to its annual "Phantom Dinner" are still being received.

"There are plenty of places still reserved at our dinner table for those who have not yet replied to our invitation," Mrs. S. E. W. Kittelle, chairman of the phantom dinner committee, said.

The phantom dinner never takes place, Mrs. Kittelle said, because "the House of Mercy is not a member of the Community Chest, it depends largely on the proceeds from the annual dinner in order to carry on its vital service to the community."

Mrs. Kittelle added that the House of Mercy's 1948 report shows that during this year it has set an all-time record for service to unmarried mothers and their babies. "During the year," Mrs. Kittelle said, "the House of Mercy provided care to over 150 mothers and infants."

"The remarkable record of service was possible only because of the loyal support given to the phantom dinner in years past and can be continued only if the phantom dinner this year is generously subscribed to."

While the House of Mercy is sponsored by the Episcopal Church, it is nonsectarian with its service based on need rather than creed. This was emphasized by Mrs. Kittelle who pointed out that during the past year the unmarried mothers aided by the House of Mercy included Protestants, Jews and Catholics and covered in all more than 15 denominations.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, is the president of the board of trustees of the House of Mercy. Contributions to the phantom dinner may be mailed to Mrs. Kittelle, 2229 California st. nw.

Mizrachi to Hear National Leader

Mrs. Simcha Rabinowitz, national president of the Mizrachi Women's Organization of America, will be guest speaker at the annual donor luncheon of the local chapter on March 9 in Beth Sholom Auditorium, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw.

Mrs. Rabinowitz will outline plans for child-restoration and social welfare work in Israel before several hundred women leaders of the Orthodox Jewish community at the luncheon.

Mrs. Louis Novick is president of the local group and Mrs. A. C. Selis is chairman of the event.

Laszlo Debut Here to Boost Smith Drive

Ervin Laszlo, 17-year-old Hungarian pianist, will make his Washington debut in Constitution Hall March 24 under the auspices of the Smith College Club of Washington. The concert will be given to raise money for the scholarship fund.

When Laszlo made his American debut in New York last year, the New York Tribune critic called him, "the most remarkable young pianist encountered in 20 years of experience in reviewing in this city." Following a concert last month in New York, the World Telegram critic wrote "Young Laszlo again exhibited the brilliant blend of tone and technic that made him last season's main sensation of the younger keyboard set."

When he plays for the Smith College Club benefit, Laszlo will include a piano selection written by Ross Lee Finney, distinguished American composer, who is a professor of music at Smith College.

Mrs. Edmund F. Jewell is chairman of the 1949 benefit. Tickets for the concert are available at the Snow Concert Bureau, Campbell's Music Store. Boxes may be reserved through Mrs. Theodore Dominick, chairman of the box committee.

Dr. Ross, Director Of Mental Clinic, To Talk Wednesday

Dr. Mabel Ross, director, Mental Health Clinic of Prince Georges County, will be guest speaker when the Progress Club of College Park holds its monthly meeting, Wednesday, March 9, 2 p. m., in the Parish House on Dartmouth ave. The speaker will be introduced by Mrs. C. O. Appelman, chairman, Public Health and Welfare of Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs.

Preceding the program, Mrs. George S. Langford, president, will preside over the business meeting. Mrs. Lester Keefauver will discuss final plans for the Antique and Hobby Show to be held March 17-18 at the Coliseum.

Following the program, tea will be served. The hostesses are Mrs. William Werber, chairman, and Mrs. Alfred R. Lee, Mrs. Peter P. Lejuns, Mrs. F. P. Lepson, Mrs. Thomas E. Lepson, Mrs. E. H. Luehrman, Mrs. William H. Maerlender, Mrs. J. F. McClure, Mrs. L. C. McCubbin, Mrs. Edward S. McKeown, Miss Edna McNaughton, Mrs. William J. Millar, jr., Mrs. E. R. Nicholas, Mrs. Wilson W. Kappa Delta Alumnae to Hear Talk by Mrs. Dorothy Veon

Mrs. Dorothy H. Veon will give an illustrated talk on "Italy from the Alps to Rome" at a meeting of the Maryland group, Washington Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta on March 10. The meeting will be held in the chapter house in College Park at 8:30 p. m.

Dr. Veon, who is executive officer, department of secretarial studies at George Washington University, was the official United States representative at the meeting of the International Society for Business Education in Switzerland last summer. After the meeting she traveled in France, Italy, Denmark and Germany. Hostesses at the meeting will be Mrs. Robert De Binder, Mrs. Mark W. Wood and Mrs. Harry E. Hasslinger.

Winners Among Winners

LOYALTY to Mr. Truman and the State from which they hail is the motto of all good Democrats in Washington. This week feminine members of the party demonstrated anew their allegiance when they staged a giant benefit event at the Mayflower Hotel, topping it off with a State table contest

For days ahead of time, table chairmen worked in haste and secrecy. One State could not know what another was doing, lest someone "steal" an idea. Competition ran high and when the day arrived every State and territory in the Union—had a representative table of which it could be justly proud.

Judges faced with the difficult task of choosing three prize winners, selected Maryland, Louisiana and California. Only the Northern Democrats were unhappy.

Harris & Ewing

"MOST BEAUTIFUL" table decoration prize is won by California, land of sunshine, flowers—and gold. In honor of the 100th anniversary of the State, Californians arranged a huge birthday cake of white carnations, gardenias and orange blossoms. In the center a tiny lake of gold was symbolic of the Gold Rush of '49. Mrs. Charles C. Goodings is at left, and next in order are Mrs. Sheridan Downey, wife of the Senator; Mrs. Frank Rogers and Mrs. Clyde Doyle, wife of the Representative

SHOW BOAT time on the Mississippi, the magnolia season and the Mardi Gras are all represented in the decorations on the Louisiana table which was awarded the prize for the "Most Appropriate." Lazing on Caribbean Produces Little News, But Lots of Restful Color

By Elizabeth Maguire

IN CIRCLING the Caribbean during the past weeks we stumbled on more land than news. Rough weather was all that disturbed the quiet.

Poverty-stricken Haiti is artistic and beautiful. Pretty mountain ranges cover the island to the water's edge. In the small town of Cape Haitiian are rows of little houses in bon-bon colors of pink, orchid, pale blue and lime, usually with little arched doorways in chalk white.

A ride on horseback up to King Christophe's Citadel is the thrill of the island. A tattertorn orchestra complete with saxophone from Holland played lively rhumbas as we mounted our burros, and the rhythmic beat of its drums could be heard long before we reached the bottom of the descent.

Champagne in the Air

IN Puerto Rico there was champagne in the air. On fincas, in the interior, orchids grew on avocado and grapefruit trees. At the Naval Base we saw Mrs. William A. Moffett and her son and daughter-in-law, Comdr. and Mrs. Charles Moffett.

At Ciudad Trujillo there was the same magic air. The city was clean and prosperous looking. There was an excessive number of policemen around, and the name Trujillo was never mentioned.

We landed next at LaGuaira, Venezuela, and drove through the Maritime Andes to Caracas. Cars are driven with horns and a sense of humor—the loudest horn has the right of way. Which side of the road or mountain you are on has nothing to do with it.

Shopping in Curacao

AT THE orange-roofed town of Curacao we shopped in the perfume and jewelry stores and called on the Governor General, L. A. H. Peters, former Agricultural Counselor at the Netherlands Embassy here, and Mrs. Peters. The governor's spacious residence is charming. There is a square garden off the second floor drawing room, and a special suite of rooms, done in cream and blue, used by Princess Juliana on her visit to the island.

Our next stop was Colon, where we drove across the Isthmus to Panama City, stopping to look at the locks at San Miguel. At a cocktail party in Panama at the home of Miss Cecell Heurtmatte, we saw some familiar faces. Miss Hilda Vallarino was there, looking spry and pretty. And Gen. Armando Revoredo, former Air Attache at the Peruvian Embassy here. The general has been in exile since last October when President Bustamante was overthrown.

After a stop at Jamaica, we came to Havana, Cuba. "Here everybody runs into everything," explained my driver, after a few gasps from me. A horn and a sense of humor came into play again.

Visit With the Belts

WE SAW THE former Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt at their charming home in Sans Souci Park. Having just arrived from the States, the hostess hadn't had time to put out cigarettes and ash trays, but her house was filled with flowers welcoming her home.

A smart spot for luncheon was the Havana Yacht Club, where white marble floors met turquoise blue waters.

After visiting a few lively night clubs we boarded the ship. The home stretch was complete with storm and icy gales.

In Washington we have news that the new Ambassador of Peru, Fernando Berckemeyer, and Senora de Berckemeyer will arrive from London March 7 on the Queen Elizabeth. The Ambassador visited Washington in January to present his credentials to the President.

The Saudi-Arabian Ambassador, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih, presented his credentials to President Truman on Friday, and the former legation is now the Embassy of Saudi-Arabia.

Miss Gray is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College. Mr. Prouty attended the University of Maryland. The wedding is planned for May.

Louis—Gromann

Announcement has been made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Gertrude Louis of Des Moines, Iowa, and Ralph S. Gromann of Washington. The ceremony will take place March 19 at the home of Mr. Gromann's only daughter, Mrs. Ellis Muther, jr., of Chevy Chase.

Miss Louis is the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Leo Louis. She was born in France and educated abroad. A resident of Washington, she is secretary of the Iowa State Society. Mr. Gromann attended the University of Wisconsin.

Harris—Deffenbaugh

Dr. and Mrs. Lamar Harris of Leesburg, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Hays Harris of Washington, to John Lewis Deffenbaugh, jr., of Peoria, Ill. Mr. Deffenbaugh's parents live in Moline, Ill.

Miss Harris is a graduate of Arlington Hall and attended the University of Arizona. Mr. Deffenbaugh is a graduate of Kansas State College.

Dechter—Feldman

The engagement of Miss Miriam Dechter and Louis Feldman was announced last week by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dechter of Washington, at a buffet-reception at the House Lorraine.

Miss Dechter attended the Washington School for Secretaries and is associated with the national office of the League of Women Voters. Mr. Feldman, son of Mrs. Jennie Feldman of Washington, is now attending the Benjamin Franklin University.

Pahlow—Noble

Mr. and Mrs. Austin George Pahlow of Cheverly, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Madeline, to William O. Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Noble of Milanville, Pa.

Mr. Noble is a veteran of five years service with the United States Navy during World War II. He studied at Cornell University and Columbia University and is now attending George Washington University. The wedding will take place June 11.

Williams—Finlay

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Williams of Boyd, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carolyn Rebecca Williams, to John S. Finlay 3d, son of Capt. and Mrs. J. S. Finlay of Arlington, Va.

The bride-elect attended the University of Maryland. She is now employed in the Department of the Army. Her fiance attended George Washington University and is now a senior at the University of Maryland.

The wedding will take place in June.

Richards—Stanton

The engagement of Miss Janet Ruth Richards to Frank Phillip Stanton is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Richards of Washington. Mr. Stanton's parents are Mr. and Mrs. George T. Stanton.

The bride-elect attended Westhampton College at the University of Richmond and is now a senior at the University of Maryland, where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi. Mr. Stanton served in the Coast Guard and is now a student at the University of Maryland.

The wedding will take place in June.

Gardner—Blanchard

The engagement of Miss Rose Louise Gardner to Dr. Cyrus Lloyd Blanchard is announced by Miss Gardner's mother, Mrs. Walter Lee Gardner of Haymarket, Va. The late Mr. Gardner was also a resident of Haymarket.

Dr. Blanchard is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Henry Blanchard of Douglas, Mass.

No date has been announced for the wedding.

Shaheen—McPherson

Mrs. Selma D. Shaheen of Canton, Ohio, announces the engagement of her daughter, Bea, to James W. McPherson, jr., of Marlboro, Ohio, and Washington.

Miss Shaheen, a teacher in the District of Columbia schools, was graduated from Kent State University and attended the University of Southern California. She is a member of Beta Sigma Phi.

Mr. McPherson, the son of Mrs. Helen R. McPherson of Marlboro and the late Rev. J. W. McPherson, also attended Kent State University, where he was affiliated with Alpha Phi Beta.

A graduate of George Washington University Law School, he is now a member of the District of Columbia Bar. Mr. McPherson is a member of the Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity and served in the Marine Corps during the war.

Be Assured That If the End Comes Our Envoys Will Be Impeccably Dressed

they are told rather casually to consult Emily Price Post. Dipping into table etiquette, it's presumed the after-dinner coffee cup and small matching spoon will cause consternation. So the word "demi-tasse" is breathed respectfully, its usage explained to the table tyro meticulously as if it were an atom bomb. Such sartorial nifties as these crop up—never wear brown shoes with a blue suit . . . a soft black felt hat is acceptable at even the most trying social occasion . . . that even in the sub-subbest tropics, the white mess jacket is no longer high fashion.

IN THE light of what diplomats are told, it's interesting to thumb back through a War Department pamphlet telling soldiers billeted in wartime Britain how to make friends and influence people. We must, of course, overlook the probably painfully true crack about our heroes, current in England at that time "—(they're overpaid, oversexed and, worst of all, over here."

ON SOCIETY, the booklet says: "If you're trying to shine in polite society—it isn't a good idea to use the word 'bloody'—it's one of their worst swear words. To say, 'look like a bum' is offensive to their ears, for to the British this means you look like your own backside."

ON POLITENESS: "Don't make fun of British speech or accents. You sound just as funny to them but they will be too polite to show it. Then: 'Don't be misled by the British tendency to be soft-spoken and polite. If they need to be, they can be plenty tough. The English language didn't spread across the oceans and over the mountains and jungles and swamps of the world because these people were panty-waists'."

ABOUT SPORTS: British spectators are far more orderly and polite than we. "If a fielder misses a catch at cricket, the crowd will probably take a sympathetic attitude. They will shout, 'good try,' even if it looks to you like a bad fumble. In America the crowd would probably shout 'take him out.' This contrast should be remembered—and you should be careful in the excitement of an English game not to shout out remarks which everyone in America would understand, but which the British might think insulting."

ABOUT "STRANGE CUSTOMS OF TITLES"—Many of the titles held by the lords (such as barons, dukes and earls) have been passed from father to son for hundreds of years. Others are granted in reward for outstanding achievement, much as American universities and colleges give honorary degrees to famous men and women. These customs seem strange and old-fashioned but they give the British the same feeling of security and comfort that many of us get from the familiar ritual of a church service.

A neat summation of the Briton: "The Briton is just as outspoken and independent as we are. But don't get him wrong. He is also the most law-abiding citizen in the world, because the British system of justice is just about the best there is. There are fewer murders, robberies and burglaries in the whole of Great Britain in a year than in a single large American city."

IN THE reverse, a booklet distributed by the British Information Services for RAF pilots training over here, is equally sensible. Remembering George Bernard Shaw's quip: "Britain and America are two nations separated by the same language," the pilots are told "—make sure you know the meaning of any American slang you use, though it is a pity to interfere with the gaiety of your hosts.

Spring Shopping May Leave You at Sea

Remember to brush up on your nautical terms before you go out to buy your spring and summer clothes—jib jackets, spinnaker cuffs, sailor collars, grommet waistbands and porthole necklines (tied through metal eyelets) are going to blow the men down this summer. Tina Leser makes her sailing trousers and skirts of white sailcloth, and hems the skirts with grommets and tie patches for "reefing in." Also new are Elizabeth Phelps' sturdy sailcloth garden skirts in bright colors.

Fashion Show Slated Tuesday To Benefit Loudoun Polio Fund

Leesburg, Va., March 5.—Comes spring, comes fashion shows, and the next one to be staged in Loudoun County is scheduled for Tuesday at the Leesburg Inn for the benefit of the county polio fund. Mrs. Lois Bosley of Hamilton, former stylist for a Washington department store, will be coordinator of the show.

Clothes to be modeled will be from the Clothes Tree in Leesburg and Moselle, well known creator of hats, will display 30 or more of her lovely spring originals. Jewelry will be provided by C. R. Lytle, Leesburg, and William Herndon will lend antique furnishings for background purposes.

Mrs. Harrison Williams of Leesburg, is general chairman of the show. Miss Rose Trueheart of Purcellville, wrote the script and will do the commentary. Each guest will receive a perfume sample and in addition there will be door prizes. Tea will be served.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Richardson, who will leave March 13 to make their home in California, are being extensively entertained prior to their departure. Mrs. James T. Jackson and Mrs. Albert Carr entertained at a tea for Mrs. Richardson Saturday at the home of Mrs. Jackson. On Wednesday evening, Mrs. Catherine P. Bodmer, Miss Alice Kerr and Miss Grace Jenkins were hostesses at dinner at the Corner Hall for Mrs. Richardson.

The choir of the Leesburg Methodist Church will honor Mr. and Mrs. Richardson with a party Wednesday at the home of the pastor, the Rev. L. C. Shearer. Mr. Richardson is a member of the church choir. Mrs. Edmund Noyes and Mrs. Lewis Titus will entertain the Richardsons at a dinner party next Saturday at the home of Mrs. Noyes.

The Rev. J. Shenton Lodge, retired Methodist minister, came up from Newport News to spend the weekend with his wife, and the two left Tuesday to make their home in Newport News. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman C. Gore entertained at dinner on Saturday night for the Rev. and Mrs. Lodge, and on Sunday they were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Anderson and their daughter, Mrs. Moselle Martindale. On Saturday afternoon Mrs. James T. Jackson honored Mrs. Lodge at a bridge party. Mrs. Lodge was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Jenkins on Friday evening. Later Mrs. Jenkins and Mrs. Lodge attended the meeting of the board of directors of the Woman's Club of Loudoun at the home of Mrs. John William Clemens.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Expensively Reared Girl Whose Good Fortune Vanished When Father Died, Intends to Marry Rich Man for Security; Mother Dislikes Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago my husband died and to the surprise of my daughter Janice and myself, he left us very meager means of support. As the money was soon gone, I took a very respectable job in the fashion world.

My daughter had made her formal bow to New York society a year before my husband's death, and she had been accustomed to the best clothes and schools, so she found our financial come-down hard to endure.

She refused to seek employment, defied all my principles and kept going at the same pace she had kept while her father was alive. Her personality soon changed from a sweet girl to a grasping woman; and a month ago she told me of her intention to marry a certain very wealthy man, not for love but for security.

I frankly don't approve of the man, and I feel Janice would be making a grave mistake to marry him, money or no. Therefore my questions are: 1. Should I oppose the marriage? 2. If so, how can I persuade her to abandon the idea? P. F.

Girl's Seeking Her "Lost Eden"

DEAR P. F.: You say your husband died four years ago, and that Janice made her bow to society a year prior to his death, which indicates that she is now approximately 23—since, ordinarily, American "debs" are formally listed in the marriage market in their 18th year.

Now, it seems to me that Janice's age bears importantly on the matter at issue. If she is 23, she is adult in years if not in character. And if she has hardened into a pirate of sorts since her father died, resolutely intent on regaining financial ease by marrying the largest purse available, she isn't going to be swayed from her purpose by "idealist" exhortations, however ably they might be argued.

But let's not blame Janice entirely for her ungallant ideology and fast chase of a sugar-daddy husband to keep her in style. Unconsciously she is trying to rebuild the security-situation she enjoyed while her father was alive to give her a pampered existence.

Tinsel Values Pressed on Her

SHE WAS habituated to a way-of-life in which wealth, or the semblance of it, seemed indispensable to self-importance or social consequence. At least, that's how she reckoned it. And the friends she had formed, in her costly clothes and in associations provided by costly schools, probably would have been lost—or at least set apart in another world—if she had settled into a wage earning groove; and that prospect she couldn't "take."

In clinging to these friends and her former "pace," she was trying to salvage something from the happy past. She hadn't sufficient rapport with you to accept your example and suggestions as the correct solution of her panic. And whereas her parents probably worked up to big money, freely spent on her rearing, Janice at 19 was a hothouse bud—a fledgling sophisticate and parasite: typical product of money-culture that aims at glamorizing the female. Thus she lacked reality-sense with which to meet a change of fortune.

To Janice, plain self-support in obscurity is incompatible with dignity or self-esteem; and your story shows how character is shaped by pre-adult experience. Janice took tinsel values for granted as the desirable social standard; hence at a crossroad she still pursues them. But maybe gradually she will get her bearings and wing her way to "happy landings." In any event, better wish her well than fight her purpose. M. H.

Businessmen Honor Governor Lane, Legislators

Annapolis, Md., March 5.—Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., and members of the Maryland General Assembly were special guests of the Annapolis and Anne Arundel County Chamber of Commerce at a cocktail party and buffet supper on Wednesday at the Fleet Reserve Club in Annapolis. Invitations to attend also were extended to Mayor William U. McCready of Annapolis, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Superintendent of the Naval Academy, and members of the Glen Burnie Chamber of Commerce. Carl N. Fuller is president of the Annapolis Chamber of Commerce, whose members acted as hosts.

Admiral and Mrs. Holloway had as dinner guests on Friday evening, Vice Admiral and Mrs. William R. Fechteler and Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur W. Radford of Washington. Admiral Radford lectured to the midshipmen of the first class in Mahan Hall, the subject of his address being: "Our Modern Navy in Peace and War."

Admiral and Mrs. Holloway were "at home" Tuesday afternoon to midshipmen of the Fifth Battalion. This was the third in a series of receptions for midshipmen of the brigade.

And Wednesday Lieut. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, USAF, and Mrs. Edwards were luncheon guests of the Holloways, General Edwards having come to Annapolis to lecture to the midshipmen.

Midshipman First Class Harry E. Baumgarten, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Baumgarten of Owensboro, Ky., is midshipman battalion commander of the Fifth Battalion.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cox and their young son of Newport News, Va., are among the most recent arrivals in Annapolis, Mr. Cox having taken over on March 1 as director of sports news publicity for the Naval Academy. Mr. Cox was formerly director of public relations at William and Mary College.

Rehearsals for the Navy Relief Show, "George Washington Slept Here", to be presented some time in April, began the latter part of February, and will continue through March. The following dates for March rehearsals have been announced by the director, Mrs. Robert Scott: March 7, 8, 10, 14, 15, 17, 18, 21, 22, 24, 28, 29 and 31.

There will be a dress rehearsal April 4, to be repeated on the nights of April 5 and 6.

Members of the foreign language department group at the Academy and their wives gathered for an informal party Monday evening at the Pendennis Mount, home of one of their members, Prof. Alden R. Hefler and Mrs. Hefler. Dancing was a feature of the evening's entertainment, as was the singing of Robert Jachens, one of the guests.

The last of this season's dances of the Annapolis Cotillion Club is scheduled for the night of March 11. Mrs. Middleton Semmes Guest and Mrs. Don Pardee Moon chaperoned at the dance held by the Cotillion on Friday, February 25, at Carvel Hall.

Among the weekend activities enjoyed by Annapolis society was the formal dance Saturday night at the Annapolis Yacht Club. Gil Burns' orchestra furnished music for dancing from 10 to 1 o'clock.

Plans for a St. Patrick's dance to be held at Carvel Hall on March 19 have been announced by Upsilon Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. The dance will be held in the Severn room of Carvel Hall.

Linton Rigg has returned to Annapolis from a three months' cruise in the Bahamas on his boat the Chinquapin. H. K. Rigg, who participated in the Miami-Nassau races as a member of the crew of Carleton Mitchell's yawl, the Caribee, also has returned to Annapolis.

A June wedding is being planned by Miss Kathryn Lyons Middleton, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Roberts Middleton, of 153 Duke of Gloucester st., Annapolis, whose engagement to Midshipman Winfred Leon Buckingham was announced last December.

Miss Middleton is the daughter of the late Arthur R. Middleton of Philadelphia, and the granddaughter of Mrs. William F. Lyons of Annapolis. Midshipman Buckingham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Buckingham of Tayler, Tex.

Miss Jane Bishop Spratt, daughter of Mrs. James Bishop Spratt, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Eugene Ferdinand Page, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ferdinand Page, of Larchmont, N. Y., were married on Saturday morning (February 26) at St. Mary's Church, Annapolis. The bride is the sister of Mrs. John M. DeVane, jr., wife of Comdr. DeVane, USN, currently stationed at the Naval Academy.

The nuptial mass was celebrated at 11 o'clock by Chaplain Rotrige of the Naval Academy in the presence of the immediate families and out-of-town relatives.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was held in the drawing room of Alumni House for members of the wedding party and the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Page then left for a wedding trip to the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, Canada.

Neighborliness Is Not So Easy Here

By Norma Lanum

Army wives, famed in all corners of the world as a friendly clique, have had a hard time practicing their friendliness in the Nation's Capital.

Washington is too big and too hurried for the neighborliness that is customary at smaller Army posts. When a new family moves to a small Army post town, another Army wife is apt to be calling on the missus of the family within a day or two to give her tips on when the commissary gets its fresh meat shipments, on where is the best place to open a charge account, of where she can find a reliable baby sitter while she takes care of the countless moving-in chores.

But a new Army wife in this city has had to do without much of this special brand of get-acquaintedness because of Washington's size and diversity.

At least that's the way it was until just a few days ago when the Army Hostess Association opened for business. This is a group of Army wives who have at their fingertips names and telephone numbers of some 200 other Army wives who are willing to work as "assistant hostesses"—that is to call up the newcomers in their neighborhood and help them get adjusted to our town.

The hostesses have a desk in the Pentagon's Officers' Service Center. There they interview Army personnel reporting for duty in this military district but most of their work is with the telephone.

Each time a new Army family moves here the hostesses consult their list of assistants and call the one living nearest the new residents. She in turn telephones her new neighbor and offers her inside information about everything from where the nearest nursery school is to what days the trash man comes by.

The association is made up entirely of Army wives who started housekeeping in Washington without the advantages of small Army post friendliness and now they're anxious to do better by their Army sisters.

The association was Mrs. F. P. Campbell's idea. When she and Lieut. Col. Campbell came to Washington last May she was asked by the Army Information Digest to write an article on what this city offers its new Army residents.

After she'd gathered her data she realized just how much is lacking in the way of personal information for Washington's newcomers. Then she hit on the idea of a personal information bureau maintained by the Army wives, who of course know better than anyone else just what the new Army wife will need.

Mrs. Campbell got together with two other service wives, Mrs. Clifton von Kann and Mrs. Belk Oden and they began sampling opinions of their friends about the information project. Everyone was in favor of it.

Meanwhile, the Army itself, realizing that an assignment to the complex Washington Military District deserved a little extra preparation, issued "An Information Guide for Army Personnel Reporting into Washington and Vicinity."

This gives the Capital-bound soldier general facts about the cost of living here, housing facilities and transportation. So the Army wives keyed their information service to what the military families need after they get here.

Now Operation Neighborliness is in its final lap. All it needs to offer the Army full-scale information service is more volunteer assistant hostesses. Mrs. Campbell confesses she underestimated the job when she announced that 200 or 300 telephone contacts would cover the area adequately. Now the goal for full-scale operation is 500 volunteers. Incidentally, Mrs. Campbell can be reached at Republic 6700, extension 73180, or at Owens 7327, if you're interested in joining up. The Army wives who work at the desk in the Pentagon serve two days a month and all that the assistant hostesses are asked to do is use the telephone. The association stresses that there are no social obligations.

Mrs. Hobart Gay is honorary chairman of the association. And the board includes Mrs. Louis A. Craig, Mrs. James E. Moore, Mrs. Paul F. Yount, Mrs. William S. Lancey, together with Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Oden and Mrs. Von Kann.

★ THE NEW RUGS are certainly keeping up with the times, as a visit to Top Recker will show you. New weaves, new colors, new durability have been incorporated by many famous makers.

★ "GOODALL" (famous also for fabrics) has some new broadlooms, in twists, tight loops and loose loops—in a truly mouth-watering array of colors. And this includes several grays, in shades to give wonderful support to many different color schemes.

★ "SEAMLOC" broadloom is a development, especially attractive to nomadic homemakers. You can cut "Seamloc" and sew it back together and the seams will be practically invisible! Thus you can often change the shape of your "Seamloc" to fit new rooms.

★ "BOUCLE WEAVE" is a smart new idea—it's specially treated to resist dirt. With children dashing around, you won't have to inhibit them too much. In this cotton weave you will find a large assortment of striking colors.

★ OF INTEREST to the budget-minded is a group of "short ends" of 27" carpet, wiltons, velvets and Axminsters, specially priced, starting at $6. Most of these can be made into seamed rugs as large as 9 by 12 feet. We special-order these carpets.

Married in March

Hiram Black, Miss Macwatty Wed; Miss Campbell Bride

MISS JOYCE MACWATTY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamont Macwatty of Ridgewood, N. J., was married yesterday at West Side Presbyterian Church in Ridgewood to Hiram Day Black, son of Mrs. Lydia Black of Ridgewood and James C. Black of Washington.

For the ceremony the bride wore an ivory satin gown with fitted bodice which had a floral pattern of seed pearls at the neckline. Her veil was attached to a fitted cloche cap and she carried an arm bouquet of calla lilies. Her atendants included her sister, Miss Suzanne Macwatty, as maid of honor. The bridegroom's brother, James C. Black, jr., was best man.

Following a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga., the couple will live in Washington, where the bridegroom is associated with the law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb. A graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy, Yale University and George Washington University Law School, the bridegroom is a member of Zeta Psi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities.

Mrs. Black was graduated from Skidmore College.

Jones—Lindsay

A wedding of interest to Washingtonians took place yesterday in Bowie, Md., when Miss Martha Helen Lindsay, daughter of Michael Washington Lindsay of Maryland and Washington, was married to Philip V. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund V. Jones, at the Church of the Ascension.

For the ceremony, at which the Rev. Maurice King officiated, the bride wore egg-shell satin. With her gown she wore an amethyst cross worn by her great-grandmother and her grandmother at their weddings.

The bride's sister, Mrs. William T. Fenhagen, and the bridegroom's brother, Edmund V. Jones, jr., were in the bridal party.

A wedding breakfast was held following the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Bonini.

Mrs. Robert J. LeBleu before her marriage Friday evening at the Sixth Presbyterian Church was Miss Jean Frances Ingraham. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Ingraham of this city and her husband is the son of Mrs. Alice LeBleu of Lowell, Mass. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin and carried white roses. A reception followed at the home of her parents. Following their honeymoon in Williamsburg, Va., the newlyweds will reside in Washington

McCune—Campbell

A marriage of interest to Washingtonians took place yesterday in New York when Miss Barbara Jane Campbell, sister of Mrs. George B. Green of Washington, became the bride of Samuel Knox McCune at Riverdale Presbyterian Church.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Naomi Chace Campbell of Evanston, Ill., wore a white satin gown with fitted bodice and full skirt ending in a train. Her bouquet was of white orchids, lilacs and lilies of the valley.

Attending the bride were Mrs. Green and Mrs. James Douglas, another sister of the bride, at whose home a small reception was held following the ceremony. Thompson Brown McCune was best man for his brother.

A member of Gamma Phi Beta, the bride studied at Northwestern University. She has been with the National Broadcasting Co. in New York for two years. Mr. McCune, a graduate of Cornell University and Columbia Law School was an editor of the Columbia Law Review. A member of Theta Delta Chi, the bridegroom served as an officer with the Field Artillery in Europe during the war. He is now associated with the law firm of Kirkpatrick, Pomeroy, Lockhart & Johnson in Pittsburgh, where the couple will live.

Mr. and Mrs. McCune are now on a wedding trip which will take them to London, where they will be guests of Ambassador and Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, and then to France, Italy and Switzerland.

Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae To Observe 'Family Night'

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta will observe "Family Night" at a dinner meeting, at 6:30 on Tuesday in the Fairfax Hotel, to which all Gamma Phi relatives, husbands and children of school age are invited. The guest speaker will be Walter C. Densmore, acting superintendent of Mount Vernon, who will talk on the "Early History and Development of Mount Vernon." He will illustrate his speech with colored slides.

Following the program, the officers for the new season will be elected, and the retiring officers will present their annual reports.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Bob O. Mathews, Otis 8290; Mrs. S. B. Payne, Wisconsin 6445, and Mrs. Garth Edwards, Owens 4439.

Coast Guard Aid Unit to Hear Speaker

Washington Unit of Coast Guard Welfare will hear a talk on "Women of India" at the luncheon meeting Tuesday, 12:45 p. m. at the Army-Navy Country Club. Mme. Sophy Rozario, whose husband is Education Attache at the Indian Embassy, will be the speaker.

The program also will include a report on the Coast Guard benefit to be held on March 27 at Constitution Hall by Commander James C. Wendland. The commander is executive secretary of the Coast Guard Academy Memorial Chapel fund, which will receive proceeds from the show.

Charles Warrens Give Farewell Fete for Browns

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES WARREN entertained at a farewell dinner last evening in honor of the retiring Assistant Secretary of Navy for Air, John Nicholas Brown, and Mrs. Brown. Ranking guests were the Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Kleffens.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Door-Jamb Statistics

There's many a door-jamb in American homes that means a lot to the whole family. For it's quite a common custom to keep a record of the children's growth thereon by marking their various heights every few months. Usually we are satisfied with an ordinary pencil mark, but there are interesting variations that can be used.

If the family has a bathroom scale, neatly pencilled weight figures alongside the height mark add interest. Youngsters are as interested in their pounds as they are in their inches. If you really want to be fancy, a small snapshot of the child along with the weight and the height figure can be put on a little card and fixed with scotch tape at the appropriate height on the door-jamb.

Whatever scheme you use—and there are many more possibilities—you can be sure the children will get "a kick" out of these home-made statistics. And if we'll only admit it, we parents, too, get much enjoyment out of keeping track of our youngsters' growth.

Understanding Love Is the Remedy

A Jealous Child Needs Affection

By Margaret Jane Suydam

An Interview With Dr. John Montgomery

JEALOUSY in a child is really a fear of being unloved, combined with anger at the possibility. It is a strong and disturbing emotion. The child can't analyze it and doesn't understand it. He merely feels unhappy and upset. The child under 5, whose whole world is tied up in his family, is likely to suffer more than the school-age child who has interests and loves beyond the family circle.

The child suffering from jealousy is in need of help. If he is wisely guided, he may be helped to overcome this emotion and be more tolerant, self-confident and independent in the end. If he does not have the right kind of help, his personality may be damaged.

How Child May Show Jealousy

SOME OF THE ways a child may show jealousy. 1. Hit, pinch or slap the baby; 2. poke the baby's eyes; 3. try to roll him out of the crib; 4. say "Let's kill the baby," or "Throw him in the fireplace so he'll burn up," or "Give him back to the doctor now," or "Let the garbage man take him away."

Some of the roundabout ways a child may show jealousy. 1. Act like a baby so he will be treated like one. Suck his thumb; wet himself or his bed; want to be fed or have his milk from a bottle like the baby; follow his mother around and cling to her skirts; whine or cry a great deal.

2. Act out his fear and anger in another direction. Quarrel with his playmates—hit, bite or scratch them; be mean to his pet dog or cat; break up his toys; deliberately spill the box of cereal on the kitchen floor; get lower grades in school.

3. Talk about the baby a great deal. He doesn't say unkind things about the baby. He merely shows that baby is always in his thoughts. He isn't aware that this is owing to his fear that he will be replaced by baby in his parents' affections.

Try to help the older child accept the baby. Because jealousy is the cause of much human misery, we should try to avoid situations that provoke it, where possible. Help the child overcome it when it occurs.

Situations to Avoid

WHEN MOTHER comes home from the hospital: The first child has missed his mother. He has waited a long time for her to get home. He shouldn't have to share her immediately with the newcomer. Try to have him away from home when mother and the baby return from the hospital. Let them get settled so that mother can give him her full attention when he first sees her. Let him talk about the things he has on his mind. Don't mention the baby. Let him ask first about it.

When you take care of the baby, be as casual as possible about taking care of him in sight of the older child. The new baby should have his needs satisfied but he does not have to have a great fuss made over him in front of your first born. Seeing the baby nurse at the mother's breast is often especially disturbing to the first child. Try to have him happily occupied elsewhere while you feed the baby. But don't let him feel that you are shoving him outside. You can feed and cuddle your baby and at the same time visit pleasantly with the eldest if he's around.

When relatives come to see the new baby, parents must be on guard to counteract their tactlessness. They may make a great fuss over the new baby and ignore the first child completely. If they bring gifts for the baby, try to have on hand some special treat for the older child. If they praise the baby too much in his hearing, call their attention to some of your bigger boy's virtues. But don't elaborate too much or make comparisons between the two children.

When father comes home from work he should make it a point to greet the older child first and ask him about his day. Don't immediately inquire about the baby as though he were the first thought in your mind. The older child's need for a welcome from father is much greater than the baby's.

When a jealous child gives direct expression to his jealousy by saying he doesn't like the baby, don't try to convince him that he does like him. If he harms the baby, you may be angry with him for hurting him. Of course, you can't let him hurt the baby. But before you shame or blame, ask yourself why he did it.

He has said to you in actions rather than words, "I am afraid you don't love me as much as you love the baby." You would not scold him for that. You would merely tell him you to love him. That is the thing to do now. He needs comfort and reassurance. You can let him know you realize he wishes he didn't have a little brother. Tell him he need not feel so because mother and father have enough love for both.

When the child acts like a baby by wetting the bed or sucking his thumb, ignore the behavior. Make no fuss about it. Recognize it as a signal of distress and unhappiness, as a need for more love and attention. If he wants to be fed, or even to drink out of a bottle, let him. As soon as your efforts to reassure him begin to take effect, he won't need this attention.

When the new baby gets older and begins to help himself to the older child's toys, don't insist that your older one share. Try to let him have a place of his own in which he can put his things, out of the baby's reach. Forcing him to share will not teach him to be generous. It will, instead, make him rebellious and more selfish.

When your first born tries to accept the baby, let him do things for the baby. If he wants a doll to take care of, provide this and as many miniature replicas of the baby's wardrobe and paraphernalia as you can. Going through the motions of taking care of a baby helps him to accept it.

U. N. Lebanon Conference Conducted by Women

By Vivian Lowe

AT THE end of this month in the middle eastern state of Lebanon, a land of conflicting religious loyalties where Moslem Arab and Christian Arab live side by side, an international conference is taking place. But unlike most meetings of its kind, no member of the masculine gender will be a delegate. Present on March 21 in Beirut, Lebanon, at the third session of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women will be modern, and perhaps more subtle, counterparts of Susan B. Anthony and her coterie of determined suffragettes.

It is interesting that this meeting should take place in Lebanon, because women do not have the vote there. The event is, therefore, of significance to the whole Middle East, where Moslem traditions have cloistered women for centuries.

The 15 members of the commission on the status of women, who are elected for three-year terms by the United Nations Economic and Social Council, this year will represent Australia, China, India, Costa Rica, Haiti, Mexico, Venezuela, Denmark, France and Syria, Turkey, Russia, Greece, Great Britain and the United States. Every year, five of the nations are rotated off the commission to make room for representatives of still other United Nations countries.

The American delegate is "Judge" Dorothy Kenyon of New York City, who was formerly on the municipal court bench there and is now a lawyer in private practice. She is vice president of the American Association of University Women, a national officer of Phi Beta Kappa and vice president of the International Alliance of Women, of which the League of Women Voters is the United States affiliate. A graduate of Smith College and New York University Law School, she was a member of the committee of experts appointed by the League of Nations after World War I to work out the legal status of women at that time.

A variety of feminine types constitute the 15-member commission. They range from a grandmother to the proverbial "career woman." Besides Judge Kenyon, another lawyer on the commission is the Chinese representative, Mme. Cecilia Sieu-Ling Zung, who was a prominent barrister in Shanghai and is now representing Chinese clients in New York. Mary Sutherland, the British delegate and an active trade unionist for years, has the distinction of being the chief woman officer of the British Labor Party.

Actively Resisted Nazis

Chic Mme. Marie Helene Lefaucheux of France is chairman of the commission on the status of women and during the war was an active resistance fighter against the Nazis. Her husband, a prominent businessman arrested by the German Gestapo, was sent by train to a concentration camp in his occupied country. His intrepid wife followed the train all across France on a bicycle and found out exactly where he was imprisoned! She has been vice president of the Municipal Council of Paris and has also served as a member of the French delegation to the United Nations General Assembly.

An interesting sidelight on the background of the Danish delegate to the commission, Mme. Bodil Begtrup, is the role her new husband will play in her diplomatic career. Until recently she was chief film censor of Denmark, and as such married the Danish Ambassador to Sweden. Subsequently she was appointed Minister to Iceland and her husband, long in diplomatic service, resigned his post to accompany her to Iceland. The delegate from India this year is Mme. Lashli Menon, formerly an Indian representative at the U. N. General Assembly. Her predecessor on this commission, Mrs. Hamid Ali, a follower and close friend of Mohandas K. Ghandi, was organizer of the All-India Women's Congress.

Three Years of Progress

Since the Commission on the Status of Women was organized three years ago, seven nations have given the franchise to its women citizens. They are the Asiatic countries of China, Japan and Korea; the South American nations, Argentina, Chile and Venezuela, and in Europe, Belgium. Bills are currently pending in Columbia, Costa Rica and Peru.

The Commission on the Status of Women concedes that the most important phase of its work is to get the vote for women in all parts of the world. However, the coming conference will not limit its efforts to that alone. A four-pronged attack is planned against: limited educational opportunities for women; economic discrimination that gives women in England, for instance, 75 per cent to 80 per cent of a man's salary for the same job; lack of property rights for married women in many sections of the globe, and conflicting citizenships for women of one country who marry men of another.

U. S. Citizenship 'Earned'

The United States is one of the few nations that does not automatically give women its citizenship after marriage to its nationals. Treated as a human being and an individual, a woman must become a citizen in her own right.

Limited professional opportunities for women still exist to some degree in countries even where women have the vote. In England, women are denied admittance to the stock exchange and cannot acquire the necessary experience in the fields of engineering, banking and management. In Holland, women cannot be judges in a court of law and in Quebec, Canada, no woman is permitted to be a notary public. And Turkey and Pakistan will not employ women on the police force.

But the crusading and indomitable spirit of women the world over is embodied in the preamble of the United Nations Charter:

"We the peoples of the United Nations determined to reaffirm faith in the fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small."

A Few Things About Glycerin

A few drops of glycerin added to the dried glue will make it useable again.

Milk will not boil over if you rub a little glycerin around the rim of the saucepan.

Ask Anne

Is there any way in which a bright gold-washed pin can be treated to give the effect of an antique finish? F. B.

A satisfactory antique finish may be achieved on the pin by applying an oil-color such as Vandyke brown, burnt or raw umber which has been thinned with turpentine. Apply the color and turpentine with a soft cloth, allow to stand 5 to 10 minutes, then wipe the paint from the high spots, leaving the low or carved areas dark. Let dry thoroughly before using.

What is the difference between Alaskan seal (fur) and Labrador seal? Is Labrador seal real seal or a polite term for coney or some such? If both are seal, why does Labrador cost less? Is it a good buy? L. T. S.

Alaskan seal and South African seal are the only real sealskins sold to any extent in this country, according to the United States Department of the Interior. Furs labeled Labrador seal, Baltic seal, Sealine and similar names are usually made of rabbit. Hudson seal, however, is dyed, sheared muskrat. Good quality seal-dyed rabbit coats give fair service. Poor ones, however, rate low in lasting quality.

½ cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Rub cheese through coarse sieve. Blend in flour, soft butter, and salt. Add egg yolks one at a time. Beat until well blended. Add half the sugar, the heavy cream, and the lemon juice. Beat egg whites until stiff, then beat in remaining sugar. Fold into cheese mixture.

Turn into a crumb-lined (see directions below) spring form (5-inch wide, 2 inches deep) or pan of comparable size. Bake in slow oven (275 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1½ hours or until firm. This will shrink and fall in the center on cooling. Serve when perfectly cold.

Make crumb lining for cake as follows:

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup zweiback crumbs
2 tablespoons sugar

Cream butter, then rub in zweiback crumbs. (Zweiback can be easily crumbled by putting on bread board and rolling with rolling pin.) Mix in sugar. Grease baking form or pan with butter, then sprinkle liberally with crumbs. Pat remaining crumb mixture against the well-greased pan sides.

Is there an agent for polishing marble at home? Or is it necessary to take a marble table top to a stonecutter to polish it? In any case, how can one keep it polished? Mine gets hard use as a coffee table. V. O. B.

Yes, marble can be polished at home, though it may be quite a bit of work if you want a high polish. A semipolished finish can be achieved by rubbing the surface with water and a fine hone, such as a block of pumice stone. A high polish is obtained by long rubbing with water and putty powder (oxide of tin) applied with a damp felt pad. A piece of old hat can be used. If you can't find the putty powder at a large paint store, try a monument yard. Waxing the marble top with furniture wax will help to protect it.

Adas Israel Sisterhood to Mark 50th Anniversary at Luncheon

Adas Israel Sisterhood will observe its golden anniversary with a donor luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Monday at the Mayflower Hotel. Rabbi Israel M. Goldman, spiritual leader of the Chizuk Amuno Congregation of Baltimore, will be principal speaker. His topic will be "Seeing the Invisible."

The speaker is a past president of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, and director of the National Academy of Jewish Studies. Rabbi Solomon Metz will introduce Rabbi Golden.

Other features of the program will include songs by Cantor Jacob Barkin, opening prayer by Mrs. Fred Nessen, and an original monologue by Mrs. David Kushner.

Proceeds from the donor luncheon, which is the only fund-raising project of the sisterhood, will go to the organization's educational, philanthropic and social programs. Among the sisterhood's current project is the endowing of a library in the proposed new Adas Israel Synagogue building at Connecticut ave. and Porter st.

Mrs. Philip Goldstein is general luncheon chairman. Co-chairmen of the various committees include Mrs. I. E. Levinson and Mrs. Jacob Barkin, hostesses; Mrs. Isaac Kossow and Mrs. Benjamin Moss, year book; Mrs. Hyman Berman and Mrs. Joseph Zupnick, Mrs. Samuel Zola, Mrs. Charles Barnett, Mrs. Goldie Katz, Mrs. Fred Nessen, Mrs. Eugene Rosenblatt, Mrs. Sylvan Blechman and Mrs. Stanley, money-making projects, and Mrs. Abe Shefferman, program chairman.

Jane Powell Takes a Firm Stand

By Ida Jean Kain

Jane Powell, M-G-M's 19-year-old singing sensation, passes along posture and streamlining tips that will give any gal a lift . . . in today's column by Ida Jean Kain

Gather 'round, teen-agers, and I'll tell you about my "date" with Jane Powell, M-G-M singing star, who is just as natural and fun-loving as Judy. Sometimes an interview with a movie star is a bit guarded, with the actress being careful to put her best foot forward. But Janie is refreshingly frank and a typical teen-age American girl.

She is only 5 feet 1¾ inches tall, stretched, and "with a couple of added pounds can look pudgy"; loves strawberry sodas but has an apple instead and eats toast only on Sundays; does not brush her hair; has never been one to buckle down to hard work . . . and has had her engagement ring "a week Wednesday." She displayed it proudly, explaining that it was "awfully dirty." (She probably hadn't polished it for all of 10 minutes.)

Jane was not a child star. She grew up in Portland, Oreg., and did not take singing lessons until she was 11. While that was fairly young, still she had quite a few years to be just a happy, healthy girl . . . and she still is. She loves to be in the movies, but likes fun more than work and is really not overly ambitious about her career . . . which is one of her charms.

When I told her that her posture gave me a lift, she beamed and assured me that she had worked at it. Here are her posture "lifters" . . .

Take a deep breath and lift the rib cage high. Then pull your stomach right up underneath the ribs. Let your breath out and breathe naturally, but keep the midriff pulled up snugly. If you lean against your stomach, she warns, it pushes it out. Right . . . so lean against your backbone.

Like many schoolgirls, Janie had to correct the habit of standing on one foot . . . and used to catch herself carrying her books all in one arm and resting them on one hip, which "makes a girl lopsided."

Jane has big blue eyes, and her hair is naturally blonde . . . and straight, she sighs, "not even a wave." She takes care of it herself. How does she keep that nice complexion? She washes it.

She loves outdoor sports—swimming, skiing and skating—and she has a honey of a figure: waist 23 inches, bust 33½ and hips 34. Does she take calisthenics? Just one! Here it is—"at first it will kill you." Work up to 12 times a day . . . "every single day."

Lie on back on floor and bring both legs straight up in the air. Then separating legs, make circles—bringing the legs out to the sides, down, around and back up again, without letting them touch the floor. All of the time keep the small of the back close against the floor and the stomach muscles pulled up strongly. Warning: that exercise is really rugged but it is not streamlining unless there is a firm grip on the middle muscles.

This singing star does not diet—but she doesn't take seconds or eat candy or rich desserts. She has more bounce than any actress I've ever met, and it's sheer health . . . she's as healthy as all outdoors. She sleeps 10 to 12 hours a night!

See . . . it takes a health program to have a glamorous career!

Your Child and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One of the most distressing ailments of infancy is infantile eczema.

It is an ugly-looking disease which covers baby with brown or weeping crusts and makes him unhappy and sleepless because of the horrid itchiness.

Eczema is most often caused by some food the child is taking to which he is highly allergic. If the baby is breast-fed it may be that he has become sensitized to foods which the mother ate to excess during pregnancy.

Or, it may be that he is allergic to wools, or powders or soaps or clothing or wearing apparel, his own or his mother's.

If it is a food allergy then it is easy enough, if the baby is on artificial food, to run down the villain. Presumably, the young baby will be having nothing but milk, a vitamin D product of some kind and orange juice. If the rash has appeared after the inclusion of either of the latter then it is wise to change the forms in which vitamin D and C are provided. They are essential to the growing baby, but there are various ways in which the body can get them.

If it is milk, then what type? Fresh milk may have to be changed to one of the processed milks, as boiling, evaporating or drying the milk makes a beneficial change in the protein which causes the difficulty.

When these forms still do not bring about a cure, then goat's milk may be tried. Sometimes allergic babies can take the protein of goat's milk more easily than that of cow's milk.

There is still a last resort and that is one of the soybean products, which provide a vegetable instead of an animal protein to provide the cell foods for baby's growing body.

Eczema is not an easy disease to cure. It demands patience and expert aid in making these various changes in the baby's diet. If there are any miraculous cures it is because the experimenter has been lucky in hitting upon the food which is causing the unsightly, miserable rash.

Salves and lotions are valuable in easing the itch and healing the existing rash. They cannot prevent the recurrence of the rash so long as the cause of it is undiscovered.

The fact that eczematous rashes tend to come and go, no matter what is done, fills the parent with a false sense of security. She should know that this is just a characteristic of the ailment.

"Advertised two bicycles in The Post---got nearly a dozen calls!"

... says Mr. Goding

Washington Post -
Classified:

I recently advertised two bicycles for sale in the classified ads of The Washington Post, and received nearly a dozen calls for bicycles of different sizes for boys and girls of different ages. Needless to say I sold both of mine for the price asked, and am very pleased with the results of my Washington Post Classified ad.

Enclosed please find my check to cover cost of ad.

Gratefully yours,

Marshall B. Goding

Nearly a dozen calls for two bicycles! One of the Post readers who called Mr. Goding too late would probably buy the "bike" your boy or girl has outgrown, once you placed a "For Sale" want ad. Start that notice now. Telephone NA. 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

The Washington Post

New Defense Secretary Values Art

daughters—Lillian and Katherine—who are of an age to enjoy the official whirl which will be theirs.

SITTING in a front row at New York's Cort Theater Wednesday night, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas was probably as nervous as on any first night when she used to wait for her first cue. But one thing is certain, she didn't feel the slightest twinge of nostalgia for the glare of the footlights on the other side.

The California's Congresswoman's personal interest in the play is the leading man. It happens to be her husband, Melvyn, who plays the newspaperman in "Two Blind Mice" a comedy of bureuacratic Washington.

Mrs. Donglas has been along with "Two Blind Mice" from rehearsal stages to the Philadelphia and New Haven try-out performances. Going up with her from Washington for the first night were Representative and Mrs. Chet Holifield of California; her personal secretary, Miss Evelyn Chavoor; Walter Pick, from here secretarial staff, and Charles Alldredge, a former newspaperman himself.

Helen Douglas, who teamed with her husband in "Tonight or Never" several years ago, chucked the theater for a career as a singer and made a European concert tour. She was to sing "Tosca" at the Vienna Opera when she became absorbed with the prospective terrors of fascism, canceled her bookings and took the next ship home.

Says her husband of his brilliant wife: "When she first went into Congress, it was regarded as something of a stunt. But she has forced people to accept her on her own terms and has won the regard of both parties."

ANYTIME Alben W. Barkley gets tired of being Vice President he can always become a song and dance man.

The other night at Mrs. George Mesta's dinner in his honor, the Vice President got up, did a few snappy steps solo, to the accompaniment of Erwin Devron's accordion and a guitar. "He reaches way down to lower C too," said Devron, as he swung into "My Old Kentucky Home," and everybody sang.

After a superb dinner starting with turtle soup, winding up with rum ice cream smothered in whipped cream, the more than 20 guests toasted and were toasted in champagne.

"To the loveliest, most charming woman ever to invade and conquer Washington" said the Vice President, raising his glass to his hostess.

Perle Mesta never looked better than she did that night, in a tobacco brown net gown by Dior. It's the same model that Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, wears in gray.

TOWN TOPICS:

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson is an avid radio fan—he likes quiz programs.

Les Biffle's glowing sun tan comes from a stay in Miami Beach—at $40 a day. For room only, that is.

The Palm Beach trek from Washington includes the Jack Meikles, who left on Friday for 10 days; Polly Norment, who should be back almost any time now, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, who've been there for a fortnight and are expected back on Tuesday.

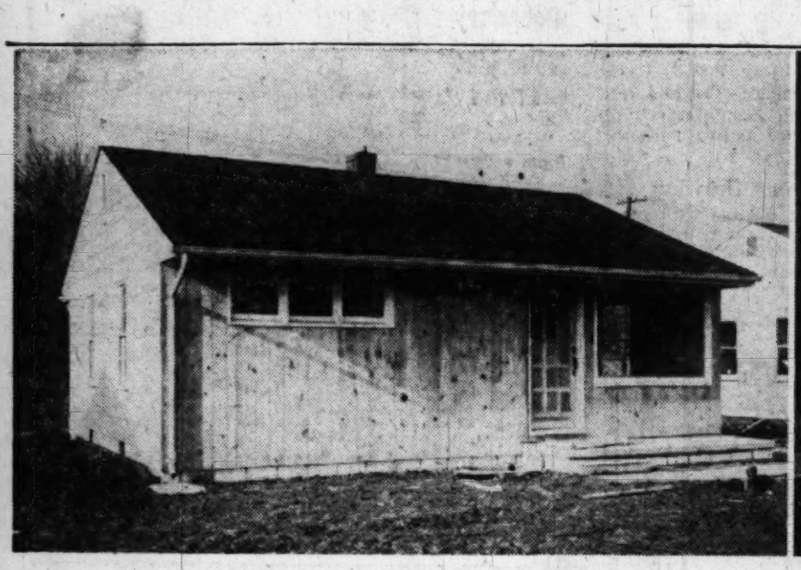
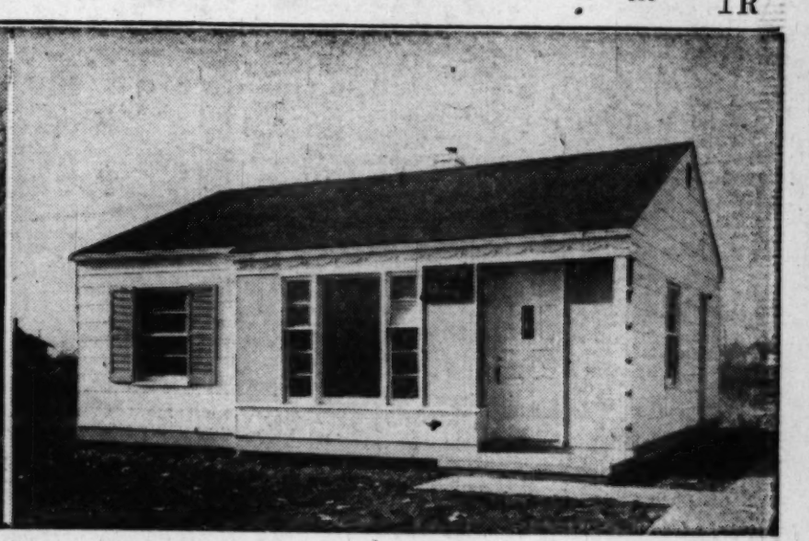
WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MARCH 6, 1949





These three homes, each with large lot, equipped kitchen, no basements, of frame construction, sold in Detroit for under $8000

Detroit Home Builders Prove Well Designed Homes Can Be Erected For $4,900 to $8,500

By Ernest A. Baumgarth

Special to The Washington Post

DETROIT, MICH., March 5.—Builders here have shown the public they can build, under present conditions, homes for the low and medium income groups that are low priced, well designed, of finest construction, on large lots—at prices from $4900 to $8500.

Fifty individual builders, members of the Builders Association of Metropolitan Detroit, have started over 125 homes, and completed 75, in one model subdivision here. The aim is to prove that builders can furnish a home in any price bracket, providing the purchasers can obtain proper credit terms which the builders cannot produce himself.

Over 75,000 persons have visited the model homes, all of which are for sale. Visitors are being told about obstacles facing builders in his efforts to provide such housing.

The model homes, located in the Royal Oak section, meet all code and zoning requirements of the area. Many of the dwellings boast a unique heating system termed a "semi-radiant heat installation." The principle, according to Arvid C. Petersen, Detroit builder supervising the model display, is "reverse circulation." Warm air is injected under the floors, and the cold air return is taken off the ceiling so that tempered air is taken back to the furnace. The furnace, itself, an oil burner, is the size of an ordinary water heater. The floor and the bath tub are always kept warm.

Petersen said there is a variation of only three degrees from floor to ceiling—"almost unheard of in heating systems."

One street of homes in the project uses this new type of heating. Others have conventional systems. Some homes have both basements and attics.

Some of the lower-cost homes, such as semi-finished houses selling for $4900 with lot, need wall finishes and a heating plant. The low price allows the owner to move in and complete the home. All homes are completely wired, with all necessary plumbing fixtures, including a complete bath.

The project has been visited by Government officials and representatives of national trade associations. They have termed it the farthest advanced of any low-cost housing demonstration in the country.

Primary object of the demonstration is to point out the need for stable financing for low-cost homes. George A. Duke, association president, said such financing is the responsibility of lending and mortgage-insuring agencies. "Buyers of low cost homes require easier financing terms."

"We are pressing Congress to authorize more liberal mortgage finance through the Federal Housing Administration and other mortgage insuring governmental agencies," Duke declared. "Many visitors to the project have said they intend to write their Congressmen to support needed legislation to this end."

In general, it takes $1000 to $1500 down to buy one of the houses in the Royal Oak project. Duke said the terms on which the project homes are being offered were the best obtainable under present mortgage financing conditions.

"We are striving to put such houses into the hands of veterans with 5 per cent down payments, and monthly payments including interest, taxes and insurance for as little as $25 to $35 a month," Duke reported.

"Instead of merely talking about the need for better financing, we have shown it in the most practical way we know by building the houses and pointing out that builders are willing to provide them in large numbers on terms within the reach of any average wage earner."

Banks Need Funds

Arvid C. Petersen, Detroit builder in charge of the Royal Oak project, told The Washington Post last night that "sales are good, but we could sell 10 times as many if adequate mortgage financing was available so buyers could put down only 5 per cent of the sales price."

He advocated legislation by Congress creating a strong secondary mortgage market where banks could sell home mortgages in return for funds to invest in more housing. Bankers' portfolios are full, he added, and they have no more funds to invest.

Local Economy Homes

The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington reported last night that the Association's pilot model of two "economy" homes would be opened for public inspection the latter part of this month. The dwellings are frame bungalows, located in District Heights, Md.

James Pearson, Association executive-secretary, said the sales price of both homes would be set after an analysis of all costs. Anticipating a slight decrease in future costs, Pearson said the price tags would reflect current costs, expected to be lower than what the homes actually cost to build.

Gunnison Firm Plans New Line of 'Pre-Fab' Homes

A new line of Gunnison prefabricated homes, designed to meet the demand for lower cost "economy" houses, will be introduced locally next month, reports Sam Walker, of Walker Homes, Gunnison dealer in Montgomery County, Md.

Walker said his firm will erect five of the new "Master" series of Gunnison homes in Chestnut Hills, off Georgia ave. ext., between Wheaton and Silver Spring. A project of 30 homes is included in long range plans.

The new homes will sell for $8950 to $9500, with lot, depending on size of the home. They differ from the deluxe Gunnison home in being of basementless construction, no fire place, a smaller water heater and less kitchen equipment. Heating is by floor furnace.

Virginia Builders Studying 'Detroit' Housing Display

Builders in nearby Virginia are studying a proposal to erect one or more "economy houses" in a joint promotion designed to show that a $7500 dwelling can be produced if builders, suppliers and architects pool their resources and concentrate on a single project.

A meeting last Wednesday of the Northern Virginia Builders Association heard James Millar report on low-cost housing ideas unveiled at the recent Chicago convention of the National Association of Home Builders.

Suggestions were made that a study of the Detroit plan be started. Fifty-five builders have erected over 100 homes in a single subdivision in Detroit, selling from $5000 to $9000.

Other subjects discussed included the proposed Fairfax County building code. Association President Arthur Pomponio named a five-man committee to study the code and meet with the Fairfax Board of Supervisors before March 16 to request a delay of its adoption. Members are John Cambell, Charles Callander, Kenneth Hammacher, Carl Hengen and Richard Grefe.

Senator Willis Robertson (D., Va.) has been asked to address the April meeting of the association, Pomponio reported.

519-Unit Apartment Set for Arlington

Construction will start next month on the first buildings in a proposed 519-unit apartment project at Leesburg pike, adjacent to Fairlington, according to Gerald Freed of Claremont Construction Co., builders.

The project will be composed of garden-type apartment buildings, of two and three-story walkups, on acreage between Fairlington and the residential community of Claremont, the latter also erected by Freed's firm. The same firm developed Buckingham, one of Arlington largest prewar apartment communities.

Freed estimated the project would be completed within eight months after construction begins. Radiant heating systems will be used.

D. C. Firms to Bid On Fort Belvoir Houses

Several local contractors have announced plans to bid on a contract for erection of 20 row brick homes on Belvoir ave., Fort Belvoir, Va. Bids will be opened March 24 by the Corps of Engineers.

Homes will be Colonial style, two bedrooms, with 10 homes to each row building. If the contract price is reasonable, a Corps of Engineer official stated, four additional homes will be erected. Berla & Abel are the architects.

Zoning Laws, Building Codes, Financing Said to Slow Up Low-Cost Home Building

BUILDERS attempting to erect low-cost homes face at least four tough obstacles, reports Arvid C. Petersen, Detroit, nationally known home builder.

Writing in the current issue of Practical Builder, authoritative trade journal, Petersen says builders who want to go into the low-priced field face these handicaps:

1. Many community zoning laws rule out small homes with a modest, but adequate floor area, in favor of larger residences.

2. Most residential building codes are written and enforced along specification lines. They specify what materials may be used. Codes are not based on the "performance" of materials. As a result, says Petersen, most homes are erected along construction lines which go far beyond normal requirements necessary to insure safety and durability. This means added cost without added value or utility.

3. Stable financing for low-cost housing is difficult to obtain from lending institutions, even though such loans are usually liquidated in a shorter period than other types of investment loans.

4. Federal insurance of mortgage loans constitutes another barrier, he added. FHA land requirements and insistence on aesthetic construction trimmings are effective barriers to volume building of houses at the lowest possible consumer cost.

As to what can be done about these construction hurdles, Petersen says the following must be made available: practical zoning laws, building codes based on established engineering and scientific data, financing on a realistic basis and Federal mortgage insurance to give practical assistance to lower bracket wage earners.

If these are made available, Petersen declared, builders can make a contribution toward better and lower-cost housing by devising new methods and procedures to cut costs or to improve new ones. Builders must present a united front against any attempts to add to building costs without adding value, he maintained.

Petersen said there is no question about saleability of efficient, low-cost homes. "Low wage earners will buy that which is within their budget," he declared. The author pointed out that small homes along "kitchenette-apartment" lines were a big success in the 1920s. Called "Garlows" (garage-bungalow), thousands were built in the prewar years. These were later developed by their owners into modern homes which would now range in price from $10,000 up, he said.

Construction Awards $118,564,000

New York, March 5 (AP).—Civil engineering construction awards totaled $118,564,000 in the five-day week ended yesterday, Engineering News-Record reported today. The volume was 57 per cent above the previous four-day week, but 36 per cent below volume of the like week last year.

Awards for the first nine weeks of 1949 totaled $1,247,474,000, 26 per cent above the same period in 1948, the publication said.

Private construction awards during the week totaled $67,732,000, an increase of 146 above the previous week, but 6 per cent below last year.

Public construction totaled $50,832,000, 6 per cent above last week and 55 per cent below last year. Of this total, $33,150,000 was in State and municipal construction awards and $17,682,000 was in Federal contracts.

New Paint Blending To Be Demonstrated

Architects and home builders will see a preview of the new Martin-Senour NU-HUE Color System at a luncheon Thursday at the Statler sponsored by Dyer Bros., Inc., paint and color firm.

Frederick C. Rahr of New York's Rahr Color Clinic will explain the scientific method by which paints are blended to produce any given color or tint. A practical demonstration will be given later on the premises of Dyer Bros.' newly installed color bar, 734 13th st. nw.

New Water Proofing Keeps Basements Dry

Hot pitch is applied to foundation walls to insure water proofing of basement

Let the heavens pour, says David Solomon, there'll be no wet basements in 23 new homes he is building in the Washington Estates section of District Heights, Md.

Solomon has adapted a waterproofing method to his homes which he saw used in waterproofing the roof of the Dupont Circle underpass. He said he was tired of reading about home buyer's complaining to Government agencies because their new homes had leaky basements.

His system is simple, he says, and the cost is only slightly more than conventional waterproofing methods. "And its 50 times more watertight," he adds as a clincher.

The method consists of cleaning and patching the foundation wall to insure smoothness and tightness, then applying three layers of hot pitch in which are embedded two layers of 15-pound roofing felt —giving the equivalent of a five-course roof, according to Solomon.

The pitch is applied from the foundation footing up to the grade line, which has already been previously determined and marked.

Solomon, a general contractor with offices in the Washington Gas Light Co. Building, said the local FHA office had put their stamp of approval on the method.

Florida Real Estate Showing Sales Resistance, Report Shows

A tremendous increase in the number of visitors to Florida in the past four weeks has filled the hotels and upped retail sales, but has not stimulated realty transactions, according to B. Randolph Shaffer, jr., Florida representative of Previews, Inc., a national realty firm.

Shaffer said brokers are optimistic that many visitors will invest in real estate before they leave Florida, however.

Florida real estate activity has been slow this year compared to 1946, he reported. Compared to any except the boom years, there is a normal market.

Owners who expect to get high prices that prevailed in 1946 are finding it difficult to interest buyers, Shaffer continued. Those who have recognized the gradual downward movement of the market over the past two years and put realistic prices on their properties were said to be finding plenty of buyer interest.

Shaffer reported that prewar houses in the low and medium brackets have not dropped significantly in price—and that there nas not yet been any large volume of sales.

"Sales of residences in the upper brackets have been slow," he added, "with a few exceptions in such exclusive resort areas as Palm Beach, Hobe Sound and certain sections of Miami Beach."

Much interest was reported shown by out-of-State investors in Florida income properties. Such buyers insist that prices be sound from the standpoint of net earnings, Shaffer said. In his opinion, many motels, hotels and apartment buildings built in the last three year at excessive cost will have to be sold at a loss if out-of-State capital is to be interested.

Living Forest Astride Rare Petrified One

Sweet Home, Oreg. (U.P.).—This little sawmill town is sitting in one of the largest living forests and on top of one of the oldest and largest petrified forests.

Some scientists believe Sweet Home's fossil forest comprises the "missing link" between the very ancient petrified forests and the better-known miocene forests of Oregon and Washington.

Real Estate Briefs From Here and There

ARCHITECTS, realtors and property groups lost no time this week in raising eyebrows over an editorial error in last Sunday's real estate section. Under the heading, "Architects Ask Congress to Reduce Rents" was a story telling of the AIA's efforts to have Congress authorize a gradual increase in rentals and complete abolition of rent control by 1953. Thus, the heading was very misleading. The Washington Post regrets the error.

To those members of Realty Row who called the error to our attention, thanks. The kidding was severe, but readers are assured the error was not committed to determine how many architects or property owners read the realty section. The incident was similar to that of etiquette expert Emily Post and the term "realtor." The National Association of Real Estate Boards has spent thousands of dollars in publicizing the copyrighted word, "realtor" to mean an efficient, honest property promoter and a member of NAREB. One of Miss Post's readers asked "What is the proper term to designate a person dealing in real estate: real estate salesman or realtor?"

"Never say realtor—use real estate salesman," replied Miss Post in her syndicated column, to the chagrin of thousands of realtors.

Local builders, bankers and Government officials will meet Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Washington Gas Light Co. Auditorium to discuss problems in construction of low-cost "economy homes" in this area. A previous meeting three weeks ago outlined the goal: Better housing at lower prices for low income groups.

The program has been divided into three panels, with discussions by experts. A panel on "Land Planning" includes Max S. Wehrly of the Urban Land Institute, who will discuss economies in land planning. Builders' problems in new suburban developments will be covered by Harry Boswell, jr., of Prince Georges County, Md.; Don Gingery of Montgomery County, Md., and Arthur Pomponio of Arlington, Va.

Alvin J. Aubinoe, second vice president of the Home Builders Association will speak on building codes in the metropolitan area. Extension of water mains, etc., will be discussed by Dwight Galt of the Maryland Sanitary Commission.

A panel on "economies in construction" consists of Edward T. Dunlap, architect, and Edward L. Simpson, of the local FHA insuring office.

J. Marshall Mayes, of the Commerce Department, will speak on "Outlook for 1949 in Building Materials."

William S. Banks, president Home Builders Association, is chairman of the economy house committee sponsoring the meeting.

"There has been a 5 per cent decrease in building costs in the last few months and many materials are now in full supply," reports The Review, publication of the Society of Residential Appraisers. R. S. Fuller, Los Angeles banker and appraiser, author of the article, said the buyer is becoming more cautious and selective and inclined to consult his contractor and financial adviser before paying a "premium."

Laws affecting rental properties in the District were discussed by James Crane, of J. A. McKeever Co., at the last meeting of the local Institute of Real Estate Management chapter. The talk covered license fees for new apartments, egress laws and the proposed minimum wage law as it applies to apartment house employes. Guests present were Robert Bean, Walter Gray, John Zirwes, Robert Eikenberry, Charles Bailey, Robert Humphries, Glenn Stalker, James Jacobs, A. J. Paglino, Lloyd R. Turner, Leroy Betor, R. L. Transue and R. J. VanVranken.

Members of the Associated General Contractors, meeting last week in New York, were told their business "is very largely depression-proof." Guy C. Kiddoo, Chicago banker, said the tide of rising labor and material costs finally has turned in the industry's favor. The highways, housing, public works, and institutional building which the Nation will need in future years should keep all contractors reasonably busy, he declared.

A meeting March 9-10 of the Construction Industry Advisory Council, sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce, is expected to attract 300 persons to the Chamber Auditorium, 1615 H st. nw.

Construction of new homes in this area in January increased 16 per cent, or 130 units, over December, 1948, as builders started 930 new units, reports the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The spurt came from erection of apartments.

Title Firm Declares 5 Pct. Dividend

Realty Title Insurance Company has declared a 5 per cent dividend payable to stock of record on February 28, 1949. Stockholders at the annual meeting last week named the following officers: Moses J. Wright, re-elected as president; John J. Kelliher, vice president Jerome Malin, vice president; Howard Bernstein, secretary-treasurer.

Another Hiccough Cure

Fort Worth, Tex., (U.P.).—The best way to cure hiccoughs, says Adolph Newmam, is to bend forward with your head between your knees and drink water from the farthermost side of a glass. Newman said he used that method to cure himself after having the hiccoughs for nearly three years.

Old, But Hardy

Boston (U.P.).—City Hospital admitted the oldest patient in its history when 101-year-old Mrs. Mary Gilky was brought in after collapsing at her home. Incidentally, she recovered.

Thieves Rub It In

Chicago, (U.P.).—Burglars not only stole $1500 worth of loot from the home of Earl Smith here but hauled it away in Smith's luggage.

Ice on Parking Lot Starts Car Spree

St. Louis (U.P.).—Driverless autos played tag all over the river front parking lot when a sudden drop in temperature created a half-inch ice cover.

The skidding autos didn't stop until they hit other parked cars. Some were dented on three sides when other vehicles converged on.

Informed of the situation, the department of streets sent a truckload of ashes to the scene. The truck slid into the lot broadside and crashed into four autos.

Living Forest Astride Rare Petrified One

Sweet Home, Oreg. (U.P.)—This little sawmill town is sitting in one of the largest living forests and on top of one of the oldest and largest petrified forests.

Some scientists believe Sweet Home's fossil forest comprises the "missing link" between the very ancient petrified forests and the better-known miocene forests of Oregon and Washington.

Real Estate Briefs From Here and There

ARCHITECTS, realtors and property groups lost no time this week in raising eyebrows over an editorial error in last Sunday's real estate section. Under the heading, "Architects Ask Congress to Reduce Rents" was a story telling of the AIA's efforts to have Congress authorize a gradual increase in rentals and complete abolition of rent control by 1953. Thus, the heading was very misleading. The Washington Post regrets the error.

To those members of Realty Row who called the error to our attention, thanks. The kidding was severe, but readers are assured the error was not committed to determine how many architects or property owners read the realty section. The incident was similar to that of etiquette expert Emily Post and the term "realtor." The National Association of Real Estate Boards has spent thousands of dollars in publicizing the copyrighted word, "realtor" to mean an efficient, honest property promoter and a member of NAREB. One of Miss Post's readers asked "What is the proper term to designate a person dealing in real estate: real estate salesman or realtor?"

"Never say realtor—use real estate salesman," replied Miss Post in her syndicated column, to the chagrin of thousands of realtors.

Local builders, bankers and Government officials will meet Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Washington Gas Light Co. Auditorium to discuss problems in construction of low-cost "economy homes" in this area. A previous meeting three weeks ago outlined the goal: Better housing at lower prices for low income groups.

The program has been divided into three panels, with discussions by experts. A panel on "Land Planning" includes Max S. Wehrly of the Urban Land Institute, who will discuss economies in land planning. Builders' problems in new suburban developments will be covered by Harry Boswell, jr., of Prince Georges County, Md.; Don Gingery of Montgomery County, Md., and Arthur Pomponio of Arlington, Va.

Alvin J. Aubinoe, second vice president of the Home Builders Association will speak on building codes in the metropolitan area. Extension of water mains, etc., will be discussed by Dwight Galt of the Maryland Sanitary Commission.

A panel on "economies in construction" consists of Edward T. Dunlap, architect, and Edward L. Simpson, of the local FHA insuring office.

J. Marshall Mayes, of the Commerce Department, will speak on "Outlook for 1949 in Building Materials."

William S. Banks, president Home Builders Association, is chairman of the economy house committee sponsoring the meeting.

"There has been a 5 per cent decrease in building costs in the last few months and many materials are now in full supply," reports The Review, publication of the Society of Residential Appraisers. R. S. Fuller, Los Angeles banker and appraiser, author of the article, said the buyer is becoming more cautious and selective and inclined to consult his contractor and financial adviser before paying a "premium."

Laws affecting rental properties in the District were discussed by James Crane, of J. A. McKeever Co., at the last meeting of the local Institute of Real Estate Management chapter. The talk covered license fees for new apartments, egress laws and the proposed minimum wage law as it applies to apartment house employes. Guests present were Robert Bean, Walter Gray, John Zirwes, Robert Eikenberry, Charles Bailey, Robert Humphries, Glenn Stalker, James Jacobs, A. J. Paglino, Lloyd R. Turner, Leroy Betor, R. L. Transue and R. J. VanVranken.

Members of the Associated General Contractors, meeting last week in New York, were told their business "is very largely depression-proof." Guy C. Kiddoo, Chicago banker, said the tide of rising labor and material costs finally has turned in the industry's favor. The highways, housing, public works, and institutional building which the Nation will need in future years should keep all contractors reasonably busy, he declared.

A meeting March 9-10 of the Construction Industry Advisory Council, sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce, is expected to attract 300 persons to the Chamber Auditorium, 1615 H st. nw.

Construction of new homes in this area in January increased 16 per cent, or 130 units, over December, 1948, as builders started 930 new units, reports the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The spurt came from erection of apartments.

Title Firm Declares 5 Pct. Dividend

Realty Title Insurance Company has declared a 5 per cent dividend payable to stock of record on February 28, 1949. Stockholders at the annual meeting last week named the following officers: Moses J. Wright, re-elected as president; John J. Kelliher, vice president Jerome Malin, vice president; Howard Bernstein, secretary-treasurer.

Another Hiccough Cure

Fort Worth, Tex., (U.P.)—The best way to cure hiccoughs, says Adolph Newman, is to bend forward with your head between your knees and drink water from the farthermost side of a glass. Newman said he used that method to cure himself after having the hiccoughs for nearly three years.

Old, But Hardy

Boston (U.P.)—City Hospital admitted the oldest patient in its history when 101-year-old Mrs. Mary Gilky was brought in after collapsing at her home. Incidentally, she recovered.

Thieves Rub It In

Chicago, (U.P.)—Burglars not only stole $1500 worth of loot from the home of Earl Smith here but hauled it away in Smith's luggage.

Ice on Parking Lot Starts Car Spree

St. Louis (U.P.)—Driverless autos played tag all over the river front parking lot when a sudden drop in temperature created a half-inch ice cover.

The skidding autos didn't stop until they hit other parked cars. Some were dented on three sides when other vehicles converged on.

Informed of the situation, the department of streets sent a truckload of ashes to the scene. The truck slid into the lot broadside and crashed into four autos.

'Craziest House in America' Had Fireplaces Under Beds

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, March 5 (U.P.).—Hollywood has the superlative of everything, from the most swimming pools to the lousiest drivers, and it also boasts "the craziest house in America."

This fabulous castle was tossed together by a screen writer out of old movie sets and was the hangout for high-living greats of the silent era.

Its arabesque minarets since have been licked by fire, its builder is dead and mice rattle in the blackened rooms. But tourists still climb the steep slope of a secluded hill to gape at its wonders.

The builder was Jack MacDermott, who wrote Harold Lloyd and Colleen Moore movies by day and out-wackied other Hollywood characters by night.

MacDermott purchased 12 lots of land in 1921 and set up a big piano box as a house.

Ten years later, he still was adding rooms. One is an Oriental temple that saw better days in a movie studio, another a Hansel and Gretel witch's hut. The dining room is the captain's cabin of a Spanish galleon where Doug Fairbanks leaped around in "The Black Pirate." Minarets that formerly towered in "The Thief of Bagdad" sprout all over the place.

These treasures MacDermott borrowed easily. He ran across a gilt dome in some movie about Kubla Khan, for instance, and ordered obliging set workers to cart it to his car. The sets were hauled up the hill by burro; there wasn't a road then.

He also made patios, fountains and entire rooms of hand-painted French and Italian tile without suffering financially. McDermott simply wrote European tile dealers that he was one himself, and please send him free samples. He got $7000 worth that way.

Jack had quite a sense of humor. Underneath "the house that Jack built" is a labyrinth of dark subterranean passages with narrow staircases spiraling up to surprising places, such as a guest bedroom that also has a fireplace built under the bed.

The house has four antique cannon out in front, an ear-splitting siren in a bathroom and a huge canopied swimming pool. By the pool is a weird monument of tile, topped by a battery of searchlights and a throne for MacDermott. Often he furnished female guests with swim suits that dissolved when they hit the water.

MacDermott had no neighbors, which was understandable. At parties, attended by celebrities like John Barrymore and Gene Fowler, he'd beat on an American drum while cuties in harem outfits drifted from an underground passage entrance next to the living room fireplace.

Three years ago, the writer got tired of living, curled up on his huge Oriental bed and gulped 28 sleeping pills. Last year a crank set fire to the $150,000 home, and what was left was bought for $7000 by a young electronic genius, Mac Brainard. He plans to build a home for his family by the pool and remodel the shamble of movie sets into apartments for artists.

"It was built like a movie set, never built to last, and when Jack died the house died with him," he says.

It Was a Tough Winter

Salt Lake City, (U.P.).—A Salt Lake City man is forming an organization here to be known as "The Sons of Utah Pioneers—1949 model." "The 1849ers may have had it rough," admits Steve Maloney, organizer, "but anybody who gets through this winter of 1949—"

Six Scale Model Dwellings On View at Maryland Store

One of six model homes on view at the Hecht Co., Silver Spring

What does the average American family want in the way of housing? The Hecht Co. thinks it has the answer, the results of a nation-wide survey by a national magazine.

Six colorful scale model homes, furnished and landscaped, will be exhibited for one week, beginning Monday, at Hecht's Silver Spring store. The models consist of exterior and interior replicas, with all furniture reproduced to a half-inch scale by Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

The homes were designed by six architects, and were planned to suit average incomes. Small enough to be economical, they contain many of the latest architectural innovations, ranging in style from Cape Cod to modern.

Blitzed Churches Await Repair

LONDON, March 5 (AP).—London's old churches are still waiting to be saved.

The churches—many of them masterpieces of Architect Sir Christopher Wren—were gutted during the blitz.

Now they must wait for rehousing of the homeless. Because of the shortage of building materials and labor it will take 25 years at the present rate of reconstruction to restore the centuries-old edifices.

However, a start has been made. One of the first, and earliest, is All Hollows-By-The-Tower, which dates back to about 675. It was here that Samuel Pepys climbed the steeple to watch the great fire of London in 1666. Nothing but a shell and the steeple remained after bombs hit in 1941.

Twenty architects are now inspecting other blitzed churches, reporting on necessary repairs and drawing plans to carry them out. Permission for materials and labor must be obtained from the ministry of works.

Repairs sufficient to permit resumption of services have been carried out in some churches. One is St. Michael, where a temporary roof has been built over the shell.

Of 78 severely damaged churches, only 10 have been repaired sufficiently to permit services.

Alaskan Homesteads Find Many Takers

Anchorage, Alaska (U.P.).—Lowell Puckett, regional administrator for the bureau of land management, said numerous business sites are available along the portion of the Alcan hwy. lying within Alaska.

Puckett warned that those who intend to homestead in the Territory should act now, because undesirable farm land near settled communities is going fast.

During the past months, district land offices in Alaska have been busy recording applications for homestead acreage. Puckett said practically all good farming land along public roads has been homesteaded but there still is unclaimed farm land in interior areas that is available by airplane or river boat.

If Garden Site Is Wet, Put Away That Hoe!

By James H. Beattie

BEFORE long, many garden crops, including potatoes, peas, spinach, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower and other hardy plants, may be seeded or set in the garden, if spring weather returns. In any case, all hardy crops should be planted as soon as conditions permit. The soil must be prepared in advance.

Preparation methods are influenced by the nature and past history of the land. The plowing or spading of deep, fertile, garden soils in many old established gardens is usually a simple matter. The creation of these conditions requires a long time, involving the gradual increase of the depth of the preparation, the incorporation of organic matter, ground limestone and commercial fertilizer, drainage if neded, terracing when required and other operations.

Many are faced with the problem of using garden sites, either old or new, that are not too well adapted to the purpose. Soil preparation is more of a problem, but it may be simplified and yet result in the growing of an excellent garden.

Deep Soils Required

DON'T turn up too much raw subsoil. The general plowing or spading of shallow garden soils may be only to a depth that will leave the subsoil largely undisturbed. Large quantities of subsoil mixed with the fertile topsoil is usually objectionable.

This general preparation may be deep enough for spinach, lettuce and other small growing plants. There should be a gradual deepening of the plowing or spading each year, accompanied during the season by cover cropping and other soil improvement practices, thereby developing the deep fertile soil that is the characteristic of most good gardens.

Many garden plants, including tomatoes, potatoes, eggplant, peppers and tomatoes and the perennial crops such as asparagus, require deep soils. This need may be satisfied by the deepening of the row-site or the location of the individual plants. Trenching with the removal of the subsoil and refilling with a mixture of topsoil, compost, fertilizer and ground limestone provides a permanent row site requiring very little annual preparation.

Excellent results are often obtained by giving the garden a shallow general preparation followed at planting time by digging bushel-sized holes for individual tomato and other large growing plants. These holes are refilled with the same type of material as used in trenching and these too, may be used for more than one season, but non-related plants should follow on the same site.

Keep Tools Sharpened

THE practice of short-cuts materially lessen the labor involved in preparing the garden. Spreading the work over a longer period also helps. The average gardener cannot always depend on custom plowing, but hand work spread over a longer period will accomplish wouders.

This is particularly true about light-textured soils with loose subsoils where a shallow surface working with a spading fork or a potato fork may be all that is necessary for most of the garden plants. Bright, sharp, high quality garden tools are a necessity in performing the work with a minimum of effort.

More and more gardeners are turning to garden tractors, and a standard machine of two to three horsepower will do an excellent job of garden soil preparation and cultivation. A considerable investment is required to provide the tractor and the necessary attachments and such must be spread over several seasons to make it really pay.

The writer has an old tractor that has been in use 20 years or more, an excellent investment. Friends tell me that they have been able to return the investment in five seasons. Most persons agree that a tractor large enough to prepare land, cultivate, draw a lawn mower and supply light power is an excellent investment for those having large yards and gardens.

Don't prepare land that is too wet. Early March, 1949, presents a curious situation in that we have had less freezing weather than usual and spring is nearly here. This means that it is unsafe to work the garden site while it is wet and have any assurance that alternate freezing and thawing will overcome any bad effects that might result.

The only safe plan would seem to call for waiting until the land is dry enough as shown by the old-time test of squeezing a handfull into a ball. If it crumbles when released it is safe to work, but if it remains in a ball it is too wet.

A suggestion for the week of March 6: Those expecting to plant fruit trees, grape vines, blackberries, asparagus or other perennials this spring should place their orders for the material at once. It is also an excellent plan to dig the trenches or the holes for the plants and partly refill them with topsoil, compost and a little fertilizer.

Tar Paper Will Drain Water From House

Wet basements are often caused by surface water seeping down beside the foundation after rain or snow storms. This rarely occurs if the yard-grade slopes away from the house. Since new grading is costly, inexpensive and effective drainage can be obtained by burying sheets of tarred roofing paper in the ground beside the foundation.

Starting at the basement wall about 3 inches below the surface, the earth is scraped back for a distance of 3 feet from the wall, slanting downward and outward to a depth of 18 inches. The tarred paper, with joints overlapped, is placed on this slope and the earth tamped back in place over it.

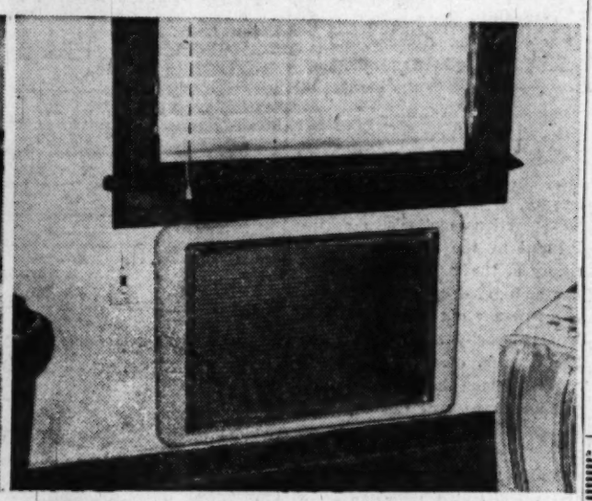
Unique Radiant Glass Panel Heating System Brings New Warmth to Home

BEFORE: The five-room brick bungalow of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stewart, 49 Oswego ave., Takoma Park, Md., was formerly heated by this oil-fired space heater in the living room. Other portions of the house were often cold



AFTER: The space heater was replaced by five radiant glass heating panels, with two in the living room, one in each bedroom and the kitchen. A switch beside each panel allows home owner to cut off panels when not in use, similar to electric lamp

By Conrad P. Harness

EVER dream of a home that had no furnace, soot, hot-water pipes, ducts, etc., and yet was as cozy as Florida in spring? Several metropolitan Washington homes have achieved that heating Utopia. Thousands more are expected to boast revolutionary new heating systems in the next two years.

Instigator of this heat wave of heating interest is a unique radiant glass panel heating system, produced by the Continental Radiant Glass Heating Corp. of New York. A story last summer in The Washington Post gave a preview of the product.

Since then Hudson Supply & Equipment Co. has been appointed distributors for this area. Robert H. Miller of Hudson reported that over 500 of the panels already have been sold in this area, with orders for scores more.

The first Washington home to be completely equipped with the new glass panels was that of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stewart, 49 Oswego ave., Takoma Park, Md. Don Lamborne, Maryland heating contractor, replaced the Stewart's living room space heater with five glass panels, two in the living room, one in each bedroom and kitchen. Total cost, said Lamborne, was $450. Installation required only two days with a two-man crew.

MILLER also reported these developments:

Approval by the Federal Housing Administration for insured loans for home improvements under Title I of the National Housing Act.

Approval by FHA for insured loans on new homes using the system, providing the installations meet FHA's heating requirements and, provided the local power company can supply adequate electricity.

Basis of the new system is a 16 by 24 inch opaque glass panel nearly two inches thick, framed in steel and screwed to the wall. The front panel is of hard, tempered glass into which an aluminum alloy grid is fused.

The electrical current heats the glass which radiates warming infra-red rays outward, heating the individual directly. There is no uncomfortable dehydration of air, fumes, dust, smoke or danger of explosion. Underwriters Laboratory has approved the unit.

Individual units cost about $48 each. Installed, the price runs around $100. Miller said over 500 panels have been sold by his firm. A wealthy manufacturer is using 40 panels and 15 thermostats in remodeling his 4-story Virginia home, Miller added.

A large, proposed project of 9-story apartments in Alexandria is considering use of the panels, with an estimated 4500 individual panels required. Virginia Electric Power Co. has been asked to determine if its plant can handle such an added load in one area.

Before you grab a phone and call a heating contractor, mull over these comments by FHA officials, architects and a representative from a local utility. Each agrees that the system has wonderful possiblities, but.

Don Lamborne, Maryland contractor who installed panels in the Stewart home, points out the versatility of the "hot glass." The 300-degree Fahrenheit temperature toasted the bread in ten minutes. Lamborne doesn't recommend the practice, however

Each questioned whether the monthly heating bill would be competitive with gas and oil. All pointed out that the product is still classed as experimental locally. A power company expert added: "If you're interested in experimenting, then we will give every aid we can."

If you decide to have the new 'hot glass" heat installed, be sure you call your power company and discuss the problem with them first. Since the system requires a larger load, the company must make provisions to carry the added power.

The national FHA office said several homes with radiant panels have been built in the Tennessee Valley Authority area, where power is cheap. Mortgage loans have been insured by FHA field offices.

War Product

THE history behind the panels is a story in itself, with a war setting. They were invented in France by the St. Gobain Glass Co. and solved the heating problem produced by the underground caverns of the Maginot Line. They provided a heater that would be safe in an area subject to explosive shellfire, while at the same time not dehydrating the air.

Cost of the glass heat is dependent on local utility rates. Continental Corp. says the system is competitive with gas and oil where rates are 2c a kilowatt hour or under. Residential rate in Virginia varys from 1.6c to 1.9c. In the District of Columbia the rate is 4c for the first 40 kilowatt hours, 1.9c for the next 160, 1.6c for all excess.

All heating experts point out that the better insulated a house is, the lower the heating bill. It is especially true where radiant glass is used. Heating bills can be cut somewhat by "zone" control features of the system.

Each individual panel has a cut-off switch nearby. A central thermostat keeps the temperature to a specified degree in all panels which are still operating. A flick of the wrist, however, can cut off the heat in any one or more rooms, wtihout disturbing the rest of the house.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MARCH 6, 1949

Things Are Looking Good This Week

SCREEN AND STAGE: Linda Darnell, Ann Sothern and Jeanne Crain, above, are reading a letter to the three of them, telling that the writer has run off with one of their husbands. It's the first scene of the Palace's incoming comedy, appropriately titled, "A Letter to Three Wives." Jack Carson, right, will be along Friday on the Warner stage, heading his radio gang for a week of "live" appearances

"FORCE OF EVIL" titles John Garfield's adventures as a lawyer for a numbers racket king, opening Thursday at the Capitol. Based on a novel by Ira Wolfert, the picture introduces Beatrice Pearson

Hark, Is't Vaudeville Which Yonder Stirs?

By Richard L. Coe

DON'T TAKE IT TO HEART, but Jack Carson's vaudeville week at the Warner starting Friday is part of what might be a trend.

The Warner takes the trouble to state emphatically that this return to vaudeville is for "one week only." It makes no promises of future bookings.

The fact remains, there's some breath stirring in the old body that's been at death's door for years.

Television has had something to do with it. The Supreme Court order breaking the theater chains away from the movie companies does too. And the slump in stratospheric salaries definitely has had its effect.

This is better than okay with this department. Whenever any reader of some of my reviews on the better foreign films accuses me of being snobbish, I retreat to the trait that makes me certain I'm no highbrow.

For the Man Likes It

FOR I like vaudeville, even the four-a-day which in recent years has passed as same. I like seals and jugglers, mimics and trained dogs. I like tap-dancers and adagio dancers. I like tumblers and Swiss bellringers. I can even bear bagpipers, provided they have dimpled knees and healthy smiles. Even if I've seen the picture or the busy Orval Hopkins already has reviewed the bill, I sneak into the Capitol each week to admire those souls who prance across that vast stage and throw their personalities across that wide orchestra pit.

While we're on the subject, I might as well confess that I hate what I call the Broadway Hillbillies, those jokers who think they're comedians and invariably start their distressing monologue with the line: "As I was coming to the theater today." Those are the guys that make my wife shudder at the thought of going to the Capitol to see the stage show and if I could get away with it, I'd kill those mike-huggers just the way they've been killing vaudeville.

But, as I say, vaudeville seems to be perking up a bit. The Warner circuit has been dusting off some of its stages. Philadelphia's Earle had its first vaudeville in two years with Jack Carson's show. Danny Kaye took over the stage of the massive Mastbaum, which hasn't had a stage show in 15 years. Warner houses in Pittsburgh, Atlantic City, Elizabeth, Passaic and Oklahoma City have played their first stage shows in a long while in recent weeks.

Loew's Kept at It

LOEW'S, whose Capitol has kept the round actors busy on F st. through the thick of the hiatus, has been trying variety turns in Richmond, Norfolk, Rochester, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Another chain—the Schine circuit—has 30 theaters playing vaudeville. This week's Variety estimates 50-week seasons are again possible for the variety artists.

Just as radio has been supplying the top-flight gimmicks—name bands and quiz shows—that have meant cake and icing to the theaters they've played, so has television been manna to the variety folk.

Frankly, I can't stand television myself; the thought of all those cathodes and tubes grabs my attention and I can't feel I'm really being amused. It's more like being mesmerized. But nowadays in New York you can't run into any old vaudevillian who isn't angling for a 2-minute spot on one of the sponsored shows. The pay isn't as hot as those infra lamps, but the attraction is that it's an attention-getter that might lead to one of those 50-week contracts.

Oh, the Roxyettes

GETTING back to the Warner, it's four years now since, as the Earle, the theater gave up its Roxyettes and their cheerful guests. I always liked vaudeville at the Earle. The spaces weren't so vast as the Capitol's and Producer Harry Anger always laced the acts together as though it were a small revue you were watching instead of just a string of acts.

And remember the Roxyettes? I never hear the "dum-dedle-dedle-dum-dum--dum" of Offenbach's "Orpheus" that I don't see, in memory's eye, small, blonde Babs Robertson trying, with a straight face to keep her balance on the huge balls on which Producer Anger was wont to place his lively young ladies. The tricks those Roxyettes had to do, week after week!

I came across Babs the other day. She's now Mrs. Barney Shankman and the mother of a 16-month-old boy. The wife of a lawyer, Babs is now concerned with decorating her new home in Van Buren st. But she keeps up with some of the old gang and a guest at Van Buren st. last month was Eileen Ritter. Remember Eileen, the cute Irish lass who used to introduce the acts with as pretty a style as Peg Woffington herself? Eileen lives in Ohio now and I'm afraid she's getting too practical for crazy show business.

Start Once Was Mum

STAN KAVANAUGH, now headlining at the Capitol, was another who used to top the Earle bill, never opening his mouth while he did his bijthe juggling. Stan told me the other day that in his early days he used to chatter just as he's doing now, but at the opening of Radio City's Center Theater, because the place was so big, he tried it in pantomime. That brought him to the "Follies" and years of trouping sans speech.

Another vaudevillian who'll be interested in the Warner's back-to-nature week will be Sibyl Bowan, lately at the Capitol, and now overseas entertaining our troops in the Berlin airlift.

Maybe if Carson's bill is a good one and enough people like him, the dust won't settle for long on the Warner stage.

New Play Spoofs Capital

NEW YORK, March 5 (AP).—The shenanigans which probably could and possibly did happen at various times around the Senate and House office buildings in Washington are humorously sketched in Samuel Spewack's new Broadway comedy, "Two Blind Mice."

Playwright Spewack has done here both a graphic job of reporting (only qualified Washington reporters can say if his reporting has some semblance of truth) and a frequently funny farce.

For his plot, he sends Melvyn Douglas into a ghost government office, the Office of Medicinal Herbs which had been abandoned in Congress appropriations many years previous. In fact, back in the regime of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Douglas, as "Coordinator" Thurston, a fast thinking newspaperman, continues operating the office without government funds because it provides jobs for quite a few people.

It is a funny play—unless one looks upon the Capitol Hill and Pentagon scenes with completely serious viewpoints. In the latter case, it might be frightening.

Critic Inspects The Victor Disk

By Paul Hume

WELL, we've seen the new Victor record player and the fancy records they play on it, at that turntable speed of 45 r.p.m.

Sufficiently concerned over both public and dealer reaction to send several teams around the country to demonstrate the new gadget for interested groups, Victor sent James Murray, its vice president in charge of production, to Washington. In a properly arranged showroom at the Shoreham, Murray told the history of the new record player; why it has the big one and one-half inch spindle, with the record-changing mechanism in the middle of the spindle; why it must turn at 45 r.p.m., and why the Victor people think this is the finest record changer and record they or anyone else has ever put out.

They played their records for us on their average home machine, a model selling for around $200. They also played them on the new Berkshire model, starting price $2200. Murray was, in my opinion, fair and honest in his appraisal of his own product, and in giving the background of the present record-playing field, with its three standard speeds of 78, 45 and 33 1/3 r.p.m.

There was also present a vice president of Victor's laboratory at Princeton, N. J., where these things are developed, tested, and finally pronounced ready for Victor to market. He was particularly helpful in making clear to my unscientific mind just why it was necessary for Victor, on its own premises, to manufacture records that would play at 45 r.p.m.

Why a Third Speed?

THIS is not the place, nor am I the man, to tell you the mechanical and mathematical considerations which brought Victor to that decision. The questions, as I put them to Murray, which the public asks most often, are, "Why must there be the third speed (45 r.p.m. in a field formerly held to 78 and to 33 1/3 r.p.m.), and is Victor's new combination of records and machine worth the disadvantages of a new speed?"

The disadvantages include the expense and space problems of a third turntable, for those who want the latest developments in Columbia, Victor and other standard records, and wish to be able to play their libraries of records operating at 78 r.p.m.

The other great question for Murray to answer was, of course, "Why did Victor not make a record which would be long playing, as the new Columbia record is, so that the music would not be interrupted except at points designated by the composer?"

They Sound Fine

FROM that session, which lasted nearly two hours, I must confess I came away as unsatisfied as I went in. Understand that I expected the new records to sound well. That was hardly the question.

But take the questions as listed above: Why the new speed of 45 r.p.m.? Without being any more technical than necessary, let us say that there is a specific relationship between width and depth of a groove on a phonograph record, size of the needle point, weight of the arm holding the needle, and the angle at which the point strikes the record.

Victor wanted a combination of all these factors which would give them least distortion in tone. They say that they have found it in this machine where the weight of the arm is about 5 grams, the needle plays the music from a certain point on the side of the groove, and it plays over only a limited area of the record's surface, so that the angle between needle and groove remains relatively constant. To keep these elements balanced, they discovered that 45 r.p.m. was the proper rotating rate for their records.

Murray crushed me as a collector of classical records with his reason for not working harder to produce a long-playing, uninterupted record such as Columbia's. He said that since only about 15

Learn How to Upstage Your Friends

By Sonia Stein

WATCH carefully and you can learn how to upstage your friends. Beginning this Tuesday with a half hour lesson in stage technique, the Institute of Contemporary Arts will present on WTTG a Tuesday night series of peeks into the artistic activities of its workshops.

An outgrowth of the 10 minute guest shots the institute had last month on Hazel Markel's Tuesday night show on WTTG, the new series will follow the Markel show at 8 p. m.

GREEN

Robert L. Green, executive director of the school, will put the faculty members through their paces before the cameras with the help of Shirley Barshay, whose story about the 6-month-old institute is in the March Mademoiselle. Pure art such as painting and sculpture will be demonstrated at some sessions, applied art such as product design and advertising layout will also be shown on "Angles on Art."

Faculty members of the New York Ave. Institute already do radio shows on WQQW. The Saturday show (4:30 to 5) is called "Speaking of Art." The Sunday night program on WQQW-FM steals what audience it can from Jack Benny and Horace Heidt for a 7 p. m. concert given by members of the music faculty. Green himself is emcee for the first and narrator for the second.

DECK the halls with boughs of thistle. Morgan's back. And a man with a pricklier sense of humor ne'er punctured a sponsor. After reacquainting the audience with Henry Morgan by having him guest star on Fred Allen's show two weeks in a row, NBC has given Morgan his own show to begin next Sunday at 8:30, immediately following Allen's show. This may become known as the cynics hour.

Arnold Stang will be in Morgan's new troupe in his customary place as stooge number one.

I wonder if NBC will also fetch over ABC's George Fleming who used to write Morgan-esque publicity releases to lighten the black hearts of radio editors from Skowhegan to Anaheim. Allegedly interviews with Morgan, they were Fleming's own flights of fancy.

New member of the Morgan show will be Lisa Kirk, singer who is now appearing in "Kiss Me Kate," on Broadway.

Morgan is scheduled to do a television series for NBC beginning later in the month.

AS A radio origination point, Washington normally confines itself to news and a covey of guys' views on news. However, that situation no longer obtains.

Johnny Bradford and Tony Romano last week began a biweekly musical show for NBC which originates at WRC. It is the only musical show now regularly originating from the Capital.

'Death in the . . .

Miller Had A Name For Radio

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, March. 5 (NYHT).—Arther Miller, whose "Death of a Salesman" left theater critics quivering like aspens, used to write radio dramas and very good ones, too. Miller, in fact, succeeded in that virtually impossible feat the creation of three-dimensional characters for radio dramas. This violation of radio custom so flabbergasted the vice president of a radio network that he sent them back with the comment: "Too much character."

This treatment eventually drove Miller out of radio for good, which is perhaps just as well for everyone concerned. His parting description of radio still stands as one of the most succinct and definitive ever uttered: "Death in the afternoon and into the night." Death appears to be one of his favorite words.

One of Miller's better efforts at radio drama, now contained in a book called "Radio's Best Plays," edited by Joseph Liss, was written oddly enough as part of a recruiting drive for merchant seamen. Most recruiting dramas in

But Don't Bring Your Glasses

Burlesque Is a Lady in London

By Alvin Steinkopf

LONDON, March 5 (AP).—When you go to a burlesque show in Britain do not take your opera glasses. They are against the law.

Notices in the programs at London's tiny and picturesque Windmill Theater put it very plainly:

"Any Additional Artificial Aid to Vision Is Not Permitted."

It has been ruled that spectacles and monocles are all right, but that the use of opera glasses, telescopes and such is offensive to public morals. One waggish sailor who brought his sextant was sent home.

The girls are very pretty and the costumes are put afterthoughts which someone almost forgot. But, what with regulations, inhibitions and the old restraints of British character, burlesque in London is a proper lady. She is not the rowdy gal sometimes met in the United States.

"Financed" by GI's

THERE isn't much burlesque in Britain these days, but what there is of it is a substantial enterprise with handsome balance sheets. It ought to be, because the United States Army, Navy and Airforce, not to mention the Marines, have given the little Windmill Theater near Piccadilly Circus what amounts to a 50,000-pound ($200,000) foundation.

More than one million GI's paid admissions at the Windmill and the theater still feels the oomph of that burst of wartime prosperity. It was burlesque, and how the GI's liked it! But it differs from the American model.

There is no strip tease in Britain. Nudity is tolerated and it has its admirers in the burlesque public.

But it must be rigid nudity—not to say frigid. A girl may be a beautiful statue without a dress. She may strike an artistic attitude while the curtain is down and hold it firmly while the curtain is up. But she must not move. Wriggling nudity is out, and the strip tease has no future in Britain.

Jokes, Too

SOME of the jokes sparkle, but they are not permitted to sizzle. Sample: "Some men like a wife of 40. Others prefer two of 20."

The Windmill, called that because in ancient times there was a windmill on that very spot, recalls the GI's fondly. One of the girls, Jill Anstey, who dances, sings and looks decorative in next to nothing, is now a seasoned veteran of 22, and remembers clearly when there were Americans in London.

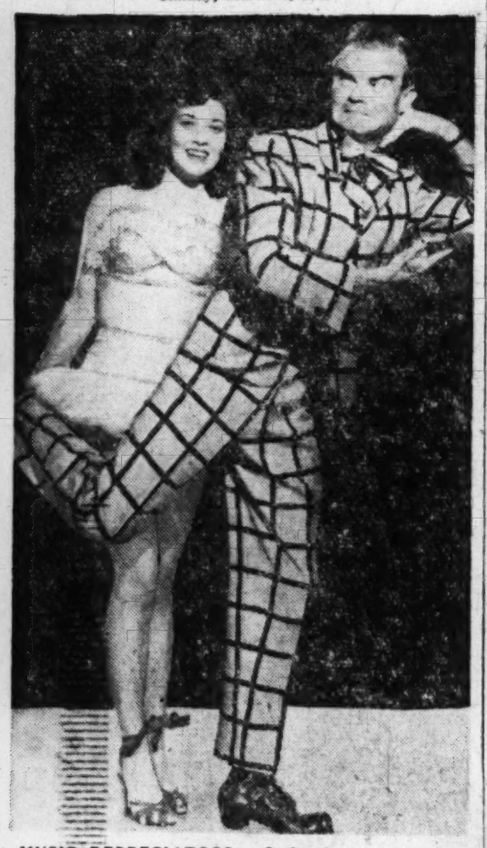
"You never heard such stamping and clomping, and you have no idea how the place was stuck up with gum after a show," said Jill.

"They were the grandest audiences, much warmer than our English. And they were really very well behaved, after you got used to the yelling."

The Windmill is well established as a Piccadilly institution and it is very proud of one record. It dished up burlesque and pepped up morale right through the blitz, and became the inspiration of the American motion picture, "Tonight and Every Night."

On September 7, 1940, there were 42 theaters running in London's West End. Then came the Luftwaffe and a week later there was one theater on its feet in the West End—the little Windmill.

Jill Anstey is one of the girls who sing, dance and look decorative in London's Windmill Theater. Here she is, having her dress altered by Wardrobe Mistress Phyllis Dexter



MUSIC DEPRECIATORS: Spike Jones is getting in the way of Bettyjo Huston's attractive scenery, but he wants to make certain you know he and his "Music Depreciation Revue" will be tearing up Constitution Hall next Saturday and Sunday nights

'Knickerbocker Holiday'

THE Mount Vernon Players are rehearsing "Knickerbocker Holiday" for production beginning March 24 in their theater in the undercroft of the Mount Vernon Church, 900 Massachusetts ave.

Maxwell Anderson wrote the book and lyrics, Kurt Weill the music for this play about Governor Stuyvesant and the early days of Manhattan, then New Amsterdam. Orvill French will play the peg-leg governor, a role created a decade ago at the National Theater by Walter Huston.

Vera Mowry, directing the company of 36, was last year's director of "The Kite," which won the one-act play contest here. A former resident of Pittsburgh, she once directed at the Pittsburgh Playhouse and the University of Pittsburgh.

O'Neill Play at Howard

EUGENE O'NEILL'S "The Great God Brown" will be presented by the Howard University speech and drama department for the week beginning tomorrow night in Spalding Hall, the theater on the university campus.

In this drama, which first appeared in 1925, the American playwright is musing on the masks people wear in the presence of others. Only when they meet those who understand them or when they are soliloquizing are their true faces presented.

Gertrude Stein Play Here

GERTRUDE STEIN'S final play, "Yes Is for a Very Young Man" will be performed by Productions, Inc., from Saturday, March 19, through Friday night, March 25, Sunday excepted, at Clendenen Hall of American University.

The celebrated expatriate wrote about the French resistance from the time of Petain's truce to the liberation of Paris in 1944. Miss Stein, who wrote this play with unaccustomed lucidity, here emphasizes the universality of people living under oppression and uncertainty.

Reservations may be made with Productions, Inc., at 1322 New York ave., or by calling Hudson 9288.

G. W. Doing Gogol Play

FRIDAY and Saturday nights the George Washington University Players will present their third offering of the season, Gogol's satirical farce, "The Inspector-General."

This classic comedy, which has been presented in all languages all over the earth, first appeared in 1836. Unlike so many of the great Russian plays, this is neither heavy nor deep. It's based on an incident in the life of Pushkin.

The story concerns reactions of the leaders of a small city to a rumor that the Inspector is coming to look over their use of Government funds. Rapid-fire wit is the tone of the adventure.

The players perform in Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts.

Oscar Winners Get Jobs

Hollywood (AP).—For the first time in Academy Award times, two current-year Oscar winners are cast in the same picture.

They are Loretta Young and Celeste Holm, in "Come to the Stable," filming at Twentieth Century-Fox studios. Miss Young was named best actress of 1947 and Miss Holm best supporting actress. Both awards were made last March.

Coming Up

Palace—"A Letter to Three Wives." Linda Darnell, Paul Douglas, Ann Sothern, Jeffrey Lynn and Jeanne Crain in a blithe comedy about three marriages; follows "Family Honeymoon."

Warner—"Flaxy Martin," life in the unsavory set with Virginia Mayo and Zachary Scott; Jack Carson's radio show on stage; opens Friday.

Capitol—"Force of Evil," John Garfield and Beatrice Pearson in a story about a New York numbers racketeer; opens Thursday.

Keith's—"The Fighting O'Flynn," Douglas Fairbanks, jr., presents himself in a yarn about robust life in Ireland; follows "So Dear to My Heart."

National—"Slightly French," Dorothy Lamour, Willard Parker and Don Ameche in a light comedy; opens Wednesday.

Playhouse—"Sarabande," Stewart Granger, John Greenwood, Francoise Rosay and Flora Robson in a British Technicolored romance at the court of George I; opens Friday.

Trans-Lux—"Portrait of Jenny," Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten in a Robert Nathan story seems set to follow "Paisan."

Metropolitan—"The Lucky Stiff," modern derring-do, with the busy Dorothy Lamour and Brian Donlevy; opens Thursday.

Columbia—"Command Decision," Clark Gable and a splendid all-male cast in that engrossing story of the Eighth Air Force; returns Thursday.

Lantz to Tour World to Test Show-Goers

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Walter Lantz, producer of cartoon movies, plans to tour most of the world to determine if theater audiences are sold on live action in combination with cartoon animation.

He wants to find out a few other things too, such as preference in story material. Many cartoons are based on folklore. But Lantz discovered, on a similar tour of the United States last year, that vast numbers of moviegoers like Western cartoons.

Lantz started his tour with a trip to Hawaii. He will leave Hollywood again in April for England, France, Switzerland, Italy, and possibly Holland, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries. Thereafter he will continue his survey in Mexico and in such South America cities as Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Lima and Santiago.

One of his questions will be: Do theater audiences like best feature-length or short cartoons? He wants to know before he makes a full-length Woody Woodpecker picture.

Belvoir Club Doing 'John Loves Mary'

The Essayons Dramatic Club of Fort Belvoir, Va., is opening its eighty-sixth season Tuesday through Thursday of this week, with the three-act comedy, "John Loves Mary."

Two casts have mastered the parts in the play and will share stage time during the run of the show.

Stanley S. Smith has directed the comedy, and Lieut. Henry Flertzheim, Lieut. James Crowley, Mrs. Roberta Harrison and Dorothy Folly are handling the title roles.

Lieut. Col. Edmund H. Lang is the producer.

Bogey Says Sessue Is a Real Menace

Hollywood (AP).—What one screen bad man thinks of another: Humphrey Bogart says Sessue Hayakawa is the most menacing film villian since Lon Chaney the elder. The Japanese actor, says Bogey, "has the wonderful ability to transmit a feeling of terror just by the inflections of his voice and the play of emotions across his mobile face." And that is quite a speech for Bogart.

Hayakawa, a star in silent picture days, plays a heavy in the Bogart film "Tokyo Joe," at Columbia.

'Heiress' at Ford's Tomorrow

WITH Basil Rathbone in the starring role, "The Heiress" opens a one-week engagement tomorrow night at Ford's Theater, Baltimore. Beatrice Straight has the title role, with Patricia Collinge also featured.

"The Heiress" is an adaptation of Henry James' novel, "Washington Square," as produced by Jed Harris. It will be the second subscription play in Baltimore this season of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society.

Future bookings at Ford's include "Show Boat," the week of March 14; Judith Anderson in "Medea" the week of the 21st, "Oklahoma!," the New York company, the week of the 28th and, opening April 4, Beatrice Lillie and Jack Haley in "Inside U. S. A."

Seats for "The Heiress" and "Medea," also a subscription play, may be booked through Bess Davis Schreiner, who is in her office at the National Theater, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons from noon till 5 o'clock.

Bach Takes Lead This Week

LOOK at the splurge of Bach cantatas these days, wth "Bide With Us" tonight at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and "Deck Thyself, My Soul" in the National Presbyterian Church, both, unfortunately, at precisely the same hour.

FOWLER

The Cathedral Choral Society announces a complete performance of the Bach St. Matthew Passion for Palm Sunday afternoon, April 10, in Washington Cathedral. Paul Callaway will direct the 150-voice chorus, with the boy choir of the cathedral. Soloists with the chorus and orchestra include Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist; Richard Dirksen, organist; Barbara Troxell, soprano; Louise Bernhardt, contralto; John Garris, tenor; Paul Hume and Paul Matthen, baritones.

The performance will be given in two parts, at 3 in the afternoon and 8:30 in the evening. The public is invited to the cathedral without admission charge.

More Bach concerns the annual Bach Festival in Bethlehem, Pa. There both the B Minor Mass and the St. Matthew Passion will be given this year. So heavy has the demand for tickets been that duplicate performances are already announced for the weekends of May 20-21 and 27-28. April 1 is the deadline for final determination on the second performances, so inquiries should be addressed to the Bach Choir, Bethlehem, Pa., before that time.

TOP programs in town this week include the Marine Band Orchestra Wednesday evening, Harry McClure's Bach recital Tuesday, Sidney Harth's fiddling tonight in the National Gallery and Katherine Fowler's organ recital this afternoon in Washington Cathedral.

There, shortly after 5 o'clock, Miss Fowler will play Marcel Dupre's 14 preludes known as the Way of the Cross. These pages represent the Stations of the Cross, depicting the stops made along the Via Dolorosa on the original Good Friday.

Norman Frauenheim plays this week to benefit the joint social order committee of Washington's Friends' Meetings. Smith College announces Ervin Laszlo, pianist, for March 24 in Constitution Hall. Laszlo was considered the most brilliant of last season's debutantes in New York. He is Hungarian, and just 16.

NEXT Sunday's National Symphony Orchestra concert at Catholic University includes Brahms' Alto Rhapsody with Hazel Arth as soloist, and the men's glee club, trained under the Rev. Russell Woollen, in the choral sections. Howard Mitchell directs the concert.

Another benefit is the Chevy Chase Women's Club concert Saturday night, with European soloists. Benefit for the National Symphony Ork. Opera lovers: Wagner's Flying Dutchman hits Baltimore Friday and Saturday night the Peabody Opera Company under Dr. Richard Lert sails, or flies, it into the Conservatory Concert Hall.

Tickets are on sale at the Employe Activities Office, Room 1011 South Agriculture Building, 14th st. and Independence ave, sw., for the Agriculture Department's musical talent show, Friday, March 11, set for 8:15 p. m. in the Jefferson Auditorium.

The Record Player

Fournier, Schnabel Do Beethoven Well

BEETHOVEN: Sonata in A Major for cello and piano. Pierre Fournier, cellist, and Artur Schnabel, pianist. Victor 1231. $4.75.

Fournier made a successful American debut this season, and with good reason. His cello playing is immaculate, musicianly, and full of interest. If this sonata matches your attention, you should be well pleased with this album, for Schnabel's authority in Beethoven is well established.

The mechanical side of things is pretty good. Surfaces are reasonably quiet, but it takes very quiet surfaces to stay unobstrusive when you are dealing with nothing noisier than a cello and piano.

Bizet: Carmen: Parle-moi de ma mere. Florence Quartararo, soprano, with Ramon Vinay, tenor. Victor 12-0687. $1.25.

Here is the full Jose-Micaela duet from act one of Carmen. And O for the days when sopranos sang with delicacy, with that touching quality of Bori, Rethberg, Edith Mason, Muzio, and the rest of them. Phrase after phrase comes out so cut and dried with none of the thrill that a young girl is supposed to feel when she comes to deliver a kiss on her sweetheart's forehead. Vinay is one of the heaviest sounding tenors in the business. This just isn't a disk to make my heart jump for sheer heavenly singing. Otherwise it's fine.

FLORENCE QUARTARARO
. . . cut and dried

Chopin: Mazurkas: Maryla Jonas, pianist. Columbia. $4.75.

Don't play these all at once. Try two, three or four at a time and see if you don't enjoy them more. Jonas has the right lilt, the proper rhythmic pulse, which is the secret of the mazurka. And she does not play all of the most frequently played ones, which is its own relief.

The recording is good, though a bit tubby in the bass. Surfaces excellent.

RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF: Flight of the Bumble-Bee; also: Shostakovich: Polka; also: Glinka: Mazurka from the Life of the Czar.

New York Philharmonic under Kurtz. Columbia, 12937-D. $1.25.

Fine performances, all three. So many pieces on just one record! I guess that means it's your money's worth, or does it?

Weber: Freishutz: Recitative and aria: Leise, leise. Ljuba Welitsch, soprano. Columbia, 72777-D. $1.25.

I must confess right now to being one of those who did not care for Miss Welitsch's Aida a couple of weeks ago. And I don't much care for her version of Agatha's big scene either.

Her voice strays above the pitch when she gets excited, which she does easily and often, and she maintains little sense of line, in such moments as the legato portions of the recitative. Also, there is a record of this by Tiana Lemnitz against which every other singer must be tested. And Welitsch just hasn't anything like that kind of singing ability.

Aside from that, she does a good routine, unsubtle job. She is a bit too well recorded, and altogether, why don't you wait for someone else in this, or go back and pick up the Flagstad version.

Beethoven: Trio in D Major. Busch-Serkin trio. Columbia 804. $4.75.

This happens to be a piece of music I can live without indefinitely. That doesn't prevent my finding this a wholly admirable performance and recording. Serkin shines, but Busch certainly understands the nature of Beethoven's phrasing and dynamics. It's all too subtle for me, but there are those who live on it, and for them this is a fine album. Busch plays as well here as he is able.

Copland: Billy the Kid: Prairie Night and Celebration Dance. New York Philharmonic under Stokowski. Columbia 19011-D. $1.

For a buck you get a swell 10-inch idea for some good American Western music dished up by the New York Philharmonic. That's a bargain Gimbel's would have to go some to meet. If you like this, jump in, pardner, it's your dish.

New Disk Sounds Fine, But No Better Than Old

per cent of Victor's total record sales in dollar volume comes from classical buyers, who he says are a small but vocal minority, the company did not feel that it should alter its mathematical investigations and findings to accommodate the Red Seal market.

I would not doubt the percentages given for a moment, although it is far from true in Washington, where nearly 75 per cent of the record business lies in the classical field.

But it hurt just the same, to be told that our much-wooed business was worth so little consideration. And it is a point, which I think Victor will discover to its sorrow, that classical record buyers are the ones who will most directly affect sales of these new machines.

How Good Is It?

BUT the biggest and most important question was that of the qualitative factor. How good is the new machine, how much better than Victor's present shellac records, with their poor surfaces, and how much better, if any, than Columbia's new long-playing records, which turn at 33 1/3 r.p.m.?

Murray demonstrated the machine first of all with the very record I would have chosen: Leopold Stokowski's conducting of his own orchestra in the electric opening to Tschaikowsky's Sleeping Beauty Ballet. This is the record which I considered the finest American release, mechanically, in 1948. I have heard it many times on many machines.

I regret to say that it did not sound any better to me than my own shellac version on my big machine, or than Victor's own vinylite record of it on smaller machines. I did not notice any spectacular lack of surface tone, but rather, noticed that there was an appreciable degree of it when the needle first contacted the record.

As Murray pointed out, listening to music is always a subjective affair. But in my estimation, the new Victor records do not sound appreciably better than Columbia's vinylite disks, nor for that matter do they sound better than Victor's own vinylite versions of the same music.

Who'll Notice?

IN THE matter of producing for the largest market, how many listeners outside of the classical field does Murray think will notice subtle differences in tone quality? In other words, how many buyers of popular, hillbilly, or children's records are as closely concerned with problems of fidelity, frequency range and other technical problems of the classical buyer?

Bebop, Uninhibited Jazz Style Grows Apace, Imperils Swing

NEW YORK, March 5 (AP).—That wild and uninhibited jazz style called "bebop," which has moved in on the stronghold of Dixieland jazz and just plain swing, is growing apace rather than lessening its supposed freakish hold on aural attention.

Basically, it's a hysterical application of the wildest unrestrained jazz to a souped-up version of Dixieland, and the results, while invigorating to a practiced ear, are almost certain to make any casual listener who dotes on Lombardo's simple orchestrations and the melodic tunes of Romberg, Berlin and Victor Herbert, plain and simply mad.

Whether for clinical reasons or from a sincere interest in such noisy and highly sophisticated jazz esoterica, here are a few suggestions in case you'd like to bend an ear:

Dizzy Gillespie is the "high priest" of the brassy cult, a fellow who plays a trumpet wildly and with apparently no control. A reasonably accustomed listener will be able, however, to note the brilliance, the swift passages and weird key changes, the bright modulations which pack themselves somehow among the torrent of notes riding in all directions, and thereby get a big listening kick out of the allegedly "freakish" style.

A fair indication of the high priest's musical prancings is to be heard on a record (Musicraft), one side of which is called "Opp Bop S'bam," which is not nonsense at all but a phonetic attempt to re-create in writing the sounds ripping from the Gillespie horn; "That's Earl, Brother," is on the reverse; also on Musicraft, also the Diz, try "Salt Peanuts," with "I Waited For You" on the flipover.

Red Rodney and his beboppers have an album of sprightly noise in a keynote collection, the album including even a pair of bebop vocalists, Dave Lambert and Buddy Stewart. Charlie Shavers, a handy fellow with a horn, has some bebop music to make on a voice record, dedicating his ditty to the high priest, as readily noted in its title, "Dizzie's Dilemma."

For folks who want really to go into the subject heavily, there is a large stack of albums called "Jazz at the Philharmonic," in which bebop is utilized lavishly. The various volumes were released on several labels: Vol. I by Asch Recordings: Vols. 2-3-4-5 on the Disc Company's label and 6 and 7 by Clef Records. You'll find Gene Krupa on drums, although not by name; and such swing stalwarts as Willie Smith, Illinois Jacquet, a wild tenor sax man; Charlie Ventura, a really good tenor horn virtuoso; Joe Guy and Howard McGee on trumpets, Les Paul on guitar, Lee Young on drums.

If you listen to all these, you'll either be deaf or a member of the cult. There doesn't seem to be any middle ground.

Four Choices

What's Poor Disk Hoarder Going to Do?

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, March 5 (U.P.).—A record collector these days starts flipping his lower lip when he tries to figure which of four varieties of recordings to shell out cash for. Now he has another to worry about—new, tiny, long-playing disks.

First there was the old-fashioned record. That takes up space at home, breaks, and generally is regarded as old hat in platter society.

Then came tape and wire recorders. On a roll of skinny tape or wire, you can record an hour's worth of music off the radio. That doesn't take up much space in the record cabinet, either.

The record companies have been burning the midnight oil over what to do about this. Their answer to long-playing tape and wire: long-playing records.

Columbia was out first with these almost a year ago. You can take home tiny 7-inchers that play the usual 3 minutes, 10-inchers that whirl for 15 minutes and the 12-inch size that goes on for 20 minutes. They last longer because they spin slower—at only 33 1/3 revolutions per minute (regular speed is 78). You also have to buy an attachment to hook on your old phonograph, of course, or else a new phonograph.

Now two more companies are out with a new variety, and this is where the disk hounds start to see triple. RCA-Victor and Capitol expect to have theirs on the record shelves in two months. These records are 7-inchers, unbreakable and light as a feather like Columbia's.

The only difference is you gotta buy another new phonograph to play these.

They spin faster, at 45 r. p. m., and have bigger holes in the middle. The tiny phonograph you play the Victor-Capitol kind on is the size of a cracker box, and it changes records in a second and a half—five times faster than record-changers now.

"Think of storage space it will give to a home," beams a Capitol vice president, Floyd Bittacker.

"We'll still make regulation records, as there are nearly 20 million conventional phonographs in use today, and it will be 10 years before they're obsolete."

By the time this revolution sweeps over the home disk jockeys, there'll be a few million tons of old-fashioned records left over. Maybe you can melt 'em down into flower pots.

Artie Shaw Enters 'Long Hair' Field

Artie Shaw has entered the field of serious music, announcing his belief that the clarinet is a "brilliant, virtuosic and beautiful instrument," destined for concert hall popularity.

"This is what I've always wanted to do," he said.

Since the first of the year Shaw has been soloist with the Rochester Civic Orchestra and will play this spring with the Denver Symphony and the National Orchestral Association. Bookings for next season include the Cleveland Orchestra and the Little Orchestra Society of New York.—(U.P.)

Munsell Calls Mixed Radio Shows O. K.

New York, March 5 (AP).—Some long-hairs may object, but Opera Star Patrice Munsell thinks those radio programs that mix serious and popular music are all to the good. Petite, pretty Patrice also approves of popular songs that are lifted from the classics.

It isn't that Miss Munsell, whose career is serious music, is any part of a be-bop fan. But she says radio programs that toss in serious music between popular numbers increase interest in the classics—make lovers of serious music out of persons who otherwise might never have become interested.

Hit tunes lifted from the classics, Miss Munsell tells this column, also accomplish the same thing. Many persons become interested in hearing the original composition, find they like it better, and go on to discover other serious music they might never have learned to care for.

Miss Munsell practices what she preaches, always including some popular numbers in her radio appearances, as well as her concert performances. And while she doesn't favor the same procedure for opera, she believes television will do much to make opera more popular with the general public.

LUCILLE MANNERS, star of the Cities Service program for several years, is coming back after two and a half years of retirement. Miss Manners has made several television appearances recently and also is scheduling a number of concerts.

Operators of Frequency Modulation radio stations are happy over the increasing proportion of radio sets equipped to receive FM. In January, for instance, better than 25 per cent of all radio sets produced had FM, compared with less than 12 per cent in January, 1948.

Radio and television developments that may not reach the public until next year, the year after next, or may five years from now will be described at the national convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers here starting Monday.

Arrau to Play Three

Claudio Arrau will play three of Beethoven's five piano concertos at the Beethoven festival which Pierre Monteux plans to give with the San Francisco Symphony next month.—(U. P.)

Brooklyn Can Now Boast A Symphony

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, March 5 (AP).—The Borough of Brooklyn, which already had a museum, a baseball team and a bridge, now has a symphony orchestra.

World War II veterans pushed the project and picked for musical director Dr. Herbert Zipper, whom they had heard conducting the Manila Symphony in the ruins of a bombed church. Zipper now has the use of an unbombed Brooklyn church for rehearsals, and his first ambitious program, on March 16, will be presented in the Brooklyn Academy of Music and repeated later in a high school.

The nonprofit Brooklyn orchestral Association, with more than 1000 members, has sought the support of Mr. Average Citizen, though it does not shut its doors to the rich. Unlike most symphonies, it has been built from the bottom up in the last couple of years. The association is headed by Henry Bohack and Rembert R. Wurlitzer is chairman of trustees. Associate conductor is Richard Korn, who has just been appointed Memphis Symphony conductor for 1949-1950.

Zipper says more than 700 musicians were auditioned to select the 85-man aggregation. Players from many leading American orchestras, wanting to go back home to Brooklyn, inquired about openings: while the Cleveland Symphony was here in January, Zipper says he had calls from 15 instrumentalists asking about the chances for a job in the home town.

With a population of three million, Brooklyn is the home of 13,000 American Federation of Musicians members. Many smaller American cities have orchestras of their own, and as the boys back from the Philippines said, "If Manila can do it, why can't Brooklyn?"

It will be the first New York borough, after Manhattan, to have its own full-fledged professional symphony. Most New Yorkers depend on Carnegie Hall, though Brooklyn regularly hears the Boston Symphony and the Little Orchestra Society. The goal is a $250,000 annual budget, but the beginning is more modest.

Zipper, a refugee from Vienna who reached the Philippines in time to be jailed by the Japanese, will offer on his first program Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," and the fourth act of Verdi's "Don Carlos," with a backdrop, and costumes for Regina Resnik, Brenda Lewis and other soloists.

Lenten Music

Adolf Torovsky is presenting half-hour organ recitals Sunday evenings during Lent in the Church of the Epiphany. Tonight he plays Borowsky and Karg-Elert.

Katharine Fowler programs Marcel Dupre's Way of the Cross' for this afternoon's Washington Cathedral recital, about 5:15.

Bach cantatas, Bide With Us, and Deck Thyself, My Soul are offered tonight at 8 in New York ave. and National Presbyterian churches, respectively. Charles Dana Beaschler conducts on New York ave., and Theodore Schaefer at 18th and Connecticut.

Tulsa Ladies Can, and Do, Sing Barbershop Harmony

By Leo Marks

TULSA, Okla., March 5 (AP).—It just goes to prove that nothing is sacred anymore.

First they took over the voting booth, then the tobacco shop and the bar.

The latest male holy of holies to fall is the barbef shop quartet.

That's right, men—the women are in our temple.

There no longer is room for argument. The ladies can and do sing barber shop harmony, and with all stops out—including the bass.

Ill Omen for Men

IT WAS several years and a number of Sweet Adeline chapters ago that confident men told their wives they might take over the barber shop, but they never, no never, could master that stag party technique.

"Where," asked the men with ill-concealed disdain, "will you find a bass?"

The women found the answer—and the basses—when Sweet Adelines, Inc., was founded in Tulsa July 13, 1945. The date proved an ill omen only for the men.

The founder was Mrs. W. H. Anderson (Edna Mae to her girls). She was seeking a female counterpart of the all-male Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, organized here before the war by O. C. Cash.

Although the woman's organization never became an auxiliary, it was encouraged by wives of members of the S. P. E. B. S. Q. S. A. There were 41 charter members at Mrs. Anderson's original meeting. In 1947, the year of the Sweet Adelines' first convention in Tulsa, there were only three chapters, all in Oklahoma.

Now, as the organization begins its fourth year, there are more than 1000 members and 20 active chapters.

1947 the Year

THE 1947 convention was the turning point. At that time the three Oklahoma chapters called the gathering to organize on a national scale, and invited several free lance groups to compete in a quartet-singing contest.

First place honors went to the Decaturettes from Decatur, Ill. They matched tonsils with such colorful fours as the Voca-Lizas and the Suzy-Annas of Bartlesville, the Four Naturals and the Magic Mel-O-Tones from Tulsa, and with the Keystone Barberettes of Peoria, Ill.

The second national convention was held in Topeka, Kans., in October, 1948, with 14 quartets entered in the national contest, including four from Tulsa.

Winners were the Johnson Sisters (all sisters, too) from Chicago. They were second in 1947. The Decaturettes, top warblers of 1947, were disqualified for two years from convention competition (as are the Johnson Sisters now) in order to spread the prizes around.

If either club acquires two new members by this year's conclave it again will be eligible to compete.

Runnersup in last year's roundelay rivalry were the Floradora Girls of Tulsa. In third spot were the Harmony Honeys of Kansas City; fourth, the Tulsa T-Towners, and fifth, the Mello-Dears, from St. Louis.

Serious Business

THE judging is no skip-or-miss, haphazard proposition.

Each group is judged on such points as "tone accuracy, blend, attacks and releases, enunciation, shading, tempo and rhythm, arrangement, vocal qualities and stage personality."

The Sweet Adelines have only one hard and fast rule for admittance: "There will be no prima donnas."

There is also an unwritten law followed by all clubs: "If you know a woman who sings bass, bring her along."

First president of the organization, of course, as Mrs. Anderson, the founder. She has since moved to Houston, Tex., and formed the chapter there.

An innovation established at the 1947 convention is that each chapter also sponsor a chorus. Several already had done so.

Bradford and Romano Put on New NBC Show

"Noodling around" with a guitar and a pair of larynxes, Tony Romano (left) and Johnny Bradford now originate an after midnight show on NBC twice a week

Under the circumstances you'd expect it to be pretentious. But if it were any less pretentious it would probably blend into the 60 cycle hum.

Bradford and Romano, who both sing, just "noodle around" to the accompaniment of Romano's guitar. The show is quiet, informal, agreeable.

The music and the ad libs sound freshly inspired. The boys come out even at the end of the selections without upsetting the general air of relaxation.

The show is ideal for its spot—or the spot is ideal for the show. It's a Tuesday and Thursday yawntime program. A 15 minute show, it's on at 5 minutes after midnight, Tuesday and Thursday nights, or call it 12:05 a. m. Wednesday and Friday if your mind happens to work like the Naval Observatory.

Bradford is known nationally for his RCA Victor recordings, latest of which is "I Got Lucky in the Rain," and locally for his daily radio show (WRC at 12:30 p. m.) and his daily television show, the "NBC Television Journal" (WNBW at 6 p. m.). He was recently voted Washington's most popular television singer and favorite television personality by the readers of "Teleguide" magazine.

Romano used to travel with Bob Hope and did shows for the armed forces all over the world. He appeared in the warm-ups preceding Hope broadcast and was part of the Al Pearce show on NBC several years ago.

Bradford and Romano met when they were working at Warner Brothers Studio in Hollywood and collaborated as a song-writing team. Some of their own tunes will be featured on the new show.

UNTIL one of the networks comes through in due, dreary course, radio is going to look pretty silly about the "Voice of Democracy" contest. Although radio stations all over the country helped process the winning four high school boys from the quarter of a million student entrants in a contest which is sponsored by the National Association of Broadcasters and the Radio Manufacturers Association (and the Chamber of Commerce), the winning essays have yet to be heard coast-to-coast on the air.

When the winners received their awards they had a chance to say "yes, sir" and "thank you, sir" on NBC. They have made recordings of their speeches to be played to the English speaking peoples of the world over the State Department's shortwave setup. They have interviewed a Congressman on ABC. The excerpts of one of the essays was included in a Morgan Beatty broadcast on NBC and excerpts from another on Ed Murrow's CBS program.

But the American people haven't yet heard all four prize-winning essays, although all four were delivered in the House of Burgesses last week, not far from where Patrick Henry made his immortal speech.

In Washington we can hear transcribed excerpts of the extremely well-written material at 2 p. m. next Sunday on WGAY.

The 2 p. m. period on WGAY will be occupied today by a half-hour recording of a State Department show explaining the Berlin Airlift to people abroad. Said to be very well produced, the show was aired in New York not long ago and met with enthusiastic response.

BY A process of convoluted reasoning dear to my heart, I look forward to tonight's presentation on TV of "Julius Caesar," on the basis of the TV presentation of "Twelfth Night," two weeks ago.

What "Philco Television Playhouse" did with the Shakespearean comedy, "Studio One" can undoubtedly do with the tragedy on CBS-TV tonight at 7:30.

CBS will be doing "Julius Caesar" in modern dress as Orson Welles did it on Broadway. The Amherst Masquers' production from the Folger library on the third of April (NBC-TV) will be in Elizabethan dress as Shakespeare's own company did it. The conventional garb is Roman.

Cut Prices of TV Sets

NEW YORK, March 5 (AP).—If you're in the market for a television set you can get one now for considerably less than a year ago or even three months ago.

The biggest savings are on large screen sets. You can get table models with 16-inch metal cone viewing tubes or 15-inch all-glass tubes—giving about 125 square inches of pictures—for $495. That's some $400 less than for comparable sets a year ago.

There has been a resulting—or at any rate, an accompanying—lowering of prices of sets with smaller screens.

Reductions this week included:

Ten-inch sets—Crosley, with FM radio, $229.50 down $40; Westinghouse, television only, $269.95, or $55 below its previous low.

Twelve-inch sets—Dumont, with FM radio, $425, cut of $20; with Crosley expected to follow suit on an almost identical model.

Meanwhile, a number of dealers are offering floor samples and discontinued models for as little as $139.95 for 7-inch sets; $189.95 for 10-inch and $240 for 12-inch. There also has been considerable price cutting on current models.

John Wayne and Joanne Dru will be heard over WTOP tomorrow at 9 p. m. in "Red River." Walter Brennan also will be in the cast the war, noble as they were in intent, were as lachrymose as "Stella Dallas" and formalized as posters. This one wasn't any of those things.

Miller Wrote Some Good Ones for Radio

Banal Title

ENTITLED "The Story of Gus," a banal title which I bet Miller isn't responsible for, this little play contained one of the most curious and likable merchant seamen I've run into in fiction. "To look at Gus," one of the characters explained, "all you saw was a big Swedish-type individual about 45, with a sweet smile and apparently not an extra piece of brain in his head. To him everything printed was reading matter. It could be a Western story or a book by Einstein. If he found it, he'd read it. He just liked words. Also he liked stuffed animals."

Though he'd followed the sea for 25 years, Gus did what he considered his real traveling on land between trips. He liked scenery and, of course, you can't find much in the middle of the Atlantic. Also, he liked wild life and you don't find any squirrels running around the ocean, either. Eventually, he met a matronly woman who ran a saloon in St. Augustine, Fla. "We got along fine," Gus explained. "I mean we saw eye to eye on this wild life."

They got married and Gus abandoned the sea and moves his extensive collection of stuffed animals into the saloon. This attracted crowds of elderly people. "Not bar and grill people, either. High-type people. No fights or arguments." Every night Gus would give a little lecture on his stuffed animals. It was all very pleasant and the couple prospered.

Enter the Son

THIS idyllic existence was complicated by the entrance of the woman's 18-year-old son by a previous marriage, a nice lad who had been rejected by the draft board because of a heart condition. But Gus was troubled. He felt he should be setting a good example to the lad and there he was basking in the Florida sunshine and lecturing about stuffed animals while the country cried for merchant seamen and ships were being torpedoed right off the Florida coast.

His wife wanted to keep her two menfolk as far from the shooting as possible, forbade her husband to tell his new and unexpected son he had ever been at sea. And none of his sea stories either. That was the worst part of it, Man with 25 years of salty yarns on his chest and a brand new son to tell them to—and he isn't allowed to. Gus felt all bottled up.

His new son, who had a got a job driving a taxi, then started making handsome fees driving sightseers out to the coast to look at the hulks of torpeded ships. That was too much for the old man. "Maxie, it ain't nice of you to do that," he expostulated. "Those are ships, you understand? A ship isn't just a big chunk of steel, it's a place that men lived on, it's like their house that somebody smashed up. It's a sad place. You don't want to take people out there to gawk at it like it was a dead horse or something. You gotta have respect for a busted ship lyin' on a beach."

All Those Stories

AND then it came out—his past. And prety soon out tumbled all those pent-up stories. "For instance on the China run we had a captain named Trotter. Now Trotter had a habit of taking out a pistol every morning and shooting at the waves. Well one morning the sky was nice and clear and Trotter . . ."

The upshot, of course, ws that both father and son joined the merchant marine and, in so doing, perhaps, lured a couple of young listeners in joining too, which was what was intended. It's one of the most painless bits of recruiting propaganda I know, and now that Miller seems to have taken his place as one of the Nation's outstanding dramatists, it might be a good idea to revive it.

Tex, Jinx Opening New TV Show

THE new Jinx Falkenburg-Tex McCrary television show begins tomorrow night at 8 over CBS-TV (WOIC) with a magazine format. Entitled "Preview," the half hour show will use a number of features in approximately the way a picture magazine does. Tomorrow night's show will include:

Cover Story, the life of musical comedy star Mary Martin as told by her 13-year-old daughter, Heller Halliday.

Stunt of the week, the billion dollar glee club which is composed of executives of the Nation's large industries.

WQQW to Start New Story Hour

Starting March 12, WQQW will present "Ellie Tells a Story," at 9 every Saturday morning, M. Robert Rogers, general manager of WQQW, announced yesterday. The show will replace Carl Green's "The Children's Hour," which last year won the station a Peabody award.

In private life, Ellie is Mrs. E. V. Conason of Arlington, Va. Formerly a radio actress, Mrs. Conason has been a housewife for the past few years.

In addition to the stories she will tell, Ellie will interweave the best in music that is related to her stories and of especial appeal to children. Some of her musical presentations will be from phonograph records, some will be folk songs sung by Ellie herself. In order to give authentic accompaniments to the folk music, Ellie has launched on the project of mastering the zither within 10 days.

The story for the opening broadcast will come from "Pecos Bill and Lightning," by Leigh Peck.

NBC Will Still Televise 'Meet the Press'

New York, March 5 (AP).—Instead of going off NBC, the television version of Meet the Press is now offered on Wednesdays at 10 p. m.

NBC said the decision to keep the series was made to meet numerous viewer requests. It was necessary to shift it off Sunday night, where the sponsor has a new show.

For the television version, Meet the Press uses different interview guests than the radio version, which goes via MBS on Friday.

New Weather Report

A new series of official weather reports direct from the Central Weather Bureau Office in Washington will start over WASH-FM tomorrow, to be heard Monday through Friday, 4:55 to 5 p. m. Weatherman will be James C. Fidler of the Weather Bureau broadcast training division.

'Just Call Me King'

KING PETER of Yugoslavia was interviewed on the television version of "Meet the Press" one night. First crack out of the box one of the reporters asked:

"Do you prefer to be called king or mister?"

His former majesty blinked a moment, then admitted candidly: "I prefer king."

The shy, rather charming and surprisingly intelligent young man was battered for several minutes by questions concerning his relations with our State Department, with Tito and with the Yugoslav people; then came another of those direct questions the American press more or less specializes in:

"How are you financing yourself now that you're not in the business of being king any more?"

Peter was momentarily dumfounded: "That's a very embarrassing question," he said finally. "I could ask you the same thing."

"I'm working," snapped the reporter.

Cummings Contest

Alan Cummings, new WWDC all-night man, has started his tenure with a contest. Listeners are asked to complete in 50 words or less the sentence, "I hate contests because . . ." Alan is going to send the winner the grand prize of one box top.

Cummings, who replaces Les Sand, resigned, has been an all-night man before—on WITH, Baltimore in 1947. He also has worked for WARL, Arlington, Va.

At the Bridge Table

Club Play Cracks Attendance Marks

By Marian H. Barre

A VERITABLE epidemic of club championships held in February broke all attendance records but duplicate fans, still unsated, played through the past week with the same enthusiasm.

In the Arlington Farms match for foursomes, the title fell to Mrs. H. G. Campbell, Mrs. Edward St. John, Mr. and Mrs. George Kathan. This line-up won 29 matches, 1½ over Miss L. G. Hunter, Lynn Carrier, Mrs. E. Count, and Mrs. F. Millspaugh.

In the Washington Bridge League's dual title-play for men's and women's pairs it was another triumph for Mrs. Campbell, her partner being Miss K. McNutt. The leading ladies took both rounds, finishing with a 60-point margin over Mrs. Edna Evans and Mrs. Bernard Rosson. In show place was the St. John-Hunter duo, 2 points behind the runnersup.

An upset in the men's game brought Al Westrich and H. R. King out on top with 374.3 points; Simon Gerber and Henry Stearman having 370.3; Kathan and James Lazard, 370.2.

Next annual championship in the offing is the Women's Auxiliary on March 26 at Hotel Roosevelt, Mrs. J. A. Dearing and Mrs. Ida Terrant defending the Eloise Bennett Cup. (This date had originally been selected for the annual City of Washington Tourney, now postponed until April 2 and 3). The Auxiliary's bimonthly game to benefit the charity fund drew another record-breaking field which was split into two sections. Played on February 26, the winners were—Drs. McHugh and Gorton, Mrs. W. Russell-Mrs. L. W. Bealer, Mrs. M. L. Fisher-Joe White, J. G. Stein-B. Rosson Mrs. Donald Ryan-Mrs. M. H. Barre, Lewis Tubbs-W. R. Poissant, Col. and Mrs. R. H. Skinner, P. Blassangame-Charles Richter, were runners-up.

THE Federal Bridge League met for the last time at 2600 16th st. when the February pair game was played last Monday (winners elsewhere in this column); when team play is resumed tomorrow the league will be in its new quarters at 1300 New Hampshire ave., the Admiral Peary Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Both team and pair play will be featured at the Washington Bridge League on Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt.

Master point offering of the current week include the Count Club on Tuesday; Euclid Studios Friday evening monthly; and the Chess Club's usual "second Saturday."

THE bridge world lost one of its most prominent members when Dr. J. B. Gregg Custis died last Monday. Bridge was Dr. Custis' avocation, as it is also his wife's, Mrs. Inez Early Custis. A member of both the Washington and Federal Bridge Leagues, Dr. Custis was recently elected chairman of the Chess Club's bridge activites. The club was closed Thursday in respect for his memory.

P. Hal Sims, national bridge authority, died Sunday of a heart attack at his winter home in Cuba, collapsing at the bridge table. The "acknowledged champion of all champions," he won nearly a thousand trophies during his tournament career. His single published treatise, "Money Contract," revolutionized the game in the early 1930's during the "battle of the systems." Sims' permanent home was in Deal, N. J.

DIRECTED by a national master player, a new course in bridge instruction begins at 8 p. m., March 7, at the Connecticut Bridge Club, 2605 Connecticut ave. Call HUdson 9823 for further details.

In appreciation of her services as volunteer director of Buckingham Village Club, Mrs. Edna Evans was presented with a silver cigarette lighter by the membership. Master winners at the Village last week were Maj. M. Cicconi-Capt. John Carr, jr., Daniel Goalwin-Richard Head, half-points going to Mr. and Mrs. Allan Vetter, Col. and Mrs. John Geddes.

At the Federal League's monthly pair game Dr. A. J. Steinberg-S. Gerber, Col. Seabourne-M.Sobernheim won A Section; there was a tie in B between Mark Lake-Vernon Dunn, Wessal Stewart-Spencer Laubrie, with Mrs. M. L. Fisher and Mrs. M. Boschan, top in the other position.

Famous 1918 Airmail Is Now Worth $4000

By William M. Stuart

SCOTT'S Specialized United States Catalogue for 1949, edited by Gordon Harmer, has just been issued. This is the twenty-seventh edition of this catalogue and contains 555 pages; the first editon, published in 1923, contained 67 pages. The value of the catalogue to the United States specialist is beyond question, but it will be a welcome addition to philatelic literature as well.

Many price changes are noted since Volume 1 of the 1948 Scott Standard Catalogue was published last September. The most spectacular advance—from $3500 to $4400—covers the famous 24-cent airmail invert, issued May 13, 1918. The 2-cent black Harding, No. 613B, rotary press, perf., 11, which is known only used, is listed at $500. This stamp had been previously unpriced. The White Plains sheet, used, is increased to $20.

Special printings of 1883 have all been reduced. The 15-cent, 1869, type II, mint, is raised to $27.50, while the 30-cent drops to $25. The section "Information for Collectors," describing electric eye, has been rewritten and standardized. Marginal blocks of four with electric eye markings are no longer listed. Air post envelopes have been revised, as have Confederate States and Philippine sections. Altogether the new catalogue is a volume of great usefulness and will, no doubt, be much appreciated.

AIR MAIL service will be inaugurated on March 8 at Claremont, Calif., through the Pomona, Calif., heliport, on route A M-84. A special cachet will be provided and the covers dispatched by helicopter to the air field, Los Angeles, Calif., where they will be backstamped.

The sixth and final portion of the Charles Lathrop Pack collection was sold by Harmer, Rooke & Co., New York City, on February 16, 17 and 18. This three-day sale amounted to $30,000, bringing the total of the entire collection to $360,000. This collection comprised largely the early stamps of Argentine Republic, New South Wales, Brazil, Canada, New Zealand, Cape of Good Hope and Victoria.

The high cost of transportation has forced the Republic of the Philippines to increase the postage rate of the air letter sheets. The new rate is 30 centavos.

THE Woodridge Stamp Club will hold a business session tomorrow evening in the Recreation Room, 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne.

The Washington Numismatic Society meets tomorrow in the United States National Museum, 10th and Constitution ave., at 8 p. m.

The Silver Spring Philatelic Society will meet on Thursday evening in the board room of the County Building, Silver Spring, Md. Mrs. Elizabeth Medbery will exhibit medical stamps.

President Truman has signed the bill providing for a stamp for the 200th anniversary of the founding of Alexandria, Va. Bills have been introduced into Congress for a stamp for P. T. Barnum, Booker T. Washington, Dr. Charles H. Herty, scientist; Senator Thomas E. Watson of Georgia, and for the 250th anniversary of the founding of Louisiana territory.

AN AUCTION was held at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple. Ellery Denison officiated. J. S. Petrie exhibited two frames of commemorative stamps. In one frame the stamps were so arranged as to spell out: "Too Many Stamps" and in the other frame the number of stamps issued in 1948. Another meeting will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m. in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Herbert S. Chamberlain, assistant superintendent of stamps, Postoffice Department, was the speaker at the meeting of the Government Printing Office Stamp Club on Thursday in Conference Room C.

Simple Beauty

Wooden Bowls a Striking Display

"Haystack Rock," by Edmond J. Fitzgerald, currently on display in the library of George Washington University

By Jane Watson Crane

ONE of the most attractive exhibits in Washington today is the simplest—nothing more or less than a series of wooden bowls, beautifully made by James Prestini and shown to best advantage at the Institute of Contemporary Arts. The display is on a par with the institute's earlier show of contemporary pottery by T. S. Haile, the young Englishman who died last year in an automobile accident. By bringing to Washington examples of the finest in design and workmanship in the humblest crafts, the institute is rendering a unique and invaluable service. Intended primarily as an adjunct to its own classes, the exhibits will go far beyond their immediate objective if they help to dispel the notion that "art," as the term is used today, is the exclusive property of painters, sculptors or etchers.

Prestini's father was an Italian stone cutter. The son studied engineering at Yale, and later added to the discipline of this training, labor with tools and materials in a workshop. He uses a lathe for turning his bowls, which have the delicacy and refinement of some of the most highly developed forms of pottery.

The Prestini exhibit stems, as did most of its predecessors at the institute, from the Museum of Modern Art in New York. We wish it could be followed by an exhibit of various types of useful objects, preferably obtainable locally, which stand out for integrity of design and workmanship. Also, we believe that there would be a response in this community to other types of displays which so far have not been offered, except perhaps casually and occasionally; there is no institution in Washington which is bringing to the public the new developments in design and visual presentation. Both these fields were greatly stimulated during the war, when need spurred ingenuity.

One of the museums in the Midwest has taken initiative along these lines; the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis publishes a little magazine called the "Everyday Art Quarterly," a guide to well-designed products. One issue explored the nature and uses of plastics; another, new developments in the production of children's toys, furniture and equipment, and a third was devoted to "Everyday Art Outdoors." Demand for this modest publication has already extended beyond the borders of Minnesota.

JOHN RUSSELL MASON, librarian of George Washington University, last fall launched a series of art exhibitions in the Lisner Library. Placed at a point in the building where students naturally foregather, the displays have been drawing increasing attention and appreciation.

Latest in the series is an exhibit of oils and water colors by Edmond J. Fitzgerald, an able practitioner in both media. Fitzgerald, who is now teaching painting in New York, was in the Navy during the war. Prior to his war service, he had executed several mural commissions, including work for the Section of Fine Arts in Idaho, Oregon and Washington, and a mural for the Seamen's Church Institute in New York.

In subject, the paintings range from Alaska to Chevy Chase. All are representational and are marked by no flights of fancy but the kind of honest direct approach and integrity of craftsmanship that commands instant respect.

The Fitzgerald paintings will continue on view on the first and second floor landings of the library until March 14. The library is open weekdays from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., Saturdays 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and Sundays 2 to 6 p. m.

Rouault Has A Parallel For Lautrec

NEW YORK, (U.P.)—The lithographs and posters of Toulouse-Lautrec, exhibited at Associated American Artists, carry the observer back into the night life of Paris during the gay '90s.

Lautrec painted with Gallic with the insatiable lust of the men. He drew with a sympathetic hand the sensual forms of their presumptive victims, the women who, clothed from top to toe, offered but their piquant faces, their elegant hands and their tantalizing ankles to the gluttonous eyes of their masters. It was a he-man world full of alluring enchantments.

The aquatint series "Miserere et Guerre" (Miserere and War) of Georges Rouault, which is on view at Kleeman, was done one generation later. The atrocities of war have taken the place of the charm of life. Men kill and are killed. Cities are burnt.

As the world is shaken to its foundation, the perpetual actors of the human comedy pass through the scene in an apocalyptic vision. There are the domineering men in power and the meek-hearted, powerless poor. There are the king and the lawyer, the peasant and the soldier, the beggar, the thief and the clown; there are the lady and the prostitute, the mother and the child.

And time and again there appears the tormented body of Christ. The untold sufferings have distorted the forms of God and man. They have wrought thick, black lines into their martyrized features. In this terrible crisis of humanity the choice of man lies between cruelty and compassion, the greatest evil and the greatest good. He has no third choice.

Walt Kuhn Preparing To Retire

NEW YORK (U.P.)—After 50 years of painting, Walt Kuhn has announced he intends to retire from exhibiting.

Around the turn of the century Kuhn started a successful battle in favor of the recognition of some modernistic ideas in painting.

He was greatly impressed by the early Cezannes. But his interest has been concentrated less on the problems of form than on certain psychological aspects of life.

He has painted show business people, the clowns, the acrobats, the strong men and the pretty girls. What fascinated him was the contrast between the hilarity of the performances and the sadness of the performers. That strange duality attracted him so much that he made it the subject matter of his art.

He pictured it by contrasting the sad and shy looks of his heroes with their funny or provocative "business" costumes. He has reported the existence of this cleavage factually without ever attempting to broaden his report into a general statement on human affairs, or to treat it parabolically in a symbolic or surrealistic manner.

The world Kuhn mirrors in his paintings is cold, dreary and bitter. No compensation is offered for the disenchantment of the enchanters.

Knaths Speaks at Watkins Gallery March 18

THE arrival of the Painter Karl Knaths for his spring series of lectures and classes at the Phillips Gallery is always an occasion for rejoicing among his followers. In addition to speaking at the Phillips Gallery, Knaths will give a lecture on painting at American University in the Watkins Gallery on the campus on Friday, March 18, at 8:30 p. m.

James Johnson Sweeney will give an informal talk on "Art Today" at the Watkins Gallery on Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. (Admission to both these lectures is free, but reservations are necessary because of limited seating capacity. Telephone Woodley 6800, extension 33, for reservations.)

Sweeney is one of the jurors for the seventeenth annual All-Maryland Exhibition, to be held later this month at the Baltimore Museum of Art. He is a former director of painting and sculpture at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, and is well known for his writings and lectures on modern art.

Hermann Williams, jr., director of the Corcoran Gallery, has announced that over 3000 paintings have been submitted by American artists for the biennial, which will open here March 27. About 1500 entries have been received in New York, and an equal number in Washington. From those submitted, 300 will be chosen for display. The task of selection this year falls on Artists Paul Sample, chairman; Mitchell Jamieson, and Abraham Rattner, with Mr. Williams acting for the gallery. The show will be on view through May 8.

The March exhibit at the D. C. Public Library will be of paintings and drawings by Olga Chomisak Weiss. Several were executed in 1947, during her stay in Japan, where they were exhibited.

With an eye to the future, the staff of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York has invited CBS engineers to consult with the architects of the building on plans for installation of television equipment and expansion of facilities.

A specially designed television studio is contemplated. Additional television broadcasting facilities will be installed in key locations throughout the main building and wings.

CBS engineers are functioning primarily as expert advisers on the problems involved in equipping buildings for television broadcasts. One of the problems, and a serious one, is the effect of the heat from strong lights on paintings and tapestries.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation is holding an exhibition of paintings and sculpture by Washington painters and sculptors, which will continue through the month of March. Paintings are by Benjamin Abramowitz, Samuel Bookatz, Sophie Corwin, Joyce Field, Doris Haskel, Anna Herman, Jacob Kainen, David Leibovici, Norma Mazo, Maurice Newman, Jack Perlmutter and Therese Schwartz; sculpture by Lilli Gettinger, Shirley Lichtman, Sarah Silverman and Leo Stappat.

Forty-seven water colors of flowers by the Latin American artist, Margarita Blanco, were shown here briefly at Dumbarton Junior College, the enterprising head of the art department having secured them in passage from one exhibition point to the next. The artist has specialized in flower painting, and the results justify her concentration.

Color-Starved British Exult In Trafalgar Fountains

By Robert Musel

LONDON (U.P.). — Everybody knew that postwar Britain was starved for gaiety and color, but no one realized just how much until they put two new fountains in Trafalgar Square.

The fountains were unveiled on Trafalgar Day to commemorate Admirals Beatty and Jellicoe, heroes of World War I.

Dwarfed by the monument to Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of the Battle of Trafalgar, the fountains are simply designed and no more elaborate than those in many parks in moderate sized cities in the United States.

They throw a mild spume some 20 feet into the air and red and blue spotlights tinge the column of water for about half its height.

Display Is Small

IT'S A PUNY display compared to the majesty of Nelson on his towering plinth guarded by the famous crouching lions which have become the identifying symbol of the square the world over through newsreels and photographs.

But tens of thousands of Britons gathered silently that night to watch the little fountains glow into color. They overflowed the square on the steps of St. Martin's Church and the National Art Gallery.

Whole families came from all over London, mothers stood with babies in arms and fathers with their arms around the shoulders of their sons. They just looked. At 11 p. m. the lights went out and the crowd went home.

They Come Back

THE next night the crowd was back again, still silent, still standing and looking at one of the few bright things in this drab, war-worn city.

The ministry of works then announced that the lights would only be used on ceremonial occasions. Immediately there was a spontaneous but concerted outcry from the newspapers. Editorially they lambasted the Labor government for trying to take from the people this little flicker of prewar brilliance.

The government capitulated. The lights go on every night. And every night hundreds of thousands of Britons just stand around and watch. And every night dozens of foreigners pass by and wonder.

Art of West Being Shown

NYHT News Service

THE history of the West is to be reviewed this year in celebrations in several cities. Thus the exhibition of "The Far West," which is currently showing at New York's Knoedler gallery, is of interest to a wider than local public. Among the 40-odd oils are landscapes and scenes of frontier life.

The summary the show affords is a decidedly varied one, ranging from dramatic to illustrative work, from the lurid and exciting "Praire Fire," by William Ranney, to the relatively factual "Life of the Hunter," by Arthur W. Tait. Not a few of the pictures show considerable skill in detail, overrun, to a vast extent, by romantic sentimentality. Landscapes, on the other hand, are generally honest, whether as vigorous as the "Yellowstone Falls" of Thomas Moran, or as exquisitely luminous and serene as the "King's Canyon," by Bierstadt.

The West presents a challenge to the showman which is not with the best results in this instance fulfilled.

34 European Students See U. S. by Air

By Fred M. Hechinger

"IF FREE youth had its way, there would be no more wars," said a hard-boiled observer who accompanied the 34 European high school students on "Operation Columbus." Sponsored by the Civil Air Patrol and piloted by the Special Air Missions Group of the United States Air Force, a two-week coast-to-coast trip permitted the teen-agers from abroad to discover America, Americans and themselves. And they—in turn—have been discovered by thousands of Americans in 10 major cities.

Here are some of the highlights of the unprecedented flying expedition:

At Mitchel Field the three planes collected their cargo of one boy and one girl from each of 17 Marshall Plan countries, brought here by the New York Herald Tribune, Pan American World Airways, TWA and American Overseas Airlines. Added were two young Americans, Helen Ginandes and Richard Leather, representing the two independent states of Brooklyn and Long Island, respectively.

Meet Segregation

AT NASHVILLE the 36 students calmly submitted to their first experiece with a screaming motorcycle escort, a battery of flash bulbs, and a deluge of interviews. On the more serious side, they voiced their disapproval over their first eyewitness contact with "segregation."

At Dallas they rode on an ice storm, and their hosts apologized for the "unusual weather." After visits to a number of schools, the youngsters were taken to a bowling alley. Jeane Claude Salle promptly went through the motions, violated every rule on the books and, with true French genius for improvisation, registered a "strike."

But later in the day the young Europeans met an unexpected aspect of Texas: a young local high school student performed brilliantly on the piano. Quickly Louise Laboulle of Belgium took to the keys to uphold Europe's musical honor.

With a 10-gallon hat apiece the aerial caravan moved on to Phoenix, Ariz., and were met with red-faced apologies over another dose of "unusual weather." Smiled pretty Ferdinanda Popper of Vienna charmingly: "We came to meet you—not your weather."

Cool to Warm

A FEW DAYS later at the Hotel Biltmore in Los Angeles the consul general of every country (except Brooklyn!) introduced the foreign representatives at a luncheon. "Following an old custom of my country," said Anthony Demetriades of Athens, with dignity, "I will speak for the women." The French youngster, who, only a few days earlier had been cool toward Georg Albrechtskirchinger, now applauded warmly after the German fellow-traveler had finished.

At Albuquerque there were "real Indians." In Denver, Gustaaf Sedee of Holland fell off a horse for the first time and found the people "the friendliest I've ever met." They were, and the Governor of Colorado proclaimed Sunday, January 30, "International Relations Day" in honor of the students and for all times to come. Each youngster carefully pocketed a photostat of the declaration and felt that he had made history in far-off America.

By that time a good old-fashioned square dance was in the cards, and vivacious Miss Brooklyn "called it" expertly and with abandon under a rakish 10-gallon hat. Zoe Dragoumis of Athens bluntly told her partner of Denver: "I do not know how to dance, but I am sure that I can learn in five minutes." She did.

Operation Haylift

UP ABOVE the gray clouds again, and then the European youngsters, who had long learned to admire American airpower through the vital Berlin airlift, made the acquaintance of the far more characteristically American home version—the peaceful, life-saving "Operation Haylift" over ice-bound range territory. Once more they looked down on "unusual weather."

In Detroit it was mass-production—another part of America, so different from the America of the Rockies at 14,000 feet. And then a quick look down into the foundries of Pittsburgh—familiar perhaps only to John Williams and Anne Mueller of Great Britain if they have been to their own Manchester.

Then a final stop—Washington, D. C.—that mythical city of White House, Capitol, Senators. In the empty chamber the students "presided" over the Senate, conferred with the chairmen of the Foreign Affairs Committees, later shook hands with—the President of the United States. As the guests of The Washington Post and the Civic Education Service they saw the world's most important Capital as few American youngsters have.

But for a brief half-hour gay holiday, spirits spontaneously gave way to almost awed reverence as the students went quietly up the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. "This is the finest thing we have seen in America," said Roger Debecker of Belgium. The future of Europe paid sincere respect to the past of America.

To New York by Bus

THE "HOME STRETCH" to New York offered another aspect of the United States: as the guests of the Greyhound Bus Co. the 36 youngsters saw how the more average traveler moves on the ground.

With only a short, action-packed period to go until their flight back to their own countries immediately after the Herald Tribune Forum on March 5, the students were beginning to collect their impressions and to gather their experiences. They had met Americans and Americans had met Europeans. But, most important, in America they had met each other.

Languages to Be Feature Of Lynchburg Sessions

LYNCHBURG, Va.—Education and foreign languages are the featured fields in the Lynchburg College summer session program for 1949. Announcements of the summer school program, opening June 13, were made this week by Dr. Fred Helsabeck, dean of the college. The first term runs through July 15; the second term opens July 18 and closes August 18.

Education courses offered will include school hygiene; guidance, testing and evaluation; safety, first aid, life saving; children's literature; audio-visual education, recreational leadership; art and math for teachers; child and adolescent psychology; educational psychology and educational sociology.

French, German and Spanish will be offered in the language field. French and German will be offered as in the past, 12 semester hours of language in 10 weeks. Spanish will be offered in beginning and intermediate courses, but also offered will be third and fourth year courses in Spanish.

Nature study and science for teachers will be offered and a complete 10-hour course in organic chemistry. Math offerings include college algebra, plane geometry, non-Euclidean geometry, plane trigonometry and solid geometry.

In business administration are courses in introductory accounting and business law as well as a course in marketing. Principles and problems of economics and a course in world resources will be offered in the field of economics.

In addition to art for teachers the art department will have classes in drawing and painting.

American literature, freshman English and advanced grammar in the English field and history of Western civilization, history of the Near East, history of the Far East, history of the United States from 1896 to 1917 and from 1917 to the present will be taught.

Philosophy offerings will include problems of philosophy and history of democratic thought in America. A course in religion, introduction to the Bible, will also be taught.

A course in human geography will also be offered.

Dormitory accommodations will be available during the two terms of the summer session for both men and women students, Dr. Helsabeck announced.

'An Unholy Mess'

Packed Schools Seen As Threat to Morale

By H. C. Johnson

NEW YORK, Mar. 5 (AP).—"The Nation's educational house is on fire," says Dr. Louis A. Dublin, a vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

If the blaze isn't put out, and quickly, it may spread in time to the structure of our business and industrial system and may deal a stunning blow to national morale and morals, he believes.

The enormous population rise in the war and postwar years probably will overwhelm the already overcrowded grade schools, high schools and colleges and create what he calls "an unholy mess."

Millions of 'Em

METROPOLITAN says 3,650,000 babies were born in 1948; there were only a few more than two millions born in 1933. The birth rate was 18.3 per 1000 population in 1933; 25 last year. Births probably will dwindle this year, but it is likely there will be at least three millions a year for some years to come.

An avalanche of pupils already is swamping the schools. The Census Bureau says there were more than 25 millions in grade and high schools last year. This year there will be 800,000 more.

The total is expected to continue snowballing until 1958 when there will be 34,100,000 pupils. The grade school kids grow up and the high schools will have their big year in 1960 with an enrollment of over eight million.

Facilities Inadequate

FACILITIES for today's enrollment are grossly inadequate, critics say, and too little provision is being made for the future. Since 1940, when there were 27,400,000 pupils in the grade and high schools, little building has been done.

Buildings are too few and overcrowding is the rule rather than the exception, critics complain. Textbooks, school furniture and other equipment are lacking, and, worst of all, teachers are quitting in wholesale lots.

Remedy? Pay the teachers more money. Build more buildings. Acquire more recreation ground. Purchase more equipment. And do all this with an eye on the future when the school population will be 35 per cent higher.

But this costs money—taxpayers' money. The problem is considered primarily a local one, not Federal. To set the schools right, community governments would have to go to the taxpayers and ask for more money. And the outlay would be tremendous. In some communities it might double and treble taxes over a period of years.

Is it worth it?

Four Possibilities

THESE are what responsible authorities say will be the end results if nothing is done about current school conditions:

1. Delinquency will rise. Robbery, prostitution, any crime that doesn't require brains will flourish and grow.

2. The sum of the national knowledge will fall, because the children aren't getting a proper education.

3. The schools will turn out inept, downright incompetent youths. Business and industry will have to absorb these incompetents for lack of better. There will not be enough brains to go around in the top jobs. Then, down the ladder go the high standards of American business and industry.

4. How about Government? One observer said it takes intelligence to live in a democracy. Any fool can drift with the masses in a dictator state.

Superintendent Lists Rules for Little Red School

Merced, Calif. (U.P.).—A declaration of fundamental principles for the little red school house, model 1948, has been given to all teachers in the Merced Union Elementary School district by Superintendent W. Max Smith.

Just to make sure, Smith also listed a few common school house practices that he does not like.

The affirmative outline of Smith's educational philosophy includes these points:

1. School exist for children, not just to give jobs to teachers.

2. Good teachers are born, not made, but a born teacher can be made better.

3. It is almost impossible for a teacher to grade a pupil accurately and also for a principal or supervisor to judge a teacher.

4. Teachers should instruct by example but they have a right to a normal life in the community.

On the negative side, Smith told the teachers that he is against such practice as intense competition for grades; using report cards as a threat or reward; letting pupils "get by with less than their best," or using tests as an infallible measuring-stick of a pupils' ability.

Ohio State Degrees

Ohio State University granted 4974 regular degrees, 151 doctor of philosophy degrees and seven honorary degrees at four commencement exercises during the year ended December 31, 1948.

Fathers Club Donates Radio Control Room

Chambersburg, Pa., March 5.—The Wilson College Fathers Club has given the college a fully equipped radio control room which will be dedicated next Saturday.

Wilson broadcasts can now originate on campus and radio workshop members have opportunity for first-hand experience in program production. The workshop is the latest addition to the group of extra-curricular activities through which Wilson students may try out their interests and abilities in various career fields.

Donald R. Ernst, 1411 Locust rd. nw., Washington, D. C., is vice president of the Wilson Fathers Club.

Teachers Find Report Card Can Be Dangerous

By Leonard Leddington

Belvidere, N. J., Mar. 5 (AP).—Teachers here are learning what school children have known for years—report cards can be dangerous!

Youngsters with cards of the less-than-brilliant variety came to that conclusion as soon as the hairbrush treatment first was introduced by a displeased Papa.

Now 30 teachers in this Northern New Jersey area say the same thing, but with different reason. They are afraid the cards place false values on education.

"There's just no fair way of marking young students," says Miss Marcia A. Everett, a Warren County teacher who has been campaigning against the report card tradition.

"When children start measuring themselves on those arbitrary markings," Miss Everett said, "well, the slow learners—the ones who can't ever come out on top—develop dangerous defeatist attitudes."

Conference Plan

Several hundred students in six Warren County schools never have seen a report card. They are being educated under what Miss Everett calls the parent conference plan.

Instead of sending home report cards, the teachers send for parents for 15-minute conferences four times a year. The conference appointments take up a school afternoon or a special evening session.

There are no fixed standards of grades. Instead, the teachers keep a folder containing samples of each student's work and notes on his mental and physical development.

These are discussed with the parents at the periodic conferences, and, the teachers say, the whole picture of the child's development can be presented in proper proportion.

Miss Everett says this brings the parent directly into the teaching process and provides for 24-hour-a-day direction of the child's education. Where the teacher leaves off at school, the parent takes up at home.

The parents like it because they get a richer understanding of what education means and what the school is trying to do.

Agree on Aims

MOTHERS who used to object that their children were "wasting their school time" playing games and painting pictures come to understand the planned program.

As one surprised parent put it: "The teacher wants to do what I want to do—make nice people of my kids!"

The kids say they like it because they're called in for a pre-conference talk with the teachers and get a chance to pave the way for the arrival of their parents.

The only antidote under the old system was a pillow or similar padding stuffed where the hairbrush would take its toll. The new system, all sides agree, eliminates a major educational danger.

Fewer Brawls, Less Noise

Sports and Variety Shows Are Tops With the Barflies

TELEVISION, possibly the greatest innovation in saloon life since women were allowed in the place, has had a calming though not necessarily uplifting effect on barflies. Fewer fights. Less boisterousness. Hasn't increased drinking noticeably or decreased it either. But there's a funny thing. If the television sets disappeared suddenly, saloon business would drop sharply.

These are the opinions of Tom Galligan, a bartender. Saloon television is a different experience than home television and naturally there are different tastes.

The barflies like some sports (not all, though) and variety shows. They don't like movies or dramatic shows. Fact is, says Galligan, the drinkers like something they can watch or not watch. Dramas and movies demand sustained attention.

Hockey isn't at all successful, either. Too fast to follow. The kids like basketball, but the grownups only tolerate it. Too much work on the eyes. Everyone likes boxing and the Friday night fights always bring out a good crowd. (Of course, Friday is a pretty good bar night anyhow.)

There's a funny thing about fights, say Galligan. Television doesn't throw a hush over the bar except after a fight. Then, when the round-by-round decisions are announced, silence blankets the place. Most everyone's got a sidebet and, of course, this is important business.

The Louis-Walcott fight brought out the biggest crowds in saloon history. In one place, a woman fainted in the crush. Had to be carried out, says Galligan. Folks thought she'd been drinking too much. Fact is, she couldn't get to the bar to get a drink. Probably been all right if she had.

Berle Pulls Them

TELEVISION has changed the patronage around a little, not necessarily for the better. More wives in some places. More youngsters—the coke crowd—everywhere. In some spots a crowd of young kids, who look as if they never saw the inside of a saloon, troop in Tuesday nights to see Milton Berle—great favorite of all classes, by the way—and troop right out when it's over. One coke apiece is usually the limit for this crowd.

Antiliquor Course In Schools Upheld

Tallahassee, Fla., (U.P.).—The Governor of Florida thinks public schools should spend less time waging war on liquor and devote more hours to teaching youngsters how to get along with people.

Gov. Fuller Warren led a losing battle to cut out a special temperance program in Florida schools. He suggested, instead, courses in public relations and the art of handshaking.

"I believe in temperance as much as anybody, but I don't believe the taxpayers should be taxed for an agency to propagandize against liquor," teetotaler Warren declared.

The Florida chief executive, considered a master of oratory and hand-shaking, explained: "I don't care how much education you've got in your head, if you can't get along with your fellow man, your education is a drug on the market."

Members of his official cabinet voted down Warren's suggestion to cut off an annual $8100 State appropriation for a special anti-liquor program in the schools.

Whistle Stopping

Land of the Sky-Blue Water

As flying photographer for the U. S. Forest Service coasted over Lac La Croix, Minn., his camera looked down on one of the best sport fishing grounds for wall-eyed pike in the great north country. These narrows formerly were used for commercial fishing, with nets staked in the narrow channel. They have since been abandoned for such purposes

By Orval Hopkins

THE Minnesota lake country, of which we are using a picture today, is a land of deep silences, patient waters, immemorial forests and people who are nutty about fishing. You don't fish, you don't belong in Minnesota. I once heard about a World Series baseball hero who, flailing the patient waters one day, encountered a small boy. The nipper, a lad of deep silences, recognized the ballplayer at once and, diving into a commodious creel, came up with a stub of pencil and an old stuffed fish.

"Say, Mr. Feller," he said, offering the pencil stub, 'Autograph this ol' pike for me, will ya?"

ONE OF OUR GIRLS here on the fourth floor, a Miss Van Astorbilt, is just back from one of those cruises. "Can't remember when I've enjoyed a cruise more," she trilled. "But you know, you meet an awfully lot of the nouveau riche when you travel at the peak of the season." Better riche than never, I flashed, nettled. The lady did tell me in strictest confidence, however, and in answer to a question with a curve on it, that a single girl can do very well on a cruise if she—Right there we were interrupted by an old man selling canteloupes and I couldn't get her to swing on the curve again. She did tell me that her ship was the Holland American liner Nieuw Amsterdam and that she's a great ship.

BOAC (British Overseas Airways Corporation) has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to institute a round-the-world cooperative fare which would take into account the tariffs and customs of more than 1000 air routes. Standard fare would be $1700 for the mid-Pacific route and $1979.70 for the longer journey via Australia. Fares would include hotel accommodations at all connecting points, provided. Provided you grab the first available plane out, that is . . . After March 13 the Rock Island will make no more coach seat reservations on seven of its trains. The capacities of these trains, say R. I., "will be increased sufficiently to comfortably accommodate all normal requirements."

PAN AMERICAN World Airways says 300,000 Americans will travel to Europe this summer, that they will spend $725 apiece, exclusive of air or steamship fare, and that one-fifth of them will visit Belgium, "according to figures released here." Where the figures come from and who released them, PAA doesn't say, but it looks like the crystal ball department from here . . . National Trailways tomorrow begins operation of two through schedules daily between Raleigh, N. C., and Dallas, Texas. In other words you can now, Trailways says, travel by bus from Washington to Los Angeles with only two changes. I once traveled by bus from Eugene, Oreg., to San Francisco. But of course there were giants in those days.

PENNSYLVANIA is using kodachrome transparencies to take visitors at the Maryland Sportsmen's Show, now at the Armory, on an imaginary journey through the historical, industrial, agricultural and recreational regions of the Keystone State . . . Newell Grinnell, president of the American Society of Travel Agents, has urged President Truman to earmark some American shipping for the use of American students wishing to travel abroad. Grinnell says he is concerned lest "Army operation of U. S. transatlantic vessels may nullify the hopes of thousands of American students and teachers to visit Europe next summer."

IF ALL GOES WELL, Colonial Airlines on April 18 will end 19 years of continuous scheduled airline operation without an accident involving fatality to either passenger or crew member. Sigmund Janas, Colonial's president, many years ago coined a slogan for the company: "Safety is no accident." I don't like to waste good paper and ink complimenting people, but that ain't a bad slogan, Janas . . . St. Patrick's Day in Ireland

New York (U.P.).—Americans of Irish descent representing communities in many parts of the United States are organizing to fly to Dublin for a St. Patrick's Day celebration on the old sod, American Overseas Airlines announced.

Members of the party will leave New York March 11 in special planes, arriving in Dublin the next day. They will attend a round of civic functions and social events and will visit points of historical interest. On March 17, a banquet will be held at which Irish church, civic and political dignitaries will speak.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Knights of Columbus and the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick are participating, but the trip is open to all Irish-Americans.

Sheraton Buys Park Central

Sheraton Corp. of America last week acquired a controlling interest in the Park Central Hotel in New York City.

Built in 1927 at a cost of 14 million dollars, this hotel is one of the largest and newest hotels in the city. It is located in mid-Manhattan, covering almost an acre of land between 55th and 56th sts., 2 blocks west of 5th ave. and 3 blocks from Central Park. The name of the hotel will be changed to the Park Sheraton.

The Park Sheraton becomes the twenty-eighth and largest unit in the Sheraton chain. Sheraton Corp. acquired the Chicago Sheraton, a 42-story skyscraper hotel, in September of last year. The same year also saw the acquisition of the Sheraton-Biltmore in Providence and the Sheraton in St. Louis.

New Road

Banner Elk, N. C.—A good road has been graded to the top of Beech Mountain (altitude 5535 feet) here, making accessible to motorists one of the finest mountain views in the Blue Ridges. Heretofore, the view has been enjoyed only by those willing to hike up the trail.

Squirrel Hunting Favored

Charleston, W. Va. (U.P.).—If you go hunting in West Virginia, chances are that you will be going for squirrel. A survey by the conservation commission revealed that squirrel hunting is the favorite sport of most West Virginia hunters. Rabbits come second and deer third.

F. D. R. His Personal Letters, 1905-1928

'I RAISED A RIOT IN THE SENATE'

INSTALLMENT II

CAMPOBELLO ISLAND is at the entrance to Passamaquoddy Bay in New Brunswick, two miles from Eastport, Maine. James Roosevelt had purchased land on the island in 1883; three years later a house was completed, and the Roosevelts became permanent summer residents. Yet the possession of a summer home in Canada did not deter Sara Roosevelt from continuing her practice of spending occasional summers in Europe. Her trip in 1907 was responsible for the following correspondence.

Once again F.D.R. and A.E.R. took turns writing to the former's mother. Although frequent changes of authorship occur in the letters, it is usually clearly apparent from the contents which parts were written by F.D.R. and which entries were made by A.E.R., and only where the changes are obscure has the authorship been annotated. The letters are in diary form, a family habit of long standing, and it was a habit that F.D.R. practiced on his official trips abroad in later years.

AYER JUNCTION, MAINE
JULY 9, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

We are almost there now and this R.R. is without doubt conducive to a far rougher trip than the steamers ever thought of having. The Baby has behaved very well, except that she insisted on waking up at 4 a.m. and talking to Eleanor and Nurse for hours!

We have very cool weather—foggy at Campo I expect—and the only contretemps has been the loss of dear "Duffy" who missed connections during the night. I am telegraphing all over the place however and expect him to turn up on tonight's train, as he is labeled. Also two trunks have gone astray somewhere though I think the most important ones have come . . .

By the way I entirely forgot to get a berth for Kay for Thursday night but will do so by wire from Eastport. Tell him to ask for it in the name of David Kay.

I want to write a line to the steamer so must stop. Bon voyage dear Mummy—we shall miss you a very great deal. Eleanor and Anna join me in ever so much love and kisses.

Ever your devoted son

F.D.R.

PURCHASED in Scotland on the honeymoon trip, "Duffy" was the first of many Scotch terriers owned by F.D.R. David Kay was Sara Roosevelt's butler.

CAMPOBELLO
JULY 11, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

Franklin sent off a line this morning so I am beginning my letter this evening. Everything is quite settled now, the baby's crib arranged very nicely, the house grandly painted and your ceiling looking very nice.

F. and I went off at ten this morning and sailed up Great South Bay, had lunch and returned about three. We found a telegram from Kay saying you had sailed comfortably and we have been thinking of you constantly and wondering who you have found on board. We took nurse and baby to Herring Cove and just before starting we had a visit from Mrs. Sturgis, Susan and young Master Clymer who is very big for seventeen months but doesn't look as healthy as Anna . . .

At his desk in Washington, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy

Friday morning—F. and the baby are playing on the floor and in a few minutes she is going to sleep in the dining room as it is raining. F. is going to meet Kay but as it is wet I am going to call on the Cochran's, Sturgis' and Hoppin! (I forgot the last lady had to be singular!)

July 13th. Kay arrived safely with Toutou yesterday and we asked him all kinds of questions about you. We are so sorry the passenger list is so uninteresting and do hope someone nice turned up. Toutou misses you very much and looks for you everywhere. The baby knew his bark and called him before he got into the house! F. and I fished yesterday afternoon and caught twelve flounders, three of which we sent Sarah H. but Edgar couldn't even find a maid to leave them with so I don't suppose she knows who sent them! . . .

We are reading the "Indiscreet Letters" in the evening and find them most interesting, but aren't the details gruesome? I hope your copy reached you . . .

July 14th . . . F. and I had a good sail yesterday afternoon but it was quite rough so the baby did not go. She was at the pier to meet us on our return and we are going to photograph her costume, for you can't imagine a much funnier sight, particularly when F. carries her up the hill on his back with two short legs sticking straight out on either side of his head!

This morning we are taking care of the baby and after Katherine gets home from church we are going to take Anna over to meet the little Hubbard baby. They still have a trained nurse for her so she rarely leaves the piazza except to go in the launch.

Sunday evening. The Hubbard baby is lovely, dark, but lovely red cheeks and so happy and not at all afraid. Anna thought she was to be patted like Duff, only harder, and we were obliged to restrain her fond embraces! . . .

We had a lovely sail this afternoon and Anna seemed to enjoy it as much as anyone and behaved beautifully though we were out till nearly six. Franklin wants to finish so goodbye, dearest . . .

In reading over the foregoing manuscript I realize that Eleanor has told you about everything and must have a strong wrist to escape the horror of writer's cramp. The only thing she hasn't told you is that she is well and doesn't seem unhappy. I am ditto as to health and can vouch for the state of my feelings. The servants seem contented with their surroundings—the Nurse enthusiastically so—and Delia's charms seem already to have captivated Edgar, Mr. Babcock, the crew and last but by no means least that naughty naughty Scotch serving gentleman of yours.

By the way, William is again the efficient engineer steward and general third wheel of the Half Moon, and in place of Charley, we have another Blue-Nose from Shag Harbor who rejoices in the Sir Walter Scott name of Desmond Nickerson and we don't know whether to call him Desmond, Nick or Mr. Nickerson.

I have gulped down three novels since our arrival, besides a good deal of more nutritious food in the shape of Biographies suited to the salt air. Our attempts to see [name deleted] have failed (here the Doxology should be sung), tho' we caught Mr. [name deleted] coming away from her house at 10 yesterday morning. It looked badly—especially as she was still in bed (here should be sung Hymn 142—Oh come all ye faithful). In case we don't see [name deleted] all summer Hymn 684 should be sung—(Peace, perfect Peace).

My box of wines has just arrived at Eastport so tomorrow I go to meet them and my epistles may be—incoherent—more so than this one—after this. The Baby is too sweet and makes us shriek with laughter when she puts her whole hand into my cup of tea. If I don't stop I will go broke paying the postage.

Loads of love from us all.

Ever your affec. son

"MRS. STURGIS" was the wife of Dr. Russell Sturgis of Boston, a near-neighbor of the Roosevelts at Campobello. "Susan," his daughter, was the wife of George Clymer and mother of "young Master Clymer." Mr. and Mrs. Travis Cochran from Philadelphia were regular summer residents at Campobello. Sarah Weeks Hoppin was the daughter of F.D.R.'s cousin, Alice Delano Weekes. "Toutou" was a Spitz owned by F.D.R.'s mother. "Edgar" was Edgar McGowan, a native of Campobello hired by the Roosevelts as a general handyman. Gorham Hubbard, a summer resident of the island, was president of the Golf Club. "Katherine" refers to his daughter, who at this time was acting as mother to her baby sister and to her younger brother, Gorham Hubbard, jr. "Nellie" had been A.E.R.'s nurse and was at this time Sara Roosevelt's maid. "Delia" was the cook, while Mr. Babcock was the local butcher. The

CAMPOBELLO
JULY 16, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

Since writing you on Sunday the fog has been thick outside but we have managed to have clear weather inside during the daytime. Yesterday we went up to St. Andrews with Gorham, Katherine, G. Jr. and Mr. Haven in the launch, lunched at the hotel, bought a Wedgwood clock and got back here at 4:30. It made a very nice trip and though slightly rough in Passamaquoddy Bay for a few minutes E. did not show the least paleness of cheek or tendency to edge towards the rail! Now we are off to Eastport to get several things.

Wednesday— . . . This morning I worked on the tennis court from 9:30 to 1, and we ought to have a fairly good court when we get through with the gravel sand and clay. In the afternoon we had another good sail taking the baby and [name deleted] and this ought to last the latter for some time; it will us.

I forgot to say that yesterday afternoon we took the baby and went all the way to Pembroke and back, a total of about twenty-three miles in two hours and a half! Now the fog has closed in again for the night.

Thursday—I have just returned from Eastport whither I rowed with the Captain. It is dead calm and this afternoon E. and I are going to catch flounders from the float. E. will finish this sheet and send it to catch the Saturday steamer.

F. doesn't say I see that [name deleted] has been very kind and invited us to drive down to the pool at 4:30 to weigh the baby which we are going to do. Anna is just beginning to be a little tanned but the sailing is fine for her and she never wakes till seven in the morning! F. looks very well. He is going deep sea fishing to-morrow A.M. with Mr. Hubbard and Mr. Haven and I think he is getting full of health. We are waiting anxiously for your first cable and letter.

Much love from us both.

Anna has just given F. a hug and said Gaga.

Devotedly
Eleanor

APPLETON CLARK, a lawyer, was married to John Aspinwall Roosevelt's eldest daughter, Grace Walton Roosevelt. Parkman ("Parky") B. Haven was a close friend of Gorham Hubbard's from Boston.

CAMPOBELLO
JULY 19, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

It is a beautiful day, the water looks like glass this side and for little Gorham's sake I hope it is the same outside. They (Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Haven, Franklin and Gorham) left at 8 A.M. and hope to return for luncheon laden with fish! . . .

Saturday A.M. F. got home about 2:30 yesterday, very hot for the thermometer was 81 on the piazza and they didn't have wonderful fishing, but we have 3 cod which is all we can well use . . .

Sunday morning—I have just put Anna in her carriage to go to sleep but she is talking loudly to herself and making every effort to free her legs and arms . . . Miss Norris and the three boys came to supper [last night] after which we indulged in a childish game of "hearts"! We went to bed feeling that we could rival Bar Harbor for gaiety and today we are settling down to quiet again . . .

I have quite forgotten to tell you about Franklin's dream two nights ago and I know you will be amused for it was so characteristic that I had to laugh when I got over being scared! He sleeps or rather slept until this night episode occurred on the side near the windows and suddenly leaped up, turned over a chair and started to open the shutters! I grabbed his pyjama tails and asked what he wanted and received this surprising answer: "I must get it, it is very rare, the only one and a most precious book." After some persuasion he returned to bed, very angry with me and the next morning he knew nothing about it! Now I sleep on the window side as the middle of the room seems a better place to hunt for rare and precious volumes! . . .

En route to Campobello in 1907— "Dearest Mama, we are almost there now . . . the baby (Anna) has behaved very well"

Monday morning. Yesterday afternoon we went for a sail but it looked as though a bad storm were coming up so we came home early. We took supper with [name deleted] much against F.'s will but I could not think of an excuse and she heaped coals of fire on our heads by giving us a very delicious meal! Much love dear from Anna and me. Franklin is going to end up so he will send his own.

Monday morning—Another boat has just come in and it may be some more friends to add to our gaiety, but we don't know yet.

The grocer man is here so this must go. Loads of love from us both. We should get a letter from you next Sunday or Monday.

Ever your devoted
F. D. R.

"MISS NORRIS" was either Alice or Edith Norris, nieces of Mrs. Travis Cochran, who used to spend their summers with the Cochran family. A.E.R. recalls that F.D.R.'s inclination to have dreams like the one described only existed while he was young, and that in later years none ever occurred.

CAMPOBELLO
AUGUST 5, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

Yours from London—two delightful letters arrived today . . .

Yesterday was one of the vilest days here I have ever known. Fog and rain from the East till three o'clock when the wind ceased, and the rain came back on us with redoubled fury in a hurricane from the Northwest. We stayed in the house all day and occupied ourselves most usefully and agreeably. George Clymer came over and we worked over stamps—I having sent to Hyde Park for my albums—for a couple of hours. In the evening a conversation on the subject of Hall's education and general knowledge resulted in a sort of questions and answers class in geography and general history led by me—and Eleanor and I were rather overcome at finding (we think F. D. R. would be poor in grammar)! Cousin Susie about the foot of the class in geography and modern history, tho' (to be Irish), a little more up to date in ancient affairs.

Wednesday, Aug. 7th . . . I see Franklin has omitted to chronicle the exciting fact that Anna can walk from one person to another. She began on Sunday going from him to Cousin Susie and does better all the time but she loves it so that she really runs instead of walking which is the cause of many tumbles and subsequent tears!

Ever so much love from us all.

Devotedly
Eleanor.

IN ADDITION to inserting the note about F.D.R.'s grammatical ability, A.E.R. made the August 7th entry in this letter. "Cousin Susie" was also A.E.R.'s godmother; the former Susan Livingston Ludlow, she was married to Henry Parish.

CAMPOBELLO
SEPTEMBER 6, 1907

DEAREST MAMA,

This will be our last epistle to you, unless I succeed in catching you at Queenstown by a line on the outgoing White Star boat. Just think—when you get back in less than three weeks I shall be a full-fledged office boy seeking my first afternoon off to go to a wedding.

The invitations have just come and seem to be correct in every way! The special train leaves N. Y. at 9:35 a.m. and the wedding is set for 12:30. Eleanor has a letter from Aunt Jennie in which she says she hopes and trusts that she will do all that is right on the day of the ceremony. What she thinks she may or might do I don't know—but the remark sounds either like a bad man from the West or an intended suicide. If she faints I shall pray that it be not into my arms! . . .

Today is the fourth day of fog—but the back of the storm is broken and it is going to clear up. Yesterday we did very little out of doors, but were busy and contented in the house. Today we have. We drove the baby down to the Pool and found she had gained ½ pound more—25½ in all—and a new tooth is through today, making the second large one, whatever they are called.

We, or rather I, am paying every bill I can, so you won't find much to do in that line when you get back.

Saturday 7th—Last night we supped with dear [name deleted] and had a most exciting evening, for which we were secretly prepared. At about nine a horrible crash was heard on the long piazza, much exciting the household. Then five minutes later another awful crash from the kitchen, followed by piercing screams from the maids. We rushed out to find them almost in hysterics and—not a sign of anything or anyone, except a large croquet ball on the floor and a lot of cakes gone from the kitchen table. [name deleted] took it quite well but had Gough's boy to sleep in the house. Perhaps the younger society of the cottages might know something about it—but remember please that this hint is to go no further!

This morning I went to Eastport, E. and Miss S. going also for the sail, and sent sundry express packages and got money to go home with.

F. seems to have told all there is to tell so I will only add love from us all. Devotedly. ELEANOR.

P. S. We have a number of amusing kodaks but I don't send them for fear they should miss you. E.R.

"AUNT JENNIE" was the wife of F.D.R.'s maternal uncle, Warren Delano III. The "wedding" refers to the marriage of their daughter, Ellen Delano, to Frederick B. Adams. "Gough's boy" was William Gough's son, Russell, a native of Campobello and contemporary and close friend of F.D.R. "Miss S." was Blanche Spring, A.E.R.'s trained nurse during her pregnancies.

After writing all but the last paragraph of this letter, F.D.R. did not take pen to write a member of his family for quite a while. F.D.R.'s work during the winter of 1907-1908 was precisely as he predicted in this last letter from Campobello: "a full-fledged office boy." He was assigned the usual routine jobs of a young lawyer, ranging from actual case work to legal research to running errands. Yet this brief, uneventful period of F.D.R.'s eventful career was perhaps far more significant than it appears to be on the surface. The three years spent with Carter, Ledyard and Milburn constituted F.D.R.'s first immediate and real contact with the world that existed beyond Hyde Park, Campobello, Cambridge, and 65th Street. In view of the social and political philosophy he evolved in later years, this first contact cannot be regarded lightly, refined and negligible as it may have been.

AFTER 1910 FDR is far more concerned with the national stage and the world scene, but always secondarily to his interest in the same routine family matters that account for the unity of all families. His personal letters clearly reveal that politics for FDR was a business, not a way of life, and in this sense the transition from the letters of 1908 to those of 1911 is not as significant as the official record would seem to indicate. There actually was no transition. Law work continued as usual, except that FDR's proficiency as a lawyer steadily improved and he began to win the respect of his firm as a specialist in Admiralty law. In 1909 another son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., entered the Roosevelt household, only to die of influenza eight months later, but the family again numbered five 10 months after this tragedy, when Elliott Roosevelt (named after AΣR's father) was born on September 23, 1910. In addition to Elliott, the other children were Anna and James.

The Democratic nomination for State Senator from New York Twenty-sixth Senatorial District (comprising Dutchess, Putnam, and Columbia Counties) was considered political suicide in 1910. Republicans had held the post for 32 years, the last Democratic Senator having been FDR's Hyde Park neighbor, Thomas Jefferson Newbold, who himself had been preceded by 28 years of Republican occupation. Even the apparent fact that 1910 was to be a Democratic year could not induce Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler to relinquish his Assembly seat and accept the Democratic nomination for Senator from the twenty-sixth. It was an honor that only an inexperienced politician, someone who had nothing to lose and everything to gain, would have been willing to accept. The Democratic leaders of the district, particularly Mayor John K. Sague of Poughkeepsie, found such a person in FDR—a candidate, moreover, who would pay for his own campaign, and who was blessed with a surname that at this time completely dominated America's political scene.

FDR was elected to the State Senate on November 8, 1910.

DEAREST—Your telegram came about an hour ago, and I was thankful to get it as I was getting very worried. I had expected one from Portland, but am glad you all got there all right. I am just this minute dressed—just three days since I came down and feel a good deal like a rag and have lost nearly 10 pounds. Throat still a bit swollen and right ear hurts occasionally, but Dr. thinks there is no more danger there. I now hope to get away on Tuesday, reaching Camp Wednesday. I can't tell you how I miss you and Mama does not in the least make up. I do hope you have found things in a semblance of order, and that the chicks are all right. I am sure they are delighted at being there again. The Campo is all I need now and I will surely be up.

Loads of love and kisses.

Ever your devoted,
F.

THE winter of 1911-12 contained a significent experience for F.D.R.: his first meeting with Woodrow Wilson. It was only natural that the New Jersey Governor and the New York State Senator should meet; both had gained varying measures of national recognition for their support of progressive legislation during the preceding year, and the advance of the progressive movement had reached a point where organization of its leaders was both possible and necessary.

Unfortunately, F.D.R.'s personal correspondence does not include a record of his first meeting with Wilson, but his subsequent efforts toward the creation of a New York delegation for Wilson at the 1912 convention indicate that he was highly impressed by the occasion.

F.D.R. took advantage of a legislative recess and went on a prolonged trip to Jamaica and Panama. His companions were his brother-in-law, Hall, and J. Mayhew Wainwright, then a member of the State Senate from Westchester. A.E.R., not wishing to be away from her children for a long time and being fearful of sea travel, did not make the trip, but met F.D.R. at New Orleans and journeyed with him to New Mexico for a visit with Isabella and Robert Ferguson. It was not F.D.R.'s first visit to the Caribbean, his mother having taken him on a cruise to Puerto Rico and Cuba in 1904 in an effort to dissuade him of his engagement to A.E.R.

BETWEEN CUBA AND JAMAICA
APRIL 17, 1912

DEAREST MAMA—

I have written about sixteen pages to Eleanor and she will doubtless read it to you. All can be said in a nutshell: weather perfect, sea like the much overworked mill pond, boat roomy and cool, food and all appointments excellent . . .

Tomorrow we reach Kingston early and I am planning to engage a motor to take us to Spanish Town, Rio Cobre, Bog Walk and New Castle, the encampment up in the hills. In this way I think we can see it all in one day for tomorrow evening we leave for Colon . . .

The passengers are not an inspiring lot, but there (are) several young engineers and others bound for the West Coast of So. America. Also a young clergyman named Scott, an assistant at St. George's and the right kind of a cleric.

We all go about in our shirts, no coats except at meals, but trousers of course. The few women are also still entirely covered, but we anticipate what greater heat will bring forth.

Loads of love. I will write you from Panama, and you should get it May 1st.

Ever your affectionate son

Hall is I think having a very good time. Mayhew Wainwright is one of the most delightful travelling companions I have known and he is always in good spirits and ready to do things.

ANCON, CANAL ZONE
APRIL 22, 1912

DEAREST MAMA—

I find a six-day boat leaves tomorrow, so I will send off a few lines to tell of the progress of the trip. Eleanor will have left for New Orleans before this reaches you.

I sent an awkward scrawl on our arrival in Colon Saturday; please forgive the script, but I had stuck my right thumb into an electric fan just before reaching Kingston. It is now healed and I do not expect to lose the nail.

The day in Kingston last Thursday was, as usual there, very hot and dusty, but we took a motor on arrival at eight, ran out to Spanish Town, saw the fascinating old church, with the old register containing our names under date of Feb. 25th, 1904! We also went over the old Governor's House which you and I did not do. It was well worth it, showing the pomp and circumstance in which the old Royal Governors lived. Thence we motored on to Rio Cobre and Bog Walk and I must confess that I had quite forgotten how very wonderful that drive is . . .

We got back to the Myrtle Bank Hotel (new of course, as the old one went down in the earthquake and cost several lives) just in time (to) make several purchases of hats, clothes, etc. . . .

The trip to Colon was hotter and uneventful, except for a traveling American circus on board bound for the Zone and the West Coast of South America.

Colon came in sight at noon Saturday, two hours ahead of time and we had time to drive around the town of Colon proper (under Panama control) and the adjoining Cristobal (under our control and the true northern terminal of the Canal). The American quarters were a revelation, spotless and comfortable, yet with an air of absolute efficiency . . . The ice cream factory alone is the largest in the world!

The observation parlor car on the rear of the train gave us splendid glimpses of the Canal as we came across, reaching Panama at 6:50 just at dark . . .

On our way over we met a Mr. Wait, who is on the harbor work at Colon and had run across for a spree here. We promptly dined together, and later he took us all over the city, so that by 2 a. m. we had been introduced to all the tricks of the trade. It is a most interesting place, every tongue and nationality, but clean and fairly orderly—a very different Panama than under the French . . .

Yesterday morning we drove out to Balboa, the Pacific terminus of the Canal and site of the future docks and harbor. Tremendous operations now in progress, thence through the wonderful hospital grounds on the hill back of the hotel.

At four we took the train back to Culebra, the location of the Great Cut and home of the Administration. Commissioner Rousseau was waiting to meet us and we called on Goethals and had a nice long talk. We all dined with Mr. and Mrs. Rousseau, had a delightful evening and took the train back at nine. Mrs. Rousseau was the daughter of Herbert Squires, our first minister here and a very intimate friend of Wainright's. In fact the latter is the executor of Mr. Squires and Trustee for his children, so we were all received with open arms.

This morning we left at 6:30 by train back to Culebra (½ hour). Rousseau met us with an observation engine and took us for two hours through the length of the great Cut, nearly nine miles. We ran over tracks and switches among the blasts and drills and steam shovels and dump trains, the whole trip personally conducted by Commissioner Rousseau, who, I take it, is probably more the right-hand man of Goethals than anybody else . . .

Most of the afternoon we spent inspecting the great locks of Pedro Miguel (called here Peter McGill) and Miraflores, the latter a double flight of locks. These locks raise the vessels 85 feet to the level of the cut.

I can't begin to describe it and have become so enthusiastic that if I didn't stop I would write all night. The two things that impress the most are the Culebra cut, because of the colossal hole made in the ground, and the locks because of the engineering problems and size. Imagine an intricate concrete structure nearly a mile long and three or four hundred feet wide, with double gates of steel weighing 700 tons apiece!

Goethals said in his quiet way last night: "We like to have Americans come down, because they all say it makes them better Americans" . . .

Your very welcome cable dated Friday was delivered this (Monday) evening and I promptly answered. I was beginning to get anxious.

The Titanic tragedy is too horrible. We know practically no details, only scraps here and there. I am counting on your saving all the papers for every day I am away up to April 30th when we reach New Orleans.

I am so glad Eleanor was able to move the chicks down today. It will give her time to get well settled. Give them all a great many kisses and hugs from Father. I will send a line by Thursday's direct boat to N. Y. but you will hardly get it before another line from N. Orleans.

I only wish you could see this wonder of the world, greater than the Tower of Babel or the Pyramids.

Your affectionate son

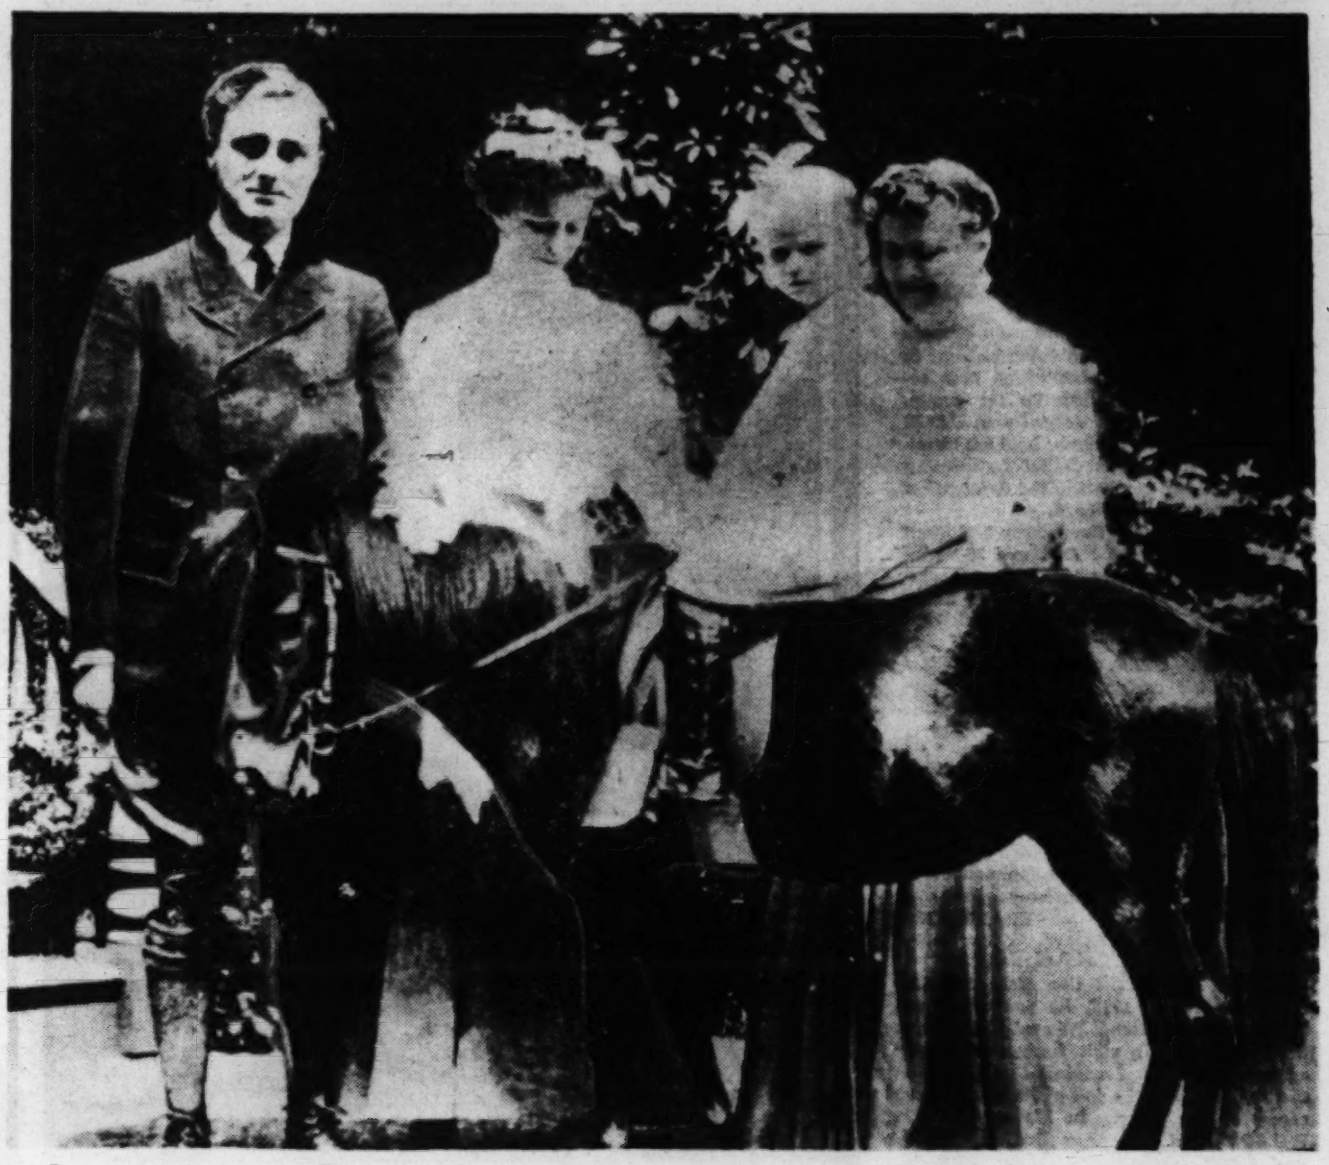
By the way we sail on the "Abangarez"—not the "Parismina."



". . . Roosevelt on her pony, with her father, mother and grandmother

THE year that followed F.D.R.'s return from Panama was a momentous one for the Roosevelt family. Throughout the world a new world was making. In the Balkans tension was mounting beyond the sphere of diplomacy.

In the United States the national political scene reduced the impending war in Europe to a matter of secondary importance. The growth of great enterprises in the two preceding decades had given rise to innumerable economic and social problems that 15 years of Republican leadership had failed to solve. The country clamored for a change. In June, 1912, the Republicans met in Chicago, disregarded the demand for change, and renominated William Howard Taft. Theodore Roosevelt, upset by the trends that followed his departure from the White House in 1908, broke from the Republican Party. The Progressive Party, known as the "Bull Moose," convened on August 5th and nominated T.R. by acclamation.

However, the appeal for change was mainly directed at the Democratic Party.

F.D.R. had gone to Baltimore several weeks before the convention opened, as an advance guard for the Wilson movement. He took A.E.R. with him and they rented a house with several other couples. However, as noted in THIS IS MY STORY, A.E.R. soon "decided my husband would hardly miss my company, as I rarely laid eyes on him, and the children should go to Campobello, so I went home and took them up there and waited to hear the result." Almost oblivious of his wife's departure, F.D.R. was all over the city attempting to line up support for Wilson.

There can be no doubt that F.D.R.'s activities at the Baltimore Convention had two important consequences for him. It meant his graduation from the party's State organization and his entrance into politics on a national scale; henceforth, he was recognized everywhere as one of the party's key men in New York. Secondly, it was at this convention that he first met (and impressed) Josephus Daniels, who subsequently became Wilson's Secretary of the Navy and F.D.R.'s "chief."

On the other hand, at the time that he sent the following telegram, the progressive movement's convention victory meant far more to F.D.R. than any advantageous connections he may have made in Baltimore.

F.D.R.'S "vague" plans soon became those of regaining his seat in the State Senate, a task which first required his renomination by the party. And, admirable as his record was, F.D.R. could not stand on it alone; both his nomination and election necessitated stumping the district and combating the defamation of his progressive record.

The Empire State Democracy had been organized July 17 by F.D.R. and 70 members of the Democratic Party's progressive element. Its purpose was to carry on Wilson's campaign in New York and to oppose Tammany domination of the State ticket. F.D.R. spent the next few weeks on his campaign for the nomination, and on August 24th he wired A.E.R. the results of his efforts.

F.D.R. never finished his second term in the State Senate. Early in March, 1913, he journeyed to Washington to attend Wilson's inguguration. During his visit he renewed his acquaintance with Josephus Daniels, who then offered him the job of Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In his book, THE WILSON ERA, Josephus Daniels recalls that F.D.R. accepted the offer without hesitating for a second. The United States Navy, which formerly had been one of F.D.R.'s favorite hobbies, thus became his major occupation.

IN ADDITION to his required presence in Albany during the summer months of 1911, FDR also had to spend some time in Dutchess County attending to the needs and complaints of his constituents; thus his letters constantly refer to travel plans for moving back and forth between Albany, Hyde Park and Campobello.

DEAREST LAMB—

Here I am, back from Albany at 1:30 and was delighted to get your telegram from Boston and to hear that Maude and the children go to you on Monday. It will be so nice for you and I hope they will stay till after I get up.

Yesterday I got to the Senate just in time for the debate on the race track gambling bill and I am glad to say we finally defeated it, 22 to 20, not getting thro' until 8 p. m. I had a simple dinner at the Fort Orange Club and was in bed at 11 feeling none the worse for the day. This morning I did a lot of correspondence and attended the ten minute session, catching the 12 m. train to Poughkeepsie where Mama met me. I feel really much stronger and more like myself. They expect to adjourn next week and talk about Wednesday or Thursday, but I personally look for Friday or Saturday and I very much fear they will make the asinine mistake of not passing the Direct Primary Bill. It will be a hectic week—all night sessions, etc., but I will take all the care of myself possible.

Loads of love to the chicks.

Ever your devoted

F.

I will go to the Dr. tomorrow morning, and also the barber.

"MAUDE" refers to A.E.R.'s maternal aunt, Maude Livington Hall, who was spending the summer at Campobello with her children, Nancy and Lawrence, Jr. The "race track gambling bill" was a Tammany reaction to the Agnew-Hart law of 1908 and 1910. Albany's Fort Orange Club catered particularly to the "country-gentleman" members of the Legislature; F.D.R. was a member of the club and used to spend his off-hours there when the family was away.

F. D. R. and Josephus Daniels standing on the balcony of the old War and Navy Building gazing over at the White House. In later years Josephus Daniels used to tell the story that he was teasing Franklin Roosevelt at the time that the picture was taken and that he had just said, "I suppose you think you will be the next Roosevelt after T. R. to occupy that house?"

ALBANY, N. Y.
JULY 18, 1911

DEAREST BABBY—

Here I am back again in Albany for what I hope is the final week. I raised a riot this a. m. in the Senate when the Governor's message in favor of direct primaries was read by moving to instruct the Judiciary Committee to report a bill conforming with the message. It upset the plans of the organization and precipitated a 3-hour angry debate, and although beaten the motion has served to wake people up about Direct Nominations and may help to give us a good law, though we have only three days more.

I am feeling stronger and had my sinuses washed out yesterday for the last time. Dr. Dobson wants to poke the tonsils once more before I go away, so I will have to go to Poughkeepsie once for a very short time. Also I have to spend one day in New York to order my western things. So if we don't adjourn till Saturday I couldn't leave till Monday, getting to Campo Tuesday a. m. What do you hear from L. P. Marvin? and Hooker?

I can't imagine what has happened to Hall's and my sleeping bags. Have you looked on the Half Moon?

A call of the house is ordered.

Ever your devoted

F.

LANGDON P. MARTIN and Henry S. Hooker were associated with F.D.R. at Carter, Ledyard & Milburn; in 1911 the three of them formed a law firm of their own, Marvin, Hooker & Roosevelt, with F.D.R. being a more-or-less inactive partner because of his legislative duties.

DEAREST MAMA—

I have just received your dear letter of last night, and this may catch you in N. Y. before you get away. I got here all right last night and we sat until 11:30 p. m.

Today I dropped a bomb in the Senate by a motion in favor of immediate action on Direct Primaries. It provoked a heated 3-hour discussion and I was called some choice names, but it has had a good effect and may hasten matters. But on the other hand it may prolong the session thro' our attempt to give the State an honest bill.

It is now 6 p. m. and we shall probably sit here until midnight. I am going to send out for a glass of milk soon.

Give my love to Aunt Doe and goodbye. I'm locked in and will send this out by page.

Loads of love. You can count on my getting to Campo at the earliest possible moment.

DEAREST BABS—

Mama says "Tell E. I forgot to write her I will send the milk down the week she is in N. Y.!"

I got back here last night at seven. On Friday, Jeff and Julia who were spending Sunday at the Osborn's took me down with them in their new FIAT, arriving just in time for dinner. We had a quiet evening, running up to the H. F. Osborn's for a few minutes, where I saw the Sangers. Yesterday at nine Mr. Osborn and I motored over to Carmel, a trip of nearly two hours. We saw numbers of political friends but left again at noon, as we suspected some kind of a deal in the Convention and didn't want to get mixed up in it in any way . . .

At last I have a letter from you! The others must have gone to Albany and New York. I know you will rather enjoy this quiet week. I still hope to get off Friday and reach Campo Saturday a. m.

Loads of love to you, dearest, and kiss the chicks. It is horrid here without you.

THE FIAT Automobile Company of Turin, Italy, opened its first U. S. factory at Poughkeepie in 1911, and Jefferson and Julia Newbold's "new FIAT" (35 horsepower) was one of the first of its kind to be operated in this country; F.D.R. later purchased a secondhand one for himself from W. Forbes Morgan. A cousin of William Church Osborn, Henry Fairfield Osborn was an internationally known paleontologist. "The Sangers" refers to Henry F. Osborn's daughter, Virginia, and her husband Ralph Sanger, a Harvard graduate and New York stockbroker.

Except for some difficulties involved in the announcement of his support of woman suffrage, the half-year interval between this letter and the next was a relatively quiet one for F.D.R. and his family.

WHILE FDR returned to Albany to close his affairs in the Legislature, Wilson approved his appointment and the Senate quickly confirmed it. Several weeks later, on his eighth wedding anniversary, FDR took the oath of his new office and hastened to inform his mother of the occasion.

I am baptized, confirmed, sworn in, vaccinated—and somewhat at sea! For over an hour I have been signing papers which had to be accepted on faith—but I hope luck will keep me out of jail.

All well, but I will have to work like a new turbine to master this job—but it will be done even if it takes all summer.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

AS this letter is one of the very few in his personal correspondence that bears F.D.R.'s full name, it would seem that in signing the papers left by his predecessor the full signature had become an unconscious habit. Sara Roosevelt answered this letter on March 18, 1913, and also had some comments to make about his signature: "My dearest Franklin—You can't imagine the happiness you gave me by writing to me yesterday. I just KNEW it was a VERY big job, and everything so new that it will take time to fit INTO it. Try not to write your signature too small, as it gets a cramped look and is not distinct. So many public men have such awful signatures, and so unreadable . . ."

DEAREST BABBIE

Mr. Daniels is away and will be tomorrow also, so I am Acting Secretary and up to my ears. I must have signed three or four hundred papers today and am beginning to catch on.

Monday evening I dined with Ned Bell and yesterday lunched with Charley McCawley and his wife and Uncle Will and Major Leonard! Last night I dined with Nick and Alice and Miss Elkins was there. We went on to "The Daughter of Heaven," Pierre Loti's play, and went back for eggs afterwards. Today I lunched with Uncle

Will and tonight gave a dinner for Helen and Lathrop! Going some!

It is now six and I go to visit Senator Gore. Loads of love. No letter from you today, but I may find one at the hotel.

Your devoted

F.

AT the time this letter was written Colonel Charles L. McCawley was second in command of the Marine Quartermaster Corps. "Uncle Will" refers to William Sheffield Cowles, the husband of A.E.R.'s aunt, Anna Roosevelt; formerly a rear admiral and naval attache to the American Embassy in London, he had retired from the Navy in 1908. Major Henry Leonard was a colorful figure in Washington law circles.

F.D.R.'s dinner with Nicholas and Alice Longworth might almost be considered part of his official introduction to his new job. Theodore Roosevelt's celebrated daughter was a leading figure in Washington society from the time of her father's residence in the White House through her husband's thirteen terms in the House of Representatives.

Lathrop Brown had married Helen Hooper in 1911, and moved to Washington two years later when he was elected to Congress from New York's First District.

Blinded in childhood by a prank of his playmates, Thomas Pryor Gore, a Democrat from Oklahoma, served in the Senate from 1907 to 1921, and again from 1931 to 1937. F.D.R. had to visit him regarding the politics of naval appointments.

I'm quite cured and not in the least salivated (which by the way means that your teeth drop out and you foam at the mouth), and now after a very busy day I'm off at 4 p. m. to play golf. Tomorrow also I am to golf so you will see what very good care I'm taking of myself. So far I have maintained my diet of milk toast, rice and hot milk, but digestion is restored. Tonight I am dining with Capt. Rogers to meet the British Commission of Naval officers and tomorrow I am giving them a luncheon at the Army and Navy Club!

"QUITE cured" refers to F.D.R.'s temporary stomach ailment.

During his seven years in the Navy Department, F.D.R. played golf almost every time he could spare several hours away from the office. The frequent allusions to his favorite sport are noteworthy in that "golf" was the one word F.D.R. consciously dropped from his vocabulary after he was stricken by infantile paralysis. "Capt. Rogers" is probably a misspelt reference to Thomas S. Rodgers, at this time Director of Naval Intelligence.

U. S. S. "DOLPHIN"
OCTOBER 26, 1913

DEAREST BABS—

We are nearing Washington on our return from a very delightful trip. The party includes Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, 1st Assistant Sec'y of State Osborne, Assistant Sec'y of War Breckenridge, Assistant Attorney General Graham, U. S. Treasurer Burke, Commissioner of Corporations Davies, Mr. John Sidney Webb, Louis Howe and mineself. In spite of the downpour Friday night it was not rough in Chesapeake Bay and we reached Hampton Roads at 8:30 Saturday a. m. Admirals Badger, Winslow, Beatty, and Boush came on board, and also Major ——— from Fort Monroe to call on Breckenridge. At ten I began the farewell visits to the flagships, going aboard the Wyoming, Arkansas, Connecticut and Rhode Island, the latter the flagship of the 2nd Division of 4 ships which leaves for Mexico next Wednesday.

On returning to the Dolphin at 12:30 we started out ahead of the fleet and anchored just inside the Capes. Soon the nine battleships bound for the Mediterranean came along, the three colliers and the supply ship having gone out earlier. The big gray fellows were magnificent as they went past, with all hands at the rail, and I only wish a hundred thousand people could have seen them. The Connecticut had trouble—only one engine working—but it was evidently not serious as she kept going.

We returned at once to Old Point, went ashore and inspected the coast defense guns and mortars and attended the war game at the Artillery School. Then back to the Dolphin for a very good dinner. Last night we lay quietly at anchor, getting under weigh early this morning and stopping at Tangier Sound to go over the wrecked old San Marcos which has been so successfully used as a target. Since then we have been running up the Potomac under heavenly skies and with wonderful color effects on the banks. We are dining on board and expect to dock at eight.

Let me know what time to expect you, it will be so nice to have you back again.

Love to the chicks and Mama. By the way I want Vincent Astor to lunch with us at Hyde Park next Sunday if possible.

OR

THE occasion for this letter was the departure of an impressive fleet of nine battleships on a seven-week cruise of the Mediterranean, the first fleet to visit Europe under the Wilson Administration. Most of the ships were products of the naval expansion program inaugurated in 1912, and for the times they were the finest examples of naval construction and equipment in the world.

The vessel that carried F.D.R.'s official party, the DOLPHIN, was a yacht provided for the use of the Secretary of the Navy. A member of the class of 1882 at Harvard, John Sidney Webb was a lawyer in Washington at the time of this letter. As for the presence of Louis Howe among the official party, F.D.R. had brought his campaign manager to Washington as his special assistant soon after entering the Navy Department.

Son of John Jacob Astor and a nephew of James Roosevelt Roosevelt's first wife, Vincent Astor was a Dutchess County neighbor of F.D.R.

This is the last existing personal letter written by F.D.R. in 1913. Although perhaps not revealed by the sparse correspondence, his first nine and a half months in the Navy Department turned out just as he predicted at the outset: working "like a turbine to master this job." By 1914 F.D.R. had not only mastered his new job, but had also won the approval of his civilian superiors and the respect of the Navy's high-ranking officers. Indeed, the highly successful Mediterranean cruise of nine first-time warships was in part testimony to F.D.R.'s quick mastery of official naval matters.

Except for an inspection trip to the West Coast, F.D.R. spent the early months of 1914 engaged in the usual Washington routine. This is not to say that it was an inactive period; the business of naval expansion continued at a rapid pace, and each step forward uncovered new problems of policy and construction. In addition, not only did the mounting crisis in Europe require continual adjustments within the Navy Department, but the situation in Mexico, which had swiftly become explosive, likewise necessitated numerous revisions of naval policy.

By late in May, 1914, as the representatives of the mediators, of Mexico, and of the United States were convening in Niagara Falls, the crisis in Europe approached the breaking point.

SEVERAL months prior to this letter the Greek government had sent representatives to call on Daniels with an offer to purchase two U. S. battleships, the IDAHO and the MISSISSIPPI. With the consent of Wilson, Daniels agreed to the proposal, thereby causing F.D.R. "extra work" in the preparation of an appropriate bill for submission to Congress. The sale was authorized in the Naval Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, and eight days later an official ceremony marked the delivery of a check for $12,535,275.96 to Daniels in full payment for the ships.

William Phillips and his wife, the former Caroline Astor Drayton, were old friends of the Roosevelts. At this time Third Assistant Secretary of State, "Billy" Phillips was beginning a long and varied career in the diplomatic service.

DEAREST BABS—

I sent you a line in Mama's letter from Hyde Park . . . I got here yesterday morning after a very hot night on the train, had a bath and delicious breakfast and came to the Dept. to find not only a vast accumulation, but also an interesting situation in Haiti and Santo Domingo, with a hurry call for marines from the State Department. I saw the President about it, also Mr. Bryan and Bill Phillips, and by 5 p. m. had 700 marines and two ships in motion towards Guantanamo. I dined with Caroline, Billy and A. Peters at the Shoreham and went to bed early.

It is not really hot today, only very muggy, and I am in excellent condition.

My trip down was a great success, and I got in 22 holes of golf on Friday afternoon at the Essex County Country Club with Livy. The launching went off well, and I escaped most of the banquet afterwards (including the speeches) by running for the Federal Express to Poughkeepsie. The Daniels went to Newport and are now on the Dolphin returning to Washington, so I am alone these three days . . .

Kiss the chicks and heaps for yourself.

THE "interesting situation" in Haiti and Santo Domingo was the unrest and revolutionary spirit that prevailed on the Caribbean island, which not only threatened American lives and property but seriously jeopardized the Monroe Doctrine and American supremacy in the vicinity of the Panama Canal.

In later years one of F.D.R.'s favorite anecdotes was the occasion of his interview with William Jennings Bryan mentioned in this letter. It seems that the Secretary of State came rushing into his office and demanded, "I must have a battleship at Guantanamo by tomorrow morning." F.D.R. replied that this was impossible because the nearest dreadnought was at least four days' travel time away from the Caribbean. Bryan again insisted, "But I must, I must have it. American lives are endangered at Haiti." F.D.R. repeated the impossibility of granting such a request, but added that "we have a gunboat in the vicinity that could be in Guantanamo Bay within 24 hours." Whereupon Bryan exclaimed, "Oh, that's all right; when I say 'battleship,' I mean anything that goes and has some guns on it."

Andrew J. Peters was at this time serving his fourth term in Congress, but he resigned a month later to become Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

As F.D.R. had been inspecting New England naval stations during the previous week, he was able to be present at the launching of the battleship NEVADA

F. D. R., Eleanor Roosevelt and Anna—"We had a lovely sail this afternoon and Anna seemed to enjoy it" in Quincy, Massachusetts. Included among the speakers whom F.D.R. "escaped" were Nevada's Senator Key Pittman, Massachusetts' Governor David I. Walsh, Boston's Mayor James M. Curley, and Josephus Daniels.

WASHINGTON
JULY 19, 1914

DEAREST BABS—

Here endeth one week of real old-fashioned activity! Up to yesterday afternoon I seemed to live at the office. You have probably read in the "Times" some of the results—first came the Haitian troubles, with the outfitting of a new expeditionary force and many conferences with the President and the Secretary of State, then the resignation of Huerta, bringing to an end the time-worn cry of "Huerta must go," but plunging us into all sorts of new difficulties—entre nous without resulting to date in any definite policy of construction.

We drift on from day to day as usual—where it has been a success so far, the time has come for a concrete program.

Every evening I have been at the Dept. and have succeeded in cleaning up the last of the annual contracts that have been bothering us for three months.

Politically there is little change. I might declare myself a candidate for U. S. Senator in the Democratic and Progressive Primaries. The Governorship is, thank God, out of the question.

As to next year if I am still Assistant Secretary—a new bill is before Congress providing for three National Commissioners to the Panama Pacific Exposition, two from the Executive Departments and one from civil life, the latter to get $5,000 and devote his whole time to it. It is planned that Bill Phillips and I are to be the two from the Government, and we should have to spend less time than originally thought, going out February 1 for a month, and once in the summer and once at the close.

Yesterday p. m. I golfed and went to the Dept. in the evening, today I have played 45 holes and am nearly dead! I am just in after dining with Paymaster and Mrs. Heap and John McIlhenny. Luckily yesterday and today were delightfully cool and dry. I have dined at home almost every evening.

I will wire you tomorrow or Tuesday whether I can go up next Sunday or the following.

The Cape Cod Canal opening is Wednesday, the 29th and I will either take it in on the way back from Campo or on the way up.

A great deal of love to the chicks. I miss you all so much! I really would like to be in the Senate just so as to get a summer really with my family once in every three or four years!

Take very good care of yourself!

FDR'S idea of entering the senatorial primaries was mainly stimulated by William G. McAdoo, who was anxious to construct a Democratic organization in New York that could successfully oppose Tammany Hall. Although at the time of this letter there was still some doubt in FDR's mind as to the advisability of declaring himself a candidate, exactly one month later his candidacy was announced.

As Congress approved the bill providing for three national commissioners to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and as FDR was "still Assistant Secretary" in 1915, the proposed trip to San Francisco became a reality the following February.

Samuel L. Heap was then pay director in charge of the Navy Allotment Office in Washington. John A. McIlhenny, an old friend of Theodore Roosevelt and one of his Rough Riders, was at this time president of the Civil Service Commission; during his years in Washington he was one of FDR's favorite golf partners.

After five years of difficult labor and much scandal, the Cape Cod Canal was formally opened July 29, 1914, thereby shortening the water route between New York and Boston by nearly 75 miles.

Because of the imminence of war in Europe, FDR's vacation in Maine after the opening of the Cape Cod Canal was cut short by a telegram requesting his immediate return to Washington.

ON JULY 20, Russia, fearful of losing her influence in the Balkans, declared mobilization against the dual monarchy; this in turn brought forth an ultimatum from Berlin which stated that unless Russia halted her mobilization in 12 hours Germany would mobilize; and when Russia did not reply, Germany declared war—several hours before FDR wrote the next letter to his wife. By August 24 the entangling alliances had fully unwound and Europe was engaged in a general war.

DEAREST BABS—

I am on the train returning to Washington after dedicating the Maine anchor at Reading, Pa. The latest news is that Germany had declared war against Russia. A complete smash up is inevitable, and there are a great many problems for us to consider. Mr. D. totally fails to grasp the situation and I am to see the President Monday a. m. to go over our own situation.

The Canal opening was a great success but was not over till 7 p. m. so I couldn't get to Washington till 1:30 p. m. Thursday. I worked at office both evenings and go there all day tomorrow. These are history-making days. It will be the greatest war in the world's history. All well.

MY OWN DEAREST—

At last I have time to write you a real letter . . .

To my astonishment on reaching the Dept. nobody seemed the least bit excited about the European crisis—Mr. Daniels feeling chiefly very sad that his faith in human nature and civilization and similar idealistc nonsense was receiving such a rude shock. So I started in alone to get things ready and prepare plans for what ought to be done by the Navy end of things. Friday I worked all day on these lines, and actually succeeded in getting one ship north from Mexico.

These dear good people like W. J. B. and J. D. have as much conception of what a general European war means as Elliott has of higher mathematics. They really believe that because we are neutral we can go about our business as usual. To my horror, just for example, J. D. told the newspaper men he thought favorably of sending our fleet to Europe to bring back marooned Americans!

Aside from the fact that tourists (female etc.) couldn't sleep in hammocks and that battleships haven't got passenger accommodations, he totally fails to grasp the fact that this war between the other powers is going inevitably to give rise to a hundred different complications in which we shall have a direct interest. Questions of refugees, of neutrality, of commerce are even now appearing and we should unquestionably gather our fleet together and get it into the highest state of efficiency. We still have 12 battleships at Vera Cruz—their "materiel" has suffered somewhat, their "personnel" a great deal! The rest of the fleet is scattered to the four winds—they should be assembled and prepared. Some fine day the State Department will want the moral backing of a "fleet in being" and it won't be there.

All this sounds like borrowing trouble I know but it is my duty to keep the Navy in a position where no chances, even the most remote, are taken. Today we are taking chances and I nearly boil over when I see the cheery "manana" way of doing business.

Two hours ago a telegram from Badger came in asking for information about the war and instructions as to neutrality. Nobody had thought it necessary to keep him in touch! And yet he has a German, a French and an English cruiser off Vera Cruz! . . .

There seems no hope now of averting the crash. Germany has invaded France according to this afternoon's report. The best that can be expected is either a sharp, complete and quick victory by one side, a most unlikely occurrence, or a speedy realization of impending bankruptcy by all, and cessation by mutual consent, but this too is I think unlikely as history shows that money in spite of what the bankers say is not an essential to the conduct of a war by a determined nation.

Rather than long drawn-out struggle I hope England will join in and with France and Russia force peace at Berlin!

The Reading unveiling of the Maine anchor was a great success—fine parade, lots of bands—ending with an impassioned oration by hubby to 5,000 people in the park!

I have deposited $332 in Met. Bank. A great deal of love to the chicks and Mama and A. Annie and a great big hug for yourself.

FDR'S criticism of William Jennings Bryan ("W.J.B.") was due mainly to his youthful enthusiasm, and was only partly valid. Bryan had a better "conception of what a general European war means" than FDR could perceive at this time, but because of his complete pacifism Bryan preferred not to recognize the connection between European wars and the welfare of the United States, a preference which later forced him to resign from Wilson's Cabinet. Although the letter would seem to indicate otherwise, Josephus Daniels' pacifistic views were far more reasonable than those of Bryan, as FDR later came to realize. At the same time, of course, FDR's criticism is indicative of his well-known facility for being able to grasp swiftly the real implications of a crisis, and to act accordingly without hesitation.

THE somewhat derogatory remarks about Josephus Daniels in these letters are far more illustrative of the growth of FDR's personality than of Daniel's competence as a Secretary of the Navy. Daniels' lack of concern for long-standing traditions of naval etiquette, his preference for prolonged deliberation at the expense of quick decisions, his shrewd, country-editor type of mind, and his mature understanding of Washington politics were characteristics that clashed with FDR's youthful and impetuous enthusiasm.

However, as will be seen in subsequent correspondence, FDR gradually changed his estimate of Josephus Daniels, coming to have a profound respect and a great affection for him. His youthful remarks about Daniels therefore should be regarded as a temporary attitude, and it would not be incorrect to credit the "Sec Nav" with having been a major influence in FDR's life, an influence which FDR himself acknowledged when he resigned from the Navy Department. As to how Daniels himself regarded their early relationship, one finds in his book, "The Wilson Era," the following comment: "[FDR] was young then and made some mistakes. Upon reflection, although I was older, I made mistakes, too."

DEAREST BABS—

The heat has come again, and today is the third scorcher, but one doesn't have much time to think about it. There is little real news from Europe. The fact that though the city of Liege has been abandoned the forts still hold out is still the chief item. The Belgian defense has been as magnificent as unexpected. I hear on good authority that the French War College figured on only three days of delay to the German advance by the Belgian forces. Thank God England has gone in in earnest. Now she has landed 20,000 with 80,000 more to go on this first movement. This move and the Belgian resistance make it possible to threaten the German right. Their left has fallen back at Mulhausen before the French advance. But of course these are all purely preliminary moves and the main attack on both sides remains undisclosed.

I've been disappointed that England has been unable to force a naval action—of course it is the obvious course for Germany to hold her main fleet back and try to wear out the blockading enemy with torpedo and submarine attacks in foggy and night conditions.

My work has continued absorbing. Yesterday, however, after work at the office in the morning I got in a round of golf . . .

I'm so glad to think of Miss Spring getting to you Wednesday and only wish Ely could get there before the 18th. Please on receipt of this wire me whether Miss S. thinks I had better come at once or can stay till the 17th. I still hope to come the 15th, and can of course come any day but I may be able to accomplish more by staying two days longer . . .

Loads of love. I long to be with you dearest these days and you are constantly in my thoughts.

THE detailed plans for the arrival of FDR, Miss Spring, and Dr. Albert Ely (the Roosevelts' family physician from New York) at Campobello concern the birth of FDR's fourth child, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. Although Miss Spring and FDR were present for the occasion, Dr. Ely never came. The baby was born on August 17, 1914, and the attending doctor was an old friend from nearby Lubec, Dr. Bennett, who was also the first doctor to examine FDR when he was stricken with infantile paralysis.

Shortly before he left for Campobello FDR announced that he would enter the New York senatorial primaries. On August 14, 1914, the "Poughkeepsie Eagle" carried his announcement in part as follows:

Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate. In his statement Mr. Roosevelt said that he believed the coming campaign in New York will determine whether the State "is to be found on the side of reactionary politics and politicians, or on the side of intelligent progress and honest administration of government."

Hence, in addition to handling the problems created by the war, FDR spent the next six weeks campaigning for the senatorial nomination, a job made somewhat easier by the decision of his opponent, Ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard, not to return from Germany to conduct his own campaign. The major issues of the primary contest centered on the question of Tammany support and the other controversies arising out of the marked difference between Wilson and the Old Guard Democrats. Assisted by Tammany pressure, opposition to FDR arose from all quarters, and included some of his early supporters in Poughkeepsie.

DEAREST BABS,

I have been at the grindstone fairly steadily since the hour I arrived at the office Tuesday night till 12 and last night till one. This afternoon I leave at 4 for New York, have a conference with the Mayor tonight, and leave in the morning for Buffalo, having given up Plattsburg. NEW YORK'S mayor at this time was John Purroy Mitchel, a lawyer and former Collector of the Port of New York. FDR conducted his senatorial campaign in the same vigorous manner as the previous ones, except that this time his travels had to include the entire State rather than just its Twenty-sixth District. The tours, however, proved to be in vain; Gerard defeated him in the primaries, FDR receiving less than half the total votes. He concluded a congratulatory cable to Gerard in Berlin with an offer to assist the Ambassador in his campaign; however, the offer contained one reservation: "Will make active campaign for you if you declare unalterable opposition to Murphy's leadership and all he stands for."

DEAREST BABS,

The enclosed is the truth and even if it gets me into trouble I am perfectly ready to stand by it. The country needs the truth about the Army and Navy instead of a lot of the soft mush about everlasting peace which so many statesmen are handing out to a gullible public.

All is well here. The Secretary left yesterday morning . . .

I do hope the little Babs progresses and that Nurse does too!

Lots of love and kisses. F.

THE approximate date of this letter is substantiated by a prepared statement FDR issued to the press on Wednesday, October 21, in which he outlined the numerous deficiencies of the Navy in order "to call attention to certain facts which have perhaps been misunderstood by some." In all likelihood this statement was "the enclosed" in this letter to AER.

DEAREST MAMA—

Elliott is normal this morning so I see no reason why I should not come on Saturday night midnight, reaching the house at 7:45 a. m. Sunday, breakfasting and going up at 8:45. Also don't you think we could take Anna and James too? They would love it so and by coming back at 4 they could be in bed early enough.

The hearings before the Naval Committee are over—really great fun and not so much of a strain, as the members who tried to quizz me and put me in a hole did not know much about their subject and I was able not only to parry but to come back at them with thrusts that went home. Also I was able to get in my own views without particular embarrassment to the Secretary.

If I don't hear from you I shall carry out the Saturday night plan and expect a lovely day at Hyde Park with you and A. and J.

FDR spent the first few months of 1915 mainly engaged in fulfilling his duties as commissioner to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. AER joined him. Upon their return to Washington FDR's correspondence was resumed when AER

Young Eleanor Roosevelt with James, her second child and eldest son departed for occasional visits to Hyde Park and a summer at Campobello.

DEAREST BABS,

Hard at work and keen to see you and the little Babs tomorrow afternoon. I arrive about 4:30 and must leave again at 5:40 for Staten Island.

Last night I dined with Uncle Fred and Ralph Sanger at the Club. Today Sir C. Spring-Rice lunched with me. He is much better and his family arrive tomorrow. Von Bernstorff was at the next table, trying to hear what we were talking about! Springy and Von B. would kill each other if they had a chance!

I just know I shall do some awful unneutral thing before I get through!

Loads of love

F.

THE exact date of this letter is uncertain, but the reference to the arrival of Springy's family indicates that it was written early in 1915. Ralph Sanger (vide supra) was commissioned a captain in the infantry in 1917 and was killed in a flying accident a year later in France. Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff came to Washington as the German Ambassador in 1909, and remained in this capacity until the severance of U.S.-German relations in 1917.

The problem of doing "some awful unneutral thing" was further complicated on May 7, 1915, when the Cunard liner "Lusitania" was torpedoed and sunk off the southern coast of Ireland with the loss of 124 American lives. This episode brought an end to the strict neutrality of the United States.

THE year in which this letter was written is estimated. The exact nature of the "New York episodes" has been lost to history, but may have been a disagreement over naval policies, as witness the speeches FDR and Daniels delivered at the Navy League banquet. Where Daniels continuously praised the "forward-looking Sixty-third Congress," FDR spoke of Congress in much less polite terms. The "Philadelphia Evening Telegram" at least partially perceived the friction between FDR and Daniels when it editorialized on May 17, 1915, that FDR "seems not to be so self-satisfied as his Chief" in regard to the accomplishments and expansion of the Navy.

FDR's acquaintance with George D. Marvin began at Groton, where the latter was a master from 1899 to 1902. Like his father, Frederic A. Delano, Lyman Delano, a first cousin of FDR, was a prominent railroad official, and became board chairman of the Atlantic Coast Line.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN'S unexpected resignation as Secretary of State on June 8, 1915, caused great commotion in Washington, as can be gathered from FDR's opening sentence. Contrary to an oft-expressed notion that he resigned in order to enter the 1916 contest for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Bryan tendered his resignation primarily because his pacifistic views toward the war in Europe had come to conflict with the foreign policy pursued by Wilson. The particular incident which occasioned his departure was Wilson's second note to Germany regarding the sinking of the Lusitania.

FDR

THIS letter was written shortly before FDR departed for a recuperative vacation at Campobello. Late in the evening of July 1, 1915, he had been stricken with acute appendicitis and rushed to the Washington Naval Hospital, where his appendix was removed. While it took AER several days to make the trip from Campobello, Sara Roosevelt arrived at his bedside the next day, bringing with her a new kimono which FDR found worthy of wear when visiting his "rich friends."

Although FDR was teasing his mother by grading his friends according to their wealth, this remark is indicative of a growing discord between FDR and his mother over the values of their common heritage. It was inevitable that FDR should come to reject the "noblesse oblige" concepts that characterized his mother's generation, and it was only the strong ties of affection that reduced this clash to a simple family disagreement understood and accepted by both parties. Hence, although the particular issue which guided Sara Roosevelt's pen is unknown, and although chronologically out of order, the following letter seems appropriate at this point in the correspondence.

New York
October 14, 1917

Dearest Franklin and Dearest Eleanor,

I feel too badly that I let you go without your pearl collar, too stupid of me! Do wear the velvet one Aunt Doe gave you! I think of you almost in New York and I am sorry to feel that Franklin is tired and that my views are not his, but perhaps dear Franklin you may on second thoughts or third thoughts see that I am not so far wrong.

The foolish old saying "noblesse oblige" is good and "honneur oblige" possibly expresses it better for most of us. One can be democratic as one likes, but if we love our own, and if we love our neighbor, we owe a great example, and my constant feeling is that through neglect or laziness I am not doing my part toward those around me. After I got home, I sat in the library for nearly an hour reading, and as I put down my book and left the delightful room and the two fine portraits, I thought: after all, would it not be better just to spend all one has at once in this time of suffering and need, and not think of the future; for with the trend to "shirt sleeves," and the ideas of what men should do in always being all things to all men and striving to give up the old fashioned traditions of family life, simple home pleasures and refinements, and the traditions some of us love best, of what use is it to keep up things, to hold on to dignity and all I stood up for this evening. Do not say that I misunderstood, I understand perfectly, but I cannot believe that my precious Franklin really feels as he expressed himself.

Well, I hope that while I live I may keep my "old fashioned" theories and that at least in my own family I may continue to feel that home is the best and happiest place and that my son and daughter and their children will live in peace and keep from the tarnish which seems to affect so many. Mrs. Newbold's theory that children are "always just like their parents" is pretty true, as example is what really counts.

When I talk I find I usually arouse opposition, which seems odd, but is perhaps my own fault, and tends to lower my opinion of myself, which is doubtless salutary. I doubt if you will have time dear Franklin to read this, and if you do, it may not please you. My love to our fine little James, and to you two dear ones.

Devotedly,
Mama.

DEAREST BABS—

It has been a joy to get your letters and to know that all goes well and that the little Babs enjoyed his birthday. I feel terrible that I could not have been there and I miss you all so much. Yesterday we had a most successful trip on the "Sylph" to Indian Head or rather Camp Winthrop, the rifle range just below there . . . and returned in the cool of the evening. We passed the Dolphin, J. D. and family on board, on the way up and exchanged felicitations by signal. He is to be gone till September 4 unless things break loose in the meantime. I have seen Lansing today and am worried about the Arabic and I think the President will really act as soon as we can get the facts. But it seems very hard to wait until Germany tells us her version and I personally doubt if I should be quite so polite.

My own Dearest.

At last I have time to write you a real letter - I posted a line on the train last night, & on arrival went straight to the Department, where as I expected I found everything calm & apparently a total oblivion to the fact that the most terrible drama in history was about to be enacted — To go back many days - I got to Boston all right on Wed. morning & a Telegram from Lucy said Le & Alice could not get to the opening of the Circle Pool

This letter, written to his wife in 1914, shows F. D. R.'s impatience at the calm manner in which some of his associates took the outbreak of the war in Europe

This p. m. I leave at 5 p. m. to go to the Eustis' at Leesburg and will be in touch with Washington by telephone.

JUST as it was generally accepted that the German government had agreed to no further repetitions of the "Lusitania" disaster, the White Star liner "Arabic" was sunk by a German submarine off the southern coast of Ireland. Forty-four people, including two Americans, lost their lives, and the event astounded both the United States public and the government; public opinion, led by the press all over the country, was aroused to call for severance of relations with Germany.

DEAREST BABS,

I did not write yesterday as every second of the day was more than occupied. I lunched with Henry Breckinridge to meet Senhor Cardoso, the Brazilian Minister to Mexico, who has handled our affairs there in excellent manner since [Nelson] O'Shaughnessy left. Last night I attended the official dinner by the Lansings to the same gentleman and it was a delight to see a Secretary of State who is a gentleman and knows how to treat Ambassadors and Ministers from other civilized nations . . .

I am a little at sea in regard to next Sunday and even about when I can get away. But this p. m. the request of Germany for a wait until they can get facts makes the situation less restrained.

Kiss the chicks. Loads of love and a longing to get back to you all.

FDR'S remarks about Lansing are less praise of the new Secretary of State than they are the results of his embittered feelings toward Bryan, who was at this time urging strict neutrality in a speaking tour of the country as a "private citizen." These comments are another example of the impatient attitude FDR had toward anyone who did not hold views similar to his own during this period of his life.

THE "description of Elliott's spanking" is contained in AER's letter of August 22, 1915, as follows: "Elliott bit James hard the other day and I explained that no matter whose fault it was boys didn't bite. His feelings were much hurt and he made such a long upper lip he looked like a rabbit, but at the end of the spanking (with my slipper) he said 'It didn't hurt very much mother!'"

MY OWN DEAREST,

I have been so worried about the baby's strange upset and as there was no letter from you this morning I wired to get the latest news. Just now on coming back from the Department I find your welcome telegram and letter and am greatly relieved. I suppose it must have been stomach and the poor lamb must have had a most uncomfortable time.

Last night I dined quietly at home. In the afternoon I had a long talk with the President about various routine matters, but especially about the Council of National Defense which I am trying to get started. It seems that I can accomplish little just now as the President does not want to "rattle the sword" while Germany seems anxious to meet us more than half way, but he was interested and will I think really take it up soon.

I decided to stay "on the job" over Sunday as Haiti is not a calm spot and there might be important dispatches from Admiral Caperton . . .

Kiss the chicks and I do hope you didn't get too tired over the babs upset and that you are taking very good care of yourself. It rained hard all yesterday, is clear today and so far no heat. I am in luck!

FDR was a year ahead of his time with the idea of a Council of National Defense, as Congress did not authorize this organization until August, 1916, and Wilson did not announce his appointment to the council's advisory commission until the following October.

DEAREST BABS,

. . . I have been really busy every second during the past few days, with quantities of troubles from unexpected sources, chiefly labor. Today I sprang an announcement of the National Naval Reserve, and trust J. D. will like it! It is of the utmost importance and I have failed for a year to get him to take any action, though he has never objected to it. Now I have gone ahead and pulled the trigger myself. I suppose the bullet may bounce back on me, but it is not revolutionary nor alarmist and is just common sense . . .

Thank James and Anna for their letters—it is good to hear from them "au naturel" without having their letters dictated by an "institutrice"! . . .

EVER since his entrance into the Navy Department the establishment of a naval reserve had been one of FDR's pet projects; it was an important aspect of his frequently reiterated demand for increased preparedness through greater naval strength. However, the "trigger" he pulled was not so dangerous as his letter would seem to indicate, for his announcement did not officially establish the National Naval Reserve, but merely outlined "the plans of the Navy Department" for its organization.

THIS penciled memorandum to Josephus Daniels, and the latter's curt reply, was found among FDR's personal correspondence and is an appropriate conclusion to this chapter. In spite of his mockery of Government red tape, FDR overlooked one of the most important entries on all official forms: the date. Nevertheless, it is significant that by the close of 1915 the friction between FDR and JD was gradually being replaced by an intimacy that can be detected in this note.

The GREBE

Nature, which seems to have known what it was doing in the case of Betty Grable, trees, flowers and most varieties of birds, sometimes goes all to pieces, as in the case of the grebe. A fouled-up fowl that combines the worst features of a loon, owl, swan and one of your nightmares, it slinks morosely around remote swamps in Europe and America nursing a split personality. Grebes' true feelings are expressed during courtship, when they sit face to face and shake their heads. The only good thing you can say about a male grebe is that he is a good sport and father, helping bring up the children and shaking his head.

The Turning Point

Clarence K. Streit

In a Swiss cafe, he had a vision of world union

A GROUP OF foreign correspondents were "talking shop" in a cafe in Lausanne, Switzerland. The year was 1933. Hitler had just come into power in Germany. Mussolini was well entrenched in Italy. The correspondents were pessimistic.

Dictatorship was on the rise, they said, and getting stronger while the liberal nations were paying no attention. They were glum, resigned to this philosophy, except for a young, tousle-haired newspaperman, Clarence Streit, then League of Nations reporter for the "New York Times."

"The democracies aren't weak," he argued. "They have plenty of power. The trouble is that they're always so divided that they cancel each other out. The dictators profit from this division, and give the impression of being strong."

While Streit argued, his nimble mind was already seeing the makings of more than one good story. As soon as he got back to Geneva, he began working on them.

The articles became a series and the series a book, "Union Now," published in March, 1939. The appearance of the book immediately started a movement for a federal union of the western democracies as the nucleus of an eventual democratic world government. Streit left his job on the "Times" to head this movement, known as Federal Union, Inc., a non-profit membership association.

Ten years later, Streit still labors selflessly in the cause of freedom. Recently published is a postwar edition of "Union Now" with five chapters added on the basis of United Nations, and postwar experience. It carries on a campaign begun more than a decade ago in a modest Swiss café.

ON PARADE:
Rehearsal with Jo Stafford

Rehearsal — a bore for most entertainers — is fun for the cast of Jo Stafford's Supper Club.

Something of a wag herself, Jo brings out the wit in others, keeps spirits up with a winning smile.

As rehearsal progresses, NBC cast gets in spirit of things. Singer Stafford is prim to questions.

Practice over, she touches up her lips before leaving studio. Still to come: the broadcast itself.

THE COVER:

The irrepressible Bing Crosby plays more roles than a mechanical piano. Already familiar as singer, actor, entrepreneur and golfer, he shines also as stockman (see page 26). His next picture: "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court."

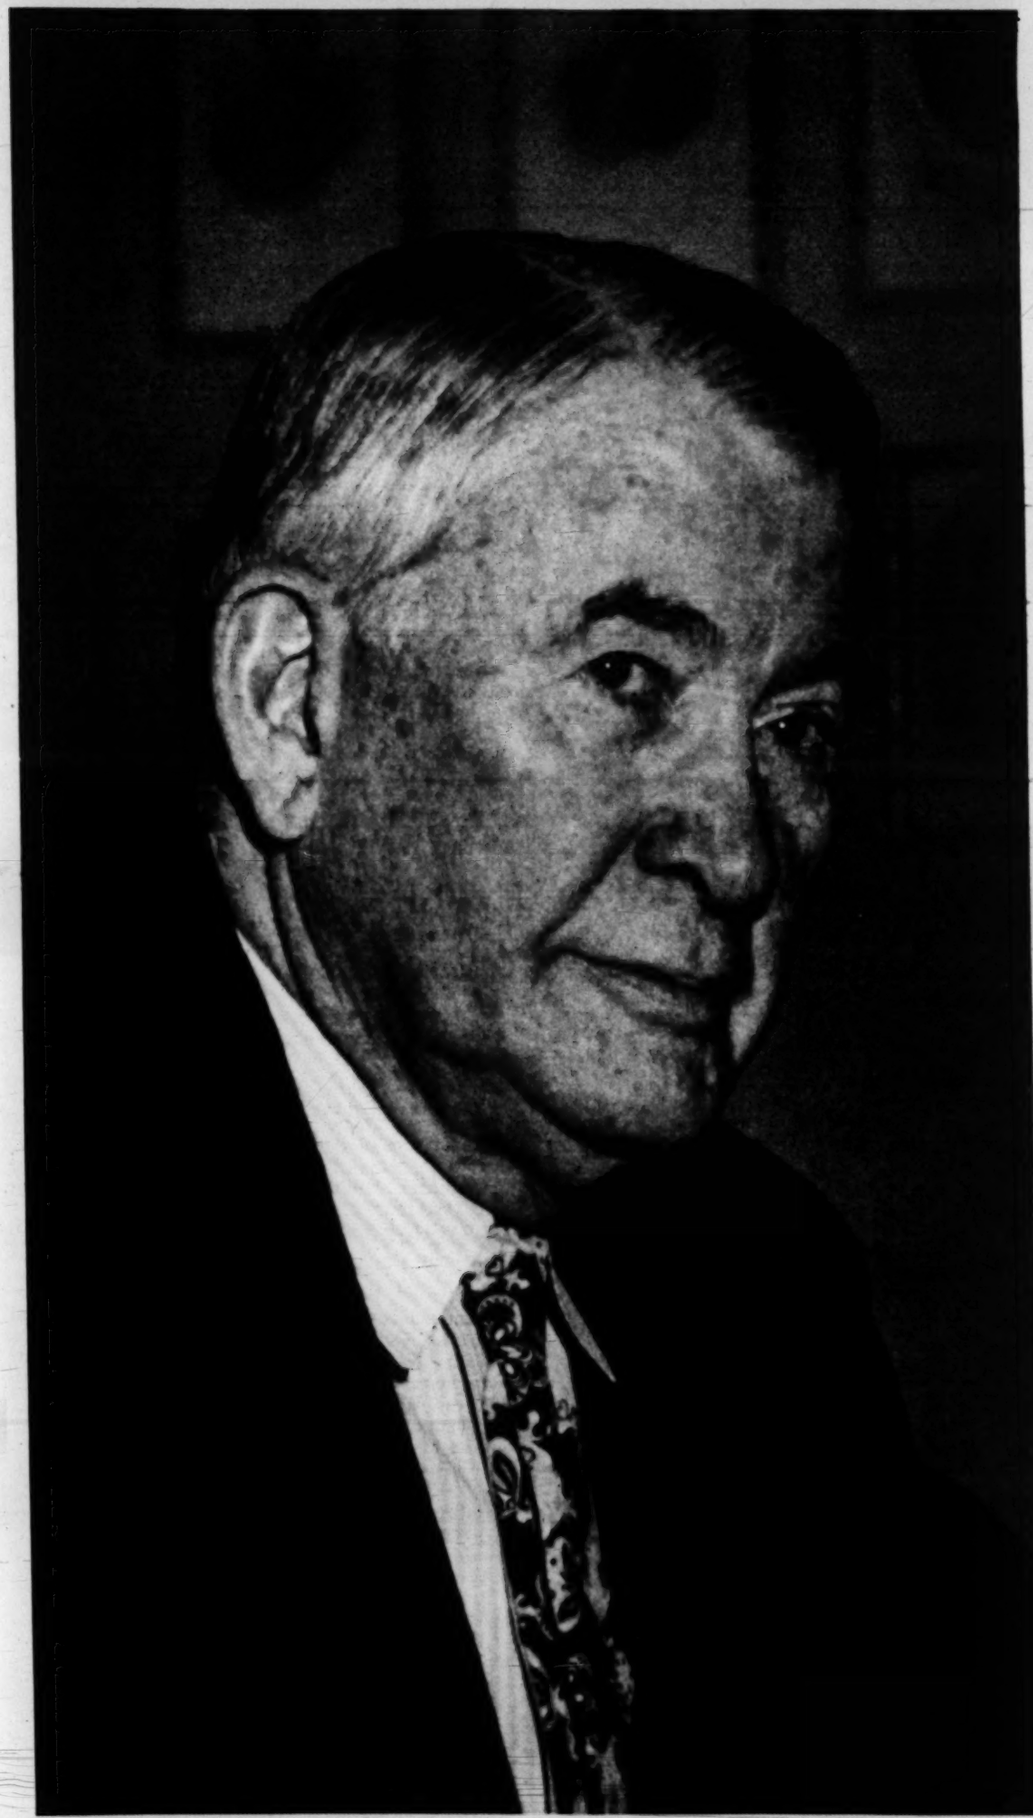
"I'm in a bit of a rush."



No "Mr. Throttlebottom," Kentucky's Alben W. Barkley is determined to be a "working" vice president. Combining good humor with a long record of service, Barkley is one of the most popular figures in the administration.

Vice President Barkley

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT

ALBEN BARKLEY owes Governor Earl Warren of California a debt he can never repay.

For Earl Warren was first to declare war on that useless appendage in American politics, "Mr. Throttlebottom." Thanks to Warren, Alben Barkley, a working vice president at last, will become more than a cipher in government.

As a condition to running for the office, Warren asked Governor Thomas E. Dewey to banish the Throttlebottom myth that vice presidents should be seen and not heard. Dewey agreed.

Now Harry Truman and Alben Barkley are putting Warren's idea to work. As time goes on, Barkley will handle more and more presidential chores, take a hand in administration policy-making.

To the working partnership, Barkley brings two things this administration can use — battle-tested legislative "know how" and a rare sense of humor.

Not since Tom Marshall prescribed a "good five-cent cigar" as the nation's prime need has a vice president put so much fun in government.

Folks had all but forgotten there was such an office as vice president. Vacant for nearly four years, few really had missed it. With Barkley around, they soon will rediscover what may become in fact the second highest office in the land.

Barkley is what politicians call a "ready man." As Senator he could speak on an instant's notice or without notice; save a tense situation with a funny yarn, or swing into a desk-pounding appeal to action.

His record squares with everything the Democratic party has stood for in fat years and lean, under Coolidge, and Hoover, under Roosevelt and Truman.

Three times keynoter for the Democrats, he's become a walking record of what the Democratic party stands for. At Philadelphia last July someone coined a name for him: "Old Mr. Democracy."

Washington Admires the Barkley Wit

MUCH HAS been written about Barkley "the party wheelhorse and workhorse," little or nothing about Barkley the showman and teller of tales.

He has a warm, rib-tickling sense of the ridiculous and an endless store of stories, "cloakroom and parlor," that are part of the Washington legend.

In the wee small hours of the gala celebration on the night before the inaugural, Barkley went over to the President's box, asked Mr. Truman if he was ready to leave. "I'm ready right now," said the President, "but I don't think Mrs. Truman is." "Well," replied Barkley, arms akimbo, "I'm going to stand right here until I find out who's boss."

Next day the President and Vice President sat side by side in the brittle cold for five hours while the inaugural parade passed in front of them.

To the spectators it looked as though they were having the time of their lives. Mostly, it was a case of "Have you heard this one?" with the President on the receiving end.

Later Barkley was asked what they talked about. "That," he said, "was presidential and vice presidential stuff and of no possible interest to anybody else."

When colleagues pressed him, Barkley told the story of the old maid who went to the Zoo.

"She paused in front of the hippopotamus cage, and asked the keeper: 'What kind of animal is that?'

" 'That's a hippopotamus, madam,' he said.

" 'Is it male or female?' asked the lady.

" 'That, madam,' said the keeper, 'couldn't possibly interest anyone but another hippopotamus.' "

THE AUTHOR of this article has been a Washington newsman for more than 20 years; and during most of them he has been acquainted with Mr. Barkley.

Barkley the raconteur: The Vice President spins a yarn for Democratic national chairman J. Howard McGrath and New York Democrats Paul Fitzpatrick and Edward J. Flynn.

To his grandchildren, Alben W., 3rd, three, and Dorothy Anne, five, the Vice President is just "Grandpa." To his friends on Capitol Hill, Barkley is still known as "Senator."

Ready wit and firm determination mark Barkley

Both will find their uses if the Vice President serves as a constant link between Congress and the White House

TALES like the one about the hippopotamus disconcerted Bob Hope when he recently flew to Europe with Barkley and Jinx Falkenberg. When the party returned to Washington, reporters asked Hope if he had had a good time.

"No," replied Hope. "Jinx stole all the glamor and Barkley told all the stories. Besides, I had to ride atop a load of corn on the airlift to Berlin."

"Liquid or solid?" asked the irrepressible Barkley.

"You see what I mean?" shrugged Hope.

Barkley not only won the job Warren ran for and missed, but Californians presented the Democratic victor with a fancy five-foot redwood gavel they had carved for Dewey's running mate.

It looks like a super-duper stonebreaker's mallet, and the Vice President is still hunting a place big enough to house it. "I think I'll put it in a Senate alcove, with the American flag on one side and the gavel on the other," said Barkley. "When these Senators take out after me, if I can't flag them down, I'll stop them with that gavel."

Barkley and Truman talk the same legislative language, share their devotion to nearly all of Franklin Roosevelt's tenets, and mix with equal ease. They like people. But they are opposite in their working habits.

Truman is an "early to bed, early to rise" man, always up and around by 6 a.m.

Barkley likes to work late and sleep late. If he hasn't a speech to write or a bill to draft, he often picks up a book and reads himself to sleep.

A favorite Barkley yarn is the epic of the ungrateful constituent. A lawmaker returned home before election to find a long-time supporter pledged to his opponent. The amazed legislator reminded his former friend of the money he had loaned him and the federal plums he had handed him over the years.

"Yes," said the constituent, "But what have you done for me lately?"

Barkley, a man of intense emotions and deep convictions, isn't always the debonair funmaker of fact and fiction. Sometimes, he admits, he tells stories "just to drive away the blues."

Dangerous in debate, he drops the lighter pose, deals in facts and logic in the legislative clinches. Senate leader longer than any other Democrat, seldom was he bested in debate. When ponderous facts failed to convince, Barkley used the rapier.

Once Louisiana's late Huey Long tied up the Senate with a long harangue. Finally Barkley rose.

"Did the Senator ever study music?" he asked.

"A little," Huey replied.

"Then suppose the Senator sing for us—a little," said Barkley.

Once even Franklin Roosevelt retreated before the rebuke of an aroused Barkley. The breach was soon mended, but neither ever forgot it.

On the death of Arkansan Joseph T. Robinson in 1937, Barkley ran for Senate floor leader against formidable opposition. Critics of the administration's highly controversial plan to alter the Supreme Court backed the late Senator Pat Harrison. Roosevelt preferred Barkley and sent him the now famous "Dear Alben" letter telling him so. Barkley won.

Barkley's loyalty to Roosevelt never wavered until the late President vetoed a tax bill in 1944 against the advice of his congressional leaders. Barkley called Roosevelt's stinging message a reflection on Congress and promptly resigned as leader.

The veto was overridden and Barkley was re-elected unanimously. Roosevelt had to make the first move to repair the break, sending Barkley a second "Dear Alben" letter. Barkley dropped the quarrel and their ties were never again shaken.

The Vice President and his boss, Harry S. Truman, raise coffee cups in a toast during a lull in the inaugural parade.

There have been a few other moments when Barkley's capacity for deep indignation erased his famed sense of humor. During the last Democratic convention, reports spread that President Truman was shopping around for another running mate.

Said Barkley: "I won't take warmed-over biscuits."

Once the campaign got underway, Barkley barnstormed with a vigor that matched Truman's own. He criss-crossed the country by plane and by train, carried his fight deep into states' rights territory.

Between thrusts at the record of the Eightieth Congress, Barkley found time to kid himself and the job he was running for. He loved to tell the story of the man who had two sons. One of the sons went to sea. The other became vice president. Nothing more was ever heard from either of them.

Responsibility Begets Gravity

NOWADAYS Barkley seldom jests about the vice presidency. He last quipped about it when he took over his new duties. He told Senators he couldn't remain silent for four years, asked them not to be surprised if he strolled onto the Senate floor to make a speech. When he tapped the Senate to order after his inaugural it was with dead serious intent. He offered his "services" to any branch of the government. The President promptly put him to work.

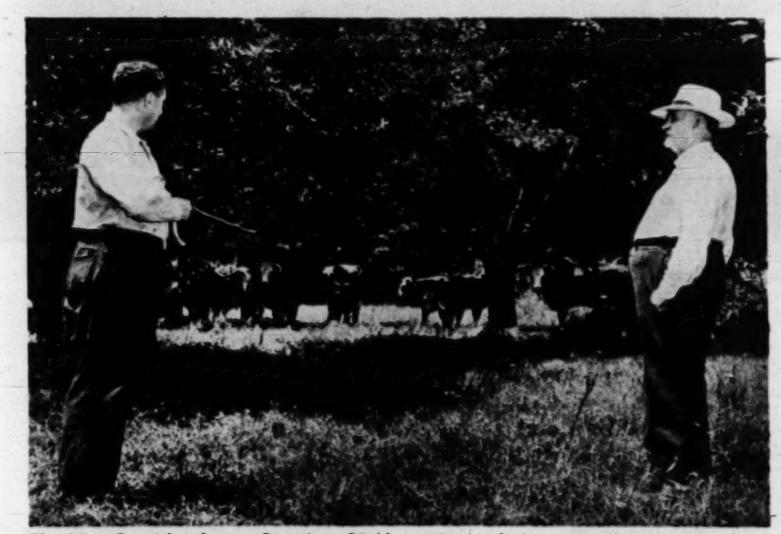
Since then he has been sitting in on all of the President's cabinet meetings, not as a spectator, but as a regularly accredited participant. He's consulted on administration bill drafting, and his advice asked on presentation of major bills.

But it is in the cloakrooms of the Capitol, where misunderstandings so frequently arise as to just what is or is not the President's intention, that Barkley will be of the most help to his chief.

With White House and Capitol doors open to him, he can bridge that long mile down Pennsylvania Avenue, keep communications lines open.

If the "partnership" works out according to plan, Barkley may become a sort of alter ego to the President, speaking out for the administration when Mr. Truman isn't available. In such circumstances, the country would soon forget all about that mythical nonentity of U.S. politics, "Mr. Throttlebottom."

A New Dealer, Barkley was chosen Senate majority leader in 1937 with the support of President Roosevelt, who influenced the decision with a famous letter to "Dear Alben."



The Vice President's son, David M. Barkley, joins his father in inspecting some of the blooded Hereford cattle which they raise on the family farm back home in Paducah, Ky.

Barkley and his daughter, Mrs. Max Truitt, are a familiar pair in Washington. Since the death of Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. Truitt has become her father's official hostess. THE END.

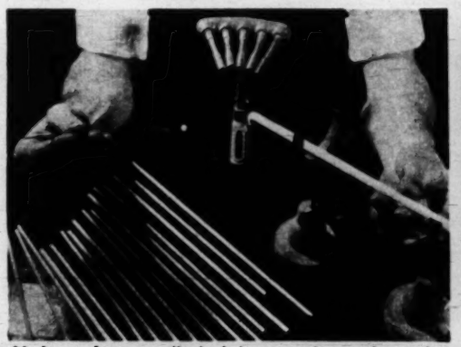
Artificial pearls, of which millions of strands are manufactured annually, compare favorably in luster with natural gems found in oysters. They were first made by a Frenchman more than 300 years ago.

Pearls Without Oysters

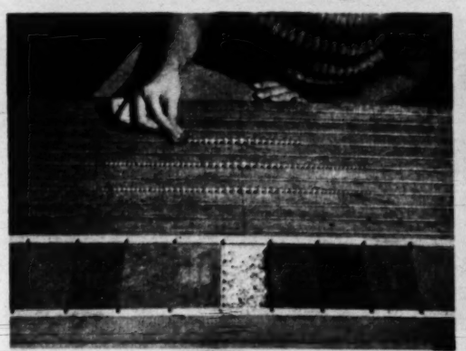
Gem-making, it appears, is no longer a job for Blue Points

TRADITIONALLY impatient with nature's slowness, man has long tried to hasten her leisurely processes. One of his objectives has been to make pearls (which he values as gems) without the help of the oyster (which he values mainly for eating). Using the tardy methods of the oyster, he has made cultured pearls for some decades, but since 1650 he has fashioned his own pearls by means of chemicals, fish scales, and tinted glass. These pictures show how it's done.



Molten glass—called alabaster—is caught on the tip of wire, is then whirled to form a perfect sphere.

Alabaster spheres are then dipped into pearl solution compounded of fish scales and special chemicals.



Dipped repeatedly into the pigment, the pearls assume natural look. They are then arranged for size.

Strands of artificial pearls are inspected for finish and uniformity. Workers quickly spot defects.

TO HELP SUPPORT THE REHABILITATION SERVICE OF THE VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

This great American organization has extended a kindly, charitable and helping hand to veterans in every state of the union . . . to foreign lands . . . wherever a veteran of any of our wars needs, and is entitled to, benefits FROM THE GOVERNMENT.

To celebrate its 50th anniversary, the VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS is sponsoring this contest, the net proceeds of which will be used for the expansion of its REHABILITATION SERVICE. Here, in brief, is what this work consists of:

Under the direction of the VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS NATIONAL REHABILITATION SERVICE, hundreds of thousands of claims of disabled and distressed veterans are handled annually.

VFW REHABILITATION SERVICE is staffed with medical, legal and claims experts who provide, free of charge, such technical advice and assistance as veterans and their families may require concerning disability pensions and compensations, hospitalization, burial allowances, government insurance, educational and vocational training and employment assistance. Such claims are prosecuted by the VFW before the Veterans Administration WITHOUT COST TO THE INDIVIDUAL VETERAN, to secure for him or his family such benefits FROM THE GOVERNMENT to which he is entitled under the law.

The urgent needs of millions of veterans of World War II, added to those of veterans from former wars, have placed a tremendous burden upon the financial resources of the VFW.

THIS WORK DESERVES FINANCIAL HELP . . . YOUR HELP!

COMPLETE CONTEST RULES . . . Read Carefully

SPECIALIST IN SUSPICION

THE SUSPICIOUS SOUL is a familiar figure. He's in the office and the club. He's in every crowd, on every street. He has a fancy that works overtime, imagination that never stops.

Brush his shoulder, and his hand shoots for his wallet. "Pickpocket!" his expression screams. Let his wife oversalt the stew, and he drops his fork with a gasp. "Poison!" he's sure.

Like a mail-order Sherlock Holmes, he searches everywhere for treachery, torturing himself in the process. With him, conviviality is a facade and brotherhood bunk. Cartoonist Tom Flannery catches the Suspicious Soul in action.

Silent vastness of the Grand Canyon is conveyed by this picture of its north rim. Photo appears in "The Inverted Mountains," a new book on the canyons of the Southwest.

Canyons of the West

A new book describes their grandeur and their past

EVER SINCE the first white man peered over its basalt brink, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and its sister canyons of southern Utah and northern Arizona have exerted an enormous imaginative appeal on most Americans.

Hundreds of thousands of them have actually visited the great canyons, most of them in the last two-score years. Millions more have always wanted to see them, but never could.

To make the lot of the stay-at-homes happier, and to enthrall those who have seen the mighty river-hewn chasms first-hand, is the purpose of a recent book, "The Inverted Mountains,"* edited by Roderick Peattie. The volume is the latest in the "American Mountain Series" of the Vanguard Press.

In his introduction, Editor Peattie observes that other writers have already exploited all available superlatives in describing the region. He and his colleagues, however, offer something more rewarding than mere words: a deep-felt and intense emotion at the grandeur of the canyon country.

The twelve chapters of the book were written by Weldon F. Heald, Edwin D. McKee and Harold S. Colton, who discuss a triangular area roughly the size of the canyonless state of Maine. Their approach is historical, but they also go fully into the geology and archaeology of the long-inhabited area.

Respect for Grand Canyon

They describe the spectacular beauties of Bryce and Zion canyons with feeling, but their great respect is reserved for the biggest of all — the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and for "the master workman," the river which carved it out in endless eons.

Not the least useful aspect of their book is the attention they have devoted to advising potential tourists in the region on such matters as roads, equipment, weather conditions and the like. To lovers of nature of the West, and of the vast channels in the desert, their book will be a constant delight.

*"The Inverted Mountains." Edited by Roderick Peattie. The Vanguard Press. New York. $5.

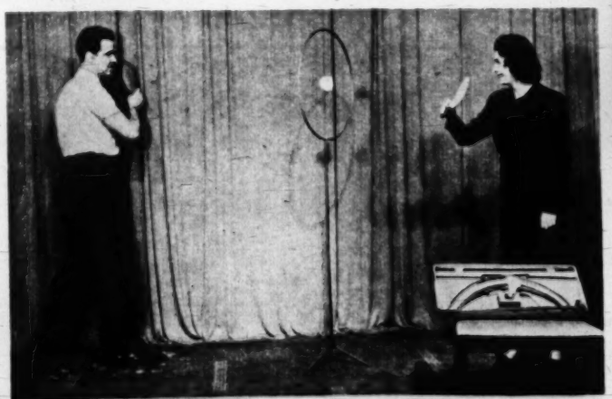
WAX APPLIER, inexpensive and automatic, has renewable pads which can be changed in a minute. It comes complete with three replacement pads of soft, fluffy woolen material. Each pad can be used many times if cleaned under water faucet after wax application.

Bedroom furniture has new touches

BEDROOM FURNITURE of a new design is priced low for young homemakers. Bookcase headboard is a convenience for bedtime reading or small radio, makes catchall for eyeglasses, tissues. Night stand has drop leaf that easily converts it to a bedside table. "Peekaboo" footboard displays gay bedspreads.

PELLETIZED SEEDS are said to assure better plants with less labor for home gardeners. A coating of nutritious chemicals and inert material makes each seed a uniform pellet the shape of a pea and somewhat smaller. Hard to handle seeds can at last be space planted. Others which usually have to be planted early in flats can now be sown directly in garden. Extra thinning and transplanting jobs are virtually ended.

BABY SCALE which converts easily to scale for household use by detaching tray is now available at low cost. It weighs accurately by the ounce up to 26 pounds.



NEW GAME for young and old can be played indoors or out. Little space is needed and it comes complete with equipment shown which is adjustable for youngsters. Players serve and play bird through loop into partner's five-foot court, score points as in volley ball.

PAINTING TUBES ▶

To simplify children's painting, a new set requires no palettes or brushes. It has five plastic tubes containing color powder. A small quantity of powder mixed with water makes a nontoxic color paint safe for youngsters. Five other plastic tubes have rubber tops from which color flows freely once applicator is pressed against paper. Set avoids upsets and spilled paint.

◀ BREAD DISPENSER

Handy sliced-bread dispenser is said to keep a full loaf or any part of a loaf fresh for a minimum of two weeks. It delivers a slice at a time for use when needed by the simple turning of a knob. Proper ventilation and moisture control is accomplished by means of a series of tiny holes in the rear which can be punched out as needed according to the dampness of the climate.

DRYING CAP ▶

Latest in heatless hair dryers is as easy to wear as any hat. Inexpensive, the cap weighs only eight ounces, comes in three sizes, may be used again and again. It dries hair without heat, electricity or chemicals. The blotter-like action of the harmless mineral in the cap is said to dry out most hair in an hour and to free women once and for all from hair-drying nuisance.

◀ RADIANT RECEIVER

Metal bands that clip easily on to your telephone's mouthpiece and ear provide convenience at night. Two lines around each band are of phosphorescent material. When exposed to artificial or natural light, they glow through the night so there's no need to grapple in the dark for the evasive receiver. Makers claim that the phosphorescent material lasts for several years.

BETTER LIGHT ▶

New fluorescent light unit can be mounted by anyone in a jiffy to a standard overhead fixture. It produces a cool, shadowless day-like light for the bedroom, living room, kitchen, bathroom, or hall. Unit has two 18-watt, half-circle fluorescent tubes. When united, they form a steady circle of light. If one half of light burns out, only this part need be replaced, not full circle.

TO ALL PARENTS

Here is a guide book you'll use constantly during all the years your child is growing up — a real contribution to your peace of mind and success as a parent.

Written by an experienced psychologist, "Your Child Grows Up" answers hundreds of questions about children's normal development which are of vital interest to parents. For example:

- ★ When should your child start feeding himself?
- ★ When should a child get small household tasks to do?
- ★ At what age should you let your child go to school alone?
- ★ When may a child be allowed to play outside unsupervised?
- ★ At what age is it normal for girls to take an interest in boys, and vice versa?
- ★ When should a child start getting spending money?
- ★ At what age can a boy be trusted to use tools safely?
- ★ When should you permit your child to go outside your own neighborhood alone?

These and similar questions are answered by the "Growing-Up Scale" in this manual, which shows you what to expect from your children and how to handle them at every age. It will clear up many unnecessary worries and help make you a better parent.

Delicate embroidered collar and carefully set pocket enhance this rayon nightgown styled in new daytime fashions. At $9.95.

The New Tailored Sleep Dresses

THERE'S a New Look in nightgowns—in fact, it's a dual look. Just introduced this week is a striking new group of clothes for sleeping. Called Tommiegowns (the manufacturers previously offered Tommie pajamas), the new sleepclothes look like handsome housecoats or street dresses, bear small relation to styleless, loose-fitting nightgowns and none at all to brusque, mannish pajamas.

Strongest attraction of the new gowns is the fact that they combine day-time style with night-time comfort. Designed with flattering full skirts and smoothly tailored lines, the sleep dresses are made of bright washable prints as well as solid color rayons which could be worn for day-time lounging. To give them a fitted look at the waistline, each has a wide belt, elasticized in back. For a maximum of comfort while sleeping, the belt may be unsnapped. The gowns have other practical sleepwear features, such as a half-collar that ends at the shoulder line and eliminates bulkiness at the neck. They also incorporate non-raveling seams and scientifically proportioned lengths for short, average or tall wearers. Available in leading stores, the nightgowns are priced at from $6 to $10.

Washable broadcloth in new plaid resembles housecoat, is actually sleep garment.

Gowns have special features like half-collar which ends at shoulder line for comfort while sleeping and ease in ironing. Featherstitching, too, gives it "hand-made" look. Model comes in pink, blue or yellow rayon. ($7.95)

Early American print frosted with eyelet-embroidered ruffles looks like peasant blouse and skirt, actually is a one-piece sleeping garment. Priced at $5.95, it is available in red, yellow, black or green background print.

"Stick of candy" look is achieved by crisp white dickey inserted in solid-color gown of multifilament rayon. In turquoise or coral at $7.95, it could almost pass for informal afternoon dress with extreme "new look" skirt.

Grapefruit Baked Alaska

By Beth Merriman
PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

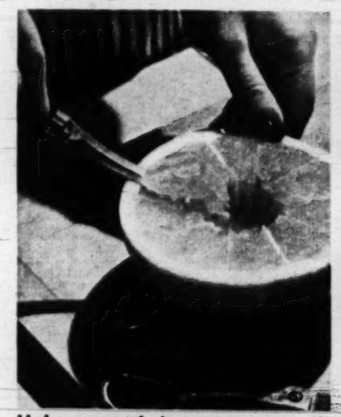
This glorious dessert, a new version of Baked Alaska, is lovely to look at, delicious to taste.

LET US PRESENT, with considerable pride, the most beautiful dessert of the spring season, Grapefruit Baked Alaska! We can assure you that the dinner at which you present it will be the talk of the town. Make certain the grapefruit is chilled, the packaged ice cream firm, and completely covered with deep meringue.

Grapefruit Baked Alaska

3 grapefruit
2 tbs. powdered sugar
3 egg whites
½ teaspoon salt
6 tbs. sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint pkg. vanilla ice cream

Cut grapefruit in half; remove more of the center than usual; cut around each section; sprinkle each half with 1 teaspoon powdered sugar. Chill. Beat egg whites until foamy, add salt and beat until stiff, add sugar gradually and continue to beat until very stiff. Add vanilla. Put heaping spoonful of ice cream in center of each grapefruit. Cover each grapefruit half with meringue. Place on baking sheet; brown in hot oven, 450° F., about 3 or 4 minutes, or put under high broiler heat for about 1 minute. Watch closely to prevent burning. Serves six.



Halve grapefruit; remove centers; free sections with a curved knife.

After sugaring and chilling, place spoonful of ice cream on each half.

Top with deep swirls of meringue, bringing it well out to the edges.

Hockey, toughest of sports, is wearing on players, fans and officials alike. That's why referee King Clancy (right) is finally retiring.

"KING" CLANCY—

Hockey Referee

WHEN Frank Michael "King" Clancy, dean of referees in the National Hockey League, announced last month that he would soon retire, eyebrows shot up from New York to Toronto. For Clancy, who has spent 28 of his 45 years in the league's employ, has long been considered as much a part of the game as the ice itself.

But, surprising or not, Clancy's decision was sound. In his 16 years as a player and his 12 years as a referee, he has sustained almost every injury known to his trade. His ribs have been splintered, his nose broken, his cheek-bone cracked and his clavicle fractured. His teeth have been scattered like bird seed on the ice of two nations, and the contours of his face have been so altered that, as he has remarked, "I don't even recognize myself in the mirror."

For these reasons he has made up his mind to retire at the end of this season in a final attempt to salvage what parts of him still remain intact.

Clancy's career as a referee, although distinguished, was relatively dull in comparison with his career as a player. A member of the Ottawa Senators in the 1920's and stick-wielder of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the 30's, Clancy scored 141 goals and made 145 assists in 16 years. Although he never weighed more than 150 pounds, he held his own in body-checks against such beefy foemen as Ching Johnson, Red Horner and even the famed Eddie Shore, who, in moments of whimsy, was known to break the legs of lesser men.

When Clancy retired from the playing ranks in 1937 and became a referee, he brought to this position the same high spirit and contempt for routine that had distinguished his play on the backline. Never one to dodge a good fight, he has defended his judgment on the ice with his fists on more than one occasion, a combativeness which his admirers have long appreciated. To a hockey fan, the games villain is the referee, and Clancy has played this part so well that he has been the target of more hard words and soft fruit than any other official in major-league hockey.

That Clancy will be missed by the fans was demonstrated on his last trip to New York when he was clipped, not by a cabbage, but by a box of candy.

FRENCH WAR BRIDE

"Maggy" Stephens made the difficult transition from life abroad to an American home and family. Here's how she fared Party for Mark, jr., (right of cake in background) mixes French and American families. Mrs. William Foley (standing, left) is also a French bride.

A STRANGE LAND HAS BECOME A HOME

By ERNEST LA FRANCE and SID ROSS

Photographs by Ben Ross

ALMOST ANY DAY, at the well-stocked counters of the supermarkets in Clifton, N.J., you are apt to hear the staccato accents of Paris, France.

To the neighbors on Beverly Hills Road, roughly 3,200 miles from the Eiffel Tower, it is the voice of Mrs. Mark Stephens, as American-sounding a name as you will find in any history book.

As a matter of fact, she is very much a part of American history — one of the 92,000-plus war brides (about 8,000 of them French) who married American servicemen overseas during World War II and have arrived since the end of the war to settle down in the land of the Freedom Train, eggs-for-breakfast, deep-freezers, and towns like Clifton.

She Meets a Major

BORN Marguerite Aimée Buisson 28 years ago in the Paris suburb of Boulogne, she was working in the Marseilles office of a French shoe store chain when she met and married Major Mark Uttry Stephens, of Montclair, N.J., in the winter of 1944-45.

After a 10-day honeymoon trip to the Pyrenees in an Army jeep, they settled down to married life in a 3-room apartment in Marseilles. Their first child, Richard, was born on March 12, 1946, shortly before Major Stephens got his final orders to return home. His wife and child prepared to follow.

Perhaps no one, with the exception of other foreign-speaking war brides, realizes the difficulties that lay like a set of hurdles in the path of Mrs. Stephens. Even of those, few experienced the bleakness of her first landing.

Readers of the newspapers on May 22, 1946 were shocked at the news that the rickety Liberty ship Zebulon P. Vance, carrying 369 war brides and 57 babies from Le Havre, had landed in New York with an epidemic among the babies, terror among the mothers, and helplessness among the ship's doctors. Seven of them died, including the Stephens' tiny first-born.

Major Stephens, then on terminal leave after five years service that had begun immediately after graduation from Fordham University in 1941, had just started his first civilian job. He had no house and little savings.

Starting with tragedy and insecurity, the Clifton, N.J., French war bride has come far in the scant three years since she has been here. Her husband is now a successful salesman for the Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Corp. Together they have a house, two more children to help them forget the Vance, and what looks like permanent happiness. The girl from Paris is home.

Mark was a major in the Transportation Corps when he met Maggie in Marseilles.

STOP— loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths! —it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

FEEN-A-MINT
FAMOUS CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

Stephens' breakfast is strictly American: canned food for Mark, jr., cereal and vegetables for two-year-old Cherie Francine. Mrs. Stephens is amazed that American husbands help care for children.

Kindness built her trust in America

THE THREE YEARS have changed Marguerite Aimée Buisson Stephens into "Maggie" Stephens, the name by which she is known to her neighbors of the Allwood section of Clifton, all of them like herself the wives of veterans. The trim Stephens home, bought with a GI loan for $9,600, looks so much like the approximately 600 other "Knollcroft Homes" that if it were not for its 60 x 100-foot corner site you would have a hard time finding it.

Kitchen, living room, two bedrooms and bath are eminently American down to the last hardware-store pots and pans, and the last monogrammed towel. The 1940 De Soto four-door sedan in the attached garage is standard.

"Maggie" is five feet, one inch, with blue-grey eyes and light brown hair. She looks standard New Jersey in spite of some irrepressible Gallic gestures and head-shakings that accompany her onslaughts on the English language, which she can understand perfectly but has difficulty expressing. In full tilt, she sounds like a female version of Maurice Chevalier energetically trying to describe his own songs.

French nursery song, "Les Petites Marionettes" (in French) supplements regular Mother Goose rhymes.

In-laws, Clyde H. and Stella Stephens, encouraged "Maggie" during dark days after landing in U.S.

Washing machine, almost unknown in wartime France, makes work easy. French employ maids.

Clucking—an international reproof—keeps Mark, jr., from mischief. He understands French, English.

Neighbor Mrs. Eleanor Hudak explains measures in American cookbook. French use metric system.

Supermarket amazes Mrs. Stephens, "In France," she says, "you have to run to many of the stores."

Insight and tact on the part of husband, in-laws, and neighbors have helped remove the stinging sense of isolation that non-English speaking war wives usually feel. At first, while brooding about the Zebulon Vance disaster, she refused to speak English at all. Her first lessons came at her in-laws' house in Montclair, where nine members of the Stephens family patiently served as teachers.

Cooking in Two Languages

IT IS a triumph of patience and kindliness that her mother-in-law, Mrs. Stella Stephens, taught her how to cook over a period of several months when neither could understand the other. "We used to talk all the time," reflects Maggie now, "me in French and she in English! Then I get ze self-exercise book. Verree 'andy." Stephens, who learned to speak French at Fordham, speaks it around the house. It helps break the strain of her daily bouts with grocery clerks and meter-readers.

American customs no longer baffle her (she once sat at a table in a Bickford's cafeteria for an hour waiting for a waiter, and she once bought an expensive coat because she confused $200 with 200 francs) but she still misses some of the French folkways: walls around houses to keep children from wandering into the streets; wine served at meals; and Bastille Day, July 14, instead of the Fourth of July. But she is doing her best to learn. She's here to stay.

Gallic gestures accent rapid-fire comment: "In France, everybody shake hands with ceremony. Here they wave the arms and say 'Allo, 'Allo.' "

"So many things to make the work easy here, except with the children, naturellement." Stoutly French, she still refuses to trust babysitters.

"At first I say to Mark, 'Come back to France to live.' But now I like it here I want to stay. Next year I go study the Constitution." THE END.

DON'T FAIL YOUR DAUGHTER... YOU MUST TELL HER THESE Intimate Facts of Life!

And here's up-to-date information you and she can trust...

Every daughter has a right to know these intimate physical facts before she marries. You must inform her how important vaginal douching two or three times a week often is to cleanliness, her health, marriage happiness.—to combat odor and always after menstrual periods.

And you should make her realize no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for the douche is SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues as modern ZONITE!

Zonite Principle Developed By Famous Surgeon and Chemist

Be sure to caution your daughter about weak products for the douche. Pity the girl who, through ignorant advice of friends, uses such 'kitchen makeshifts' as vinegar, salt or soda. These never can assure the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

On the other hand you must warn your daughter about dangerous products—overstrong solutions of which may burn, harden or scar delicate tissue lining, and in time even impair functional activity of the mucous glands.

Remember, while ZONITE is powerfully germicidal, it's non-poisonous, non-irritating and ABSOLUTELY SAFE to delicate tissue lining. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without risk of injury.

Truly a Modern Miracle

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Leaves you feeling so sweet and clean. Helps guard against infection. ZONITE kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can be sure ZONITE DOES KILL every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. You can buy ZONITE at any drug counter.

HY GARDNER'S . . . Newsreel

FOOD DEPT.: Last summer, at a county fair held near Cleveland, a contest was held to determine who could eat the mostest in the shortest time. Within 15 minutes a middle-aged contestant devoured half a ham, two dozen eggs, a loaf of bread, four pounds of roast beef, six pounds of cooked vegetables and two apple pies. Asked to comment to reporters on his victory, the champ said: "Please, fellows, don't announce I won the contest 'til tomorrow. If my wife hears about it, I won't get any dinner tonight!" . . .

HERO WORSHIPPER: Comedian Bert Lahr's son, who's a dead-ringer for his dad, was recently introduced to a columnist, who inquired: "What do you want to be when you grow up? A painter like your uncle, or a writer like your cousin?" The kid looked up and pouted: "I don't want to be either," he replied, "I want to be a neurotic like papa!" . . .

Bert Lahr and son

PUNISHMENT FITS THE CRIME: Judge John F. Griffin of Chicago is experimenting with what might be the brightest idea yet to increase traffic safety. Part of the punishment is forcing violators to see a motion picture titled "Highway Maniac." I don't know what punishment the judge metes out to second offenders, but I assume he sends them to double features . . .

SUPER-SERVICE: A Kansas newspaper, reporting a near-fatality, started the story thisaway: "The woman was overcome by gas while taking a bath, but owes her life to the watchfulness of the janitor" . . .

SIGNS OF LIFE: Herbert Adler, the shoe man, observed this sign above an Arizona tavern's brass cuspidor: "We Aim to Please. Will You Aim, Too, Please?" . . . Reg Clough reports that Mrs. G. W. King, of Cusseta, Ga., has this notice posted over her henhouse: "Rush! Customer Waiting Order." . . . In Birmingham, England, a fellow named William Bowson was hit so hard by a falling sign that it knocked the cigarette out of his mouth. The sign read: "No Smoking!" . . . And in Hollywood, according to Herb Stein, a plumber advertises: "We Keep Your Wife in Hot Water" . . .

WRONG ADDRESS: A newspaper clipping from Croydon, England, reveals a cute item. In the midst of a speech Vice Admiral Sir John Edgell was making before the Royal Navy Old Comrades' Club, he suddenly took off his spectacles, dropped some notes to the table and ended his speech. "I'm sorry," he said, "I brought along the wrong notes. By mistake I took along my wife's shopping list." . . .

NATIONAL DEFENSE DEPT.: Probably the oddest news item of the new year was the story about the woman who visited her doctor to complain of a cold and ended up giving birth to a baby boy. This column would like to recommend that the boy be made an honorary member of Carlson's Raiders. Anybody who can sneak into the world that quietly will come in handy if we ever need an invasion force to sneak into enemy-held territory.

ANECDOTE: Bob Cristenberry, going through some old Hotel Astor files, ran across a memorandum sent to the Astor housekeeper by one of the maids. It read: "General Chan Wu Fang asks that we remove the Japanese prints from the walls of his bedroom. They make him angry when he wakes up in the morning."

EDUCATIONAL NOTE: Comedian Joe E. Lewis says he's a victim of progressive education. He spent two years in the second grade, three years in the third grade, four years in the fourth grade, etcetera, etcetera . . .

Joe E. Lewis: Learning was slow

MAMA KNOWS BEST: Barry Gray, the most talked-about all-night disc jockey in the country (Barry insults people seven nights a week from the fabulous Copa City Club in Miami Beach), has a little daughter whose mother taught her to close her evening prayers with the plea: "And please watch over my daddy." It all sounded very sweet to Mrs. Gray, until one night she heard the tot say: "And while you're at it, dear God, you'd better keep an eye on Mama, too!" . . .

COINCIDENCE? Directly following President Truman's inaugural address, the announcer at a small Florida radio station made a slip of the tongue and introduced a musical number titled: "Deep in the Heart of Taxes!" . . .

CLUB NEWS: A group of married women in Brooklyn, all on the same diet, have formed a new club. They call it: "Stop-Eating-Between-Meals-Anonymous" . . .

LISTEN TO Hy Gardner over your local MBS station tonight and every night except Saturday.

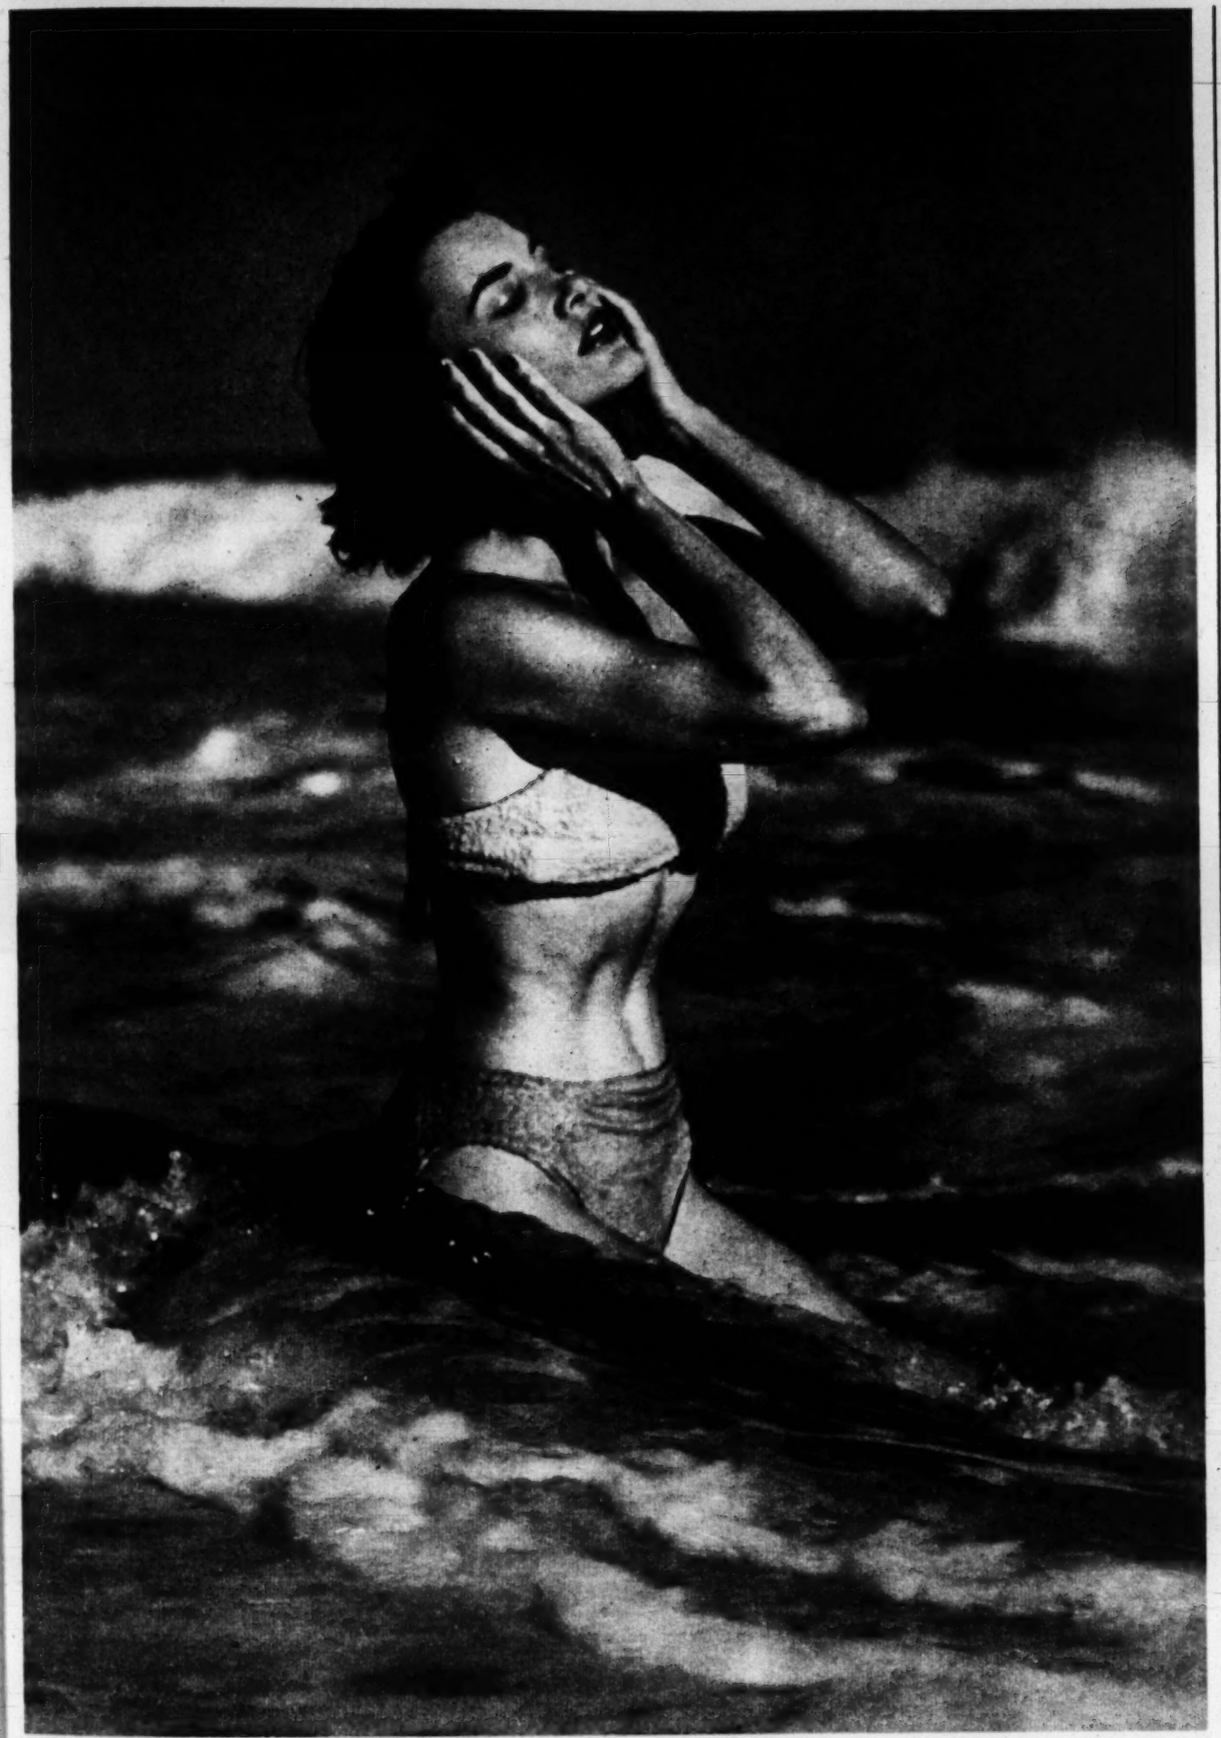
"Well, if twenty dollars is all you have we might as well eat out."

"You didn't wave at me?"



Fair and Warmer

Just in case you're office-bound in the north, you may be interested to know how the other half lives down Florida way these wintry days. Marilyn Karnes, the ocean-loving girl above, reports that the southern temperature is rising, the surf is cooling, and she's having a wonderful time. But she doesn't add that she wishes we were there.

Ann Pillsbury's EGGS JUBILEE with CHEESE

What flour but Pillsbury's Best could yield such perfect biscuits?

Serves 4.

Bake at 425° F. for 12 to 15 minutes.

Sift together 1 cup sifted Pillsbury's Best Enriched Flour, 1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt

Cut in...¼ cup shortening with two knives until mixture resembles coarse meal.

Add....½ cup milk; mix only until all flour is dampened.

Knead.....gently on floured board for a few seconds.

Roll.....to 5x12-inch rectangle, ¼ inch thick.

Cut.....lengthwise into four 12-inch strips. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Twist each strip several times and shape into ring. Seal ends.

Bake.....in hot oven (425° F.) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Fill.....rings with Deviled Eggs. Serve with hot Cheese Sauce.

Deviled Eggs: Halve 4 hard-cooked eggs lengthwise. Remove yolks and mash with fork. Blend in 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon vinegar, ½ teaspoon prepared mustard, ¼ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Refill egg whites with yolk mixture.

Cheese Sauce: Melt 3 tablespoons shortening in top of double-boiler over direct heat. Blend in 3 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Add gradually 1½ cups milk, stirring constantly until thickened. Place over boiling water. Blend in 1 cup grated cheese; stir occasionally until melted.

Mock battle: Boxer pup jumps gingerly as dachshund stages blitz attack.

Playful Pups

Boxer and Dachshund pups act human

IT IS MORE or less of an open question among dog-lovers, and probably among dogs, whether canine thought resembles ours. Photographer Ylla, one of the best animal specialists in the business, thinks so.

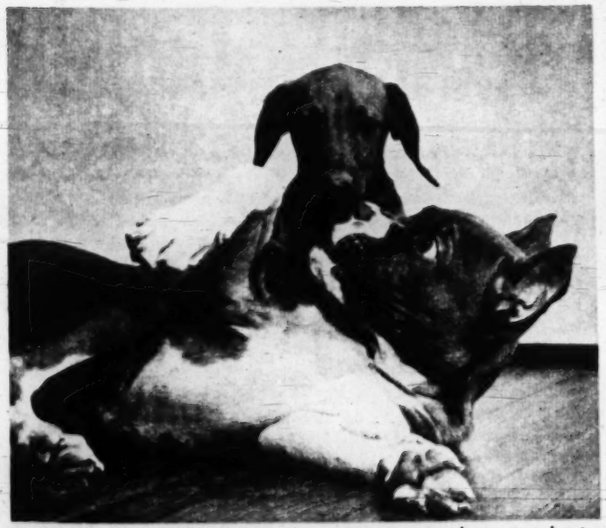
In this case, she caught boxer and dachshund pups going through a situation that has supplied comedy for at least as long as the early Chaplin movies—a raffish runt in floppy clothes trying to get the better of somebody twice his size, and more or less succeeding at it in the end.

Test of strength convinces dachshund boxer is sucker for bold action.

Tough guy snarl startles boxer into wary glance at pest.

"Ooft!" Fast blow to head makes tough guy wince in dismay.

Wheedling approach or "let's be friends" gambit induces boxer to play with toy bone. Pest waits for a careless move.



Lolling in fatuous belief reform has set in, boxer relents.

Tripping act spoils peace, starts fracas all over again.

RHEUMATISM YIELDS TO DRUGLESS METHOD OF TREATMENT

Excelsior Springs, Mo. —So successful has a comparatively new, drugless method proven for treating rheumatism and arthritis that an amazing new book will be sent free to any reader of this magazine who will write for it.

This book entitled, "Rheumatism," fully explains why drugs and medicines give only temporary relief and fail to remove the causes of the trouble.

The Ball Clinic, Excelsior Springs, Mo., has perfected a system of drugless treatment for rheumatism and arthritis combined with the world famous mineral waters and baths. This new system of treatment is fully described in the book and tells how it may be possible for you to find freedom from rheumatism.

You incur no obligation in sending for this instructive book. It may be the means of saving you years of untold misery. For writing promptly, the company will send a free copy of the book entitled "Rheumatism — Good Health, Life's Greatest Blessing." Address your letter to The Ball Clinic, Dept. 519, Excelsior Springs, Mo., but be sure to write today.

The Crosby men at their Spring Creek ranch:

RANCHER CROSBY

LATE last January, storms whistled down out of Canada and buried the western range country under heavy snows, and Arctic temperatures racked both men and cattle. Every rancher and farmer between Omaha and Stockton rounded up his stock, anxiously made sure that barns were tight and feed on hand.

One of the ranchers who shared the common lot of cold and storm was a figure ordinarily associated with sunny skies and happy endings: Bing Crosby, screen favorite of the nation, and top-flight balladeer for nearly two decades.

Crosby himself endured nothing more serious than the soggy snow that drifted down over Los Angeles for a day or two. Much in his mind, however, was the fate of his 2,500 head of cattle and 7,500 acres of rangeland located 60 miles northwest of the sparsely populated Nevada town of Elko.

Crosby's concern was not simulated. Already a towering figure in the entertainment world, the owner of several business enterprises and interested in several others, he has reserved special affection for the 1,200-acre home ranch, called "Spring Creek," and for four outlying establishments that make up his domain.

Der Bingle, singer, actor golfer, and best enemy of Bob Hope, is also a first-rate stockman

There, where his cattle graze and where his own fields produce more than enough hay for the stock each year, Bing, his wife, Dixie, and his four sons, Gary Evan, 15, the twins Phillip and Dennis, 14, and Lindsay, 11, come each summer for three months of country life. Last year the three eldest boys worked as farmhands, receiving the going wage of $6 a day for their toil. Bing himself generally returns for a month during the winter to enjoy upland shooting in his stubblefields.

Roughing It in Comfort

The Crosby family reach their ranch by a paved state highway which leads close to the Spring Creek ranchhouse. The latter consists of a large living room, a dining room, kitchen and four bedrooms. Outside are barns, bunk house for the 20 permanent hands, refrigerator house, and a log cabin where Bing stores the motor boat he uses on two nearby lakes.

A native westerner, Bing takes pride in his ranch, expects to make a profit from it. That he generally does is a credit to his good business sense as well as the fruitfulness of Spring Creek.

During pheasant season in fall, rancher Crosby takes up shotgun, calls dogs, and combs his stubblefields for birds.

THE D. A. TAKES A CHANCE

FIRST Doris Kane finds a huge bloodstain in her daughter's bedroom. But when District Attorney Doug Selby arrives a half-hour later, the place is as clean as a whistle!

Next day—in that same house—a glamour-girl is found—STABBED TO DEATH! Doug refuses to take suicide for an answer. And when his political enemies make it tough for him to get to the bottom of the case, Doug uses some dynamite of his own to blow it wide open!

2 An Ingenious New Puzzler by AGATHA CHRISTIE

THERE IS A TIDE . . .

WHEN Rosaleen Cloade's second husband died, she stood to inherit his fortune. But a mysterious stranger summons her brother, David—and claims Rosaleen's FIRST husband is still ALIVE!

That means Rosaleen wasn't legally married to Cloade, and has no claim on his money! The stranger says he will keep quiet — for ten thousand pounds. But that night HE is MURDERED! It's an open-and-shut case against David—until Hercule Poirot upsets the murder cart.

3 Winner of the Dodd, Mead Red Badge Mystery Prize!

VOICE OUT OF DARKNESS

By URSULA CURTISS

"YOU pushed her!" said the first note to Kate Meredith. "YOU PUSHED HER!" repeated the second note, and the third.

Did she? Had Kate actually murdered that child 13 years ago? She wasn't sure! Now—after all those years—the sinister memory of her accuser was haunting her, whirling around in her head, driving her mad! . . . Brrr! There's more chills here than just the blizzard that howls through its pages. As you read it you'll understand why it's such a sensational prize-winner!

3 BOOKS FREE! WHY DOES THE DETECTIVE BOOK CLUB MAKE THIS UNUSUAL OFFER?

HERE'S why we make this sensational free offer: We want you to see and read for yourself the kind of best-selling mystery novels the Detective Book Club picks for its member. Seeing is believing. Reading is proof. And the quickest and surest way to give you that proof is to GIVE you these three typical Club selections.

Most of the Club's selections are by masters of mystery who are already famous, like ERLE STANLEY GARDNER and AGATHA CHRISTIE. But every now and then, a new author, like URSULA CURTISS, comes through with a ten-strike thriller. You'll be hearing plenty about her soon. But why wait? You can get her new prize-winning book, PLUS these two other best-selling mystery novels right now, FREE—as a membership gift from the famous Detective Book Club.

How You Can Get the Best NEW Mysteries

About 300 new detective books are published every year. You can't read them all. It's hard to find the best. But a mystery by Erle Stanley Gardner, Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen, or Mignon G. Eberhart is sure to be good. ALL OF THESE, and many other famous writers have had their books selected by the Detective Book Club. Many are members themselves!

DETECTIVE BOOK CLUB

Club selections are ALL newly published books. As a member, you get three of them in one handsome volume (a $6.00 to $7.50 value) for only $1.89. You do not have to take a volume every month to maintain your Club standing; you may take as few as four each year, and still save two-thirds the usual price on those you decide to buy.

You Enjoy These Five Advantages

(1) Every month you are offered the cream of fine, brand-new detective books—by the best authors. (2) You save two-thirds the usual cost. (3) You do NOT have to accept every monthly triple-volume selection. (4) Your books are fresh, clean, unopened—delivered to your door. (5) They are so well printed, so handsomely bound, that month by month they grow into a lifetime library you'll be proud to own.

Mail Coupon NOW For Your 3 Free Books

Accept your FREE copies of these three top-flight mysteries NOW! Here are the rules: You are not obligated to take every month's three-in-one selection. A description of the next month's selection will be sent to you with each month's triple-volume, and you may reject in advance any volume not wanted. You may cancel membership whenever you wish; to maintain your Club standing, you may take as few as four triple-volumes each year you are a member.

THIS IS AMAZING! A MODERN TOWN IN THE HEART OF THE JUNGLE! HOW'D YOU DO IT, CYRIL?

IT WASN'T EASY, BEN--FIVE YEARS AGO THIS PLACE WAS WILD AND IT'S PEOPLE SAVAGES! BUT PRINCE HASSAN AGREED IT WAS TIME FOR PROGRESS AND WE BEGAN--

WHAT IN TARNATION ARE THOSE, CYRIL? THEY LOOK LIKE SILOS!

YOU'RE EXACTLY RIGHT, JOHN--WE NEEDED A STOREHOUSE FOR OUR GRAIN, AFTER THE NATIVES LEARNED TO PLANT THE FIELDS--

THESE SILOS HOLD ENOUGH WHEAT TO FEED THE ENTIRE POPULATION WITH HEALTHFUL BREAD--

BREAD? YOU MEAN TO SAY YOU TAUGHT THEM TO BAKE?

WHY NOT, BEN? THESE PEOPLE WERE QUICK TO LEARN--AND THEIR BREAD IS QUITE GOOD!

BLAST ME, IF IT DOESN'T SMELL LIKE HOME!

WOULD THE SAHIB CARE TO TRY ONE OF OUR BUNS?

WELL, I'LL BE HOG-TIED! A DOUGHNUT! AND IT'S DEEE-LICIOUS!

WHAT'S THIS? DELIVERY SERVICE?

THESE ARE OUR TRUCKS, BEN--THEY TRANSPORT THE BREAD AND CAKE TO THE VILLAGE STORES--SOME DAY PERHAPS, WE WILL HAVE AUTOMOBILES!

AND HERE, FRIENDS, IS OUR RESERVOIR--THESE TANKS HOLD ENOUGH TO SUPPLY OUR VILLAGE DURING THE DRY SEASON WHEN WATER MEANS LIFE OR DEATH TO THE JUNGLE PEOPLE--

MISTER MEEKS! OBSERVE! THE BORDER GUARDS SUMMON YOU!

WHAT DO THE SIGNALS MEAN, CYRIL?

THE BORDER PATROL ONLY CALLS ME IN AN EMERGENCY, BEN--THERE'S TROUBLE BREWING UP THERE!

FOR THE LUVVA PETE!

I-I DON'T UNDERSTAND... THIS FIRST CRATE MARKED V.[illegible]CINE, IT'S FULL OF WOMEN'S FINERY... IT MUST BE SOME HORRIBLE MISTAKE...

THESE LOCAL PILL-ROLLERS, WHO CAME OUT TO GET THEIR INDIVIDUAL SUPPLIES OF VACCINE... THEY LOOK LIKE THEY'RE THINKING OF PERFORMING AUTOPSIES — ON US... BETTER BREAK OUT THE REST OF THE CARGO, QUICK! MAYBE...

H-HOW BAD IS IT, TERRY?

BOXES ALL OPEN, SPRAY. THREE MORE FILLED WITH DOODADS ...THE REST CONTAIN MEDICAL SUPPLIES...EVEN FOUND A COUPLE MARKED "VACCINE," THAT HAD VACCINE IN 'EM.

THEN, QUICK! WE'VE GOT TO RATION SOME OUT TO THE LOCAL DOCTORS BEFORE THEY LOSE FAITH IN US ALTOGETHER.

WHEW! THERE GOES THE LAST ONE.

COULD HAVE BEEN WORSE ...THEY HAVE ENOUGH TO CLEAN UP THE INFECTED AREAS... THOSE FOUR BOXES SHOULD HAVE HELD ENOUGH TO IMMUNIZE THE WHOLE TOWN.

HOW COULD THIS JUNK HAVE GOTTEN INTO THESE BOXES?...LOOKS LIKE A NIGHTMARE FASHION SHOW — GOWNS, HATS, SHOES, LINGERIE, PERFUME, FANCY BATH STUFF... OOOH! I COULD...

HERE, PINK-TOP WENCH! REMOVE FILTHY HANDS FROM PERSONAL BELONGINGS OF BARONESS ALEXIS! YOU HEAR?

PIXIE PUZZLE ADVENTURES

by Matt Curzon

Copyright, 1949, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

1 ONLY A ROAD OF ICE NOW SEPARATES THE PIXIES FROM THE MAN. THEY TAKE THE ROAD MARKED BY FISH NAMES. ALL OTHER ROADS LEAD ASTRAY. FOLLOW THE FISH ROAD TO SAVE THE WOUNDED MAN!

2 SQUSH SQUSH SQUSH...THE PIXIES TRUDGE THROUGH SNOW TO REACH THE STRANDED AVIATOR. THE SNOW FALLS OVER HIM AND FEE FEE CALLS OUT! WHAT DOES SHE CALL? GUESS FEE FEE'S MISSING WORDS. WORD 1 AND WORD 2 TOGETHER SPELL WORD 3.

3 "HERE HE IS!" WIZZIE YELLS TO FEE FEE. "I'LL OUTLINE THE SNOW AROUND HIM SO YOU CAN SEE HIM. DRAW THE HIDDEN AVIATOR IN THE SNOW. START AT DOT 1 AND DRAW OVER THE LINES UNTIL YOU GET TO AN X. DO THE SAME WITH DOT 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 AND 7.

4 THE PIXIES CARRY THE WOUNDED AVIATOR TO THE SLEIGH. HIS TIRED LIPS OPEN AND HE WHISPERS ABOUT HIS ACCIDENT, TALKING IN A ROUNDABOUT WAY. START AT I IN THE CIRCLE AND SEE HOW FAST YOU CAN READ THE AVIATOR'S WORDS.*

ANSWERS

1 THE FOLLOWING IS THE FISH ROAD: COD, GUN, CARP, PIKE, BASS, FLUKE, PERCH.

2 NOW WHERE IS HE? HE WAS RIGHT HERE, SEEMS TO BE NOWHERE.

He Needs a Man-to-Man Talk!

BOY OH BOY! JULIE SURE DID A BANG-UP JOB OF TELLING YOU OFF THAT TIME, JOE!

SKIP IT, JUNIOR! I DON'T NEED SNIDE CRACKS FROM SMALL FRY TO KNOW I'M A LOST CAUSE!

WHOA, JOE! YOU JUST DON'T UNDERSTAND WOMEN! JULIE WANTS YOU TO SEE YOUR DENTIST. BUT SHE CAN'T FIGURE OUT HOW TO GIVE YOU THE BAD BREATH PITCH!

WOW! THAT'S CUTTING ME DOWN TO SIZE! BUT I'LL TAKE THAT TIP. AND THANKS, KID!

JOE SEES HIS DENTIST!

"HERE'S WHY: COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HAS AN ACTIVE PENETRATING FOAM THAT GETS INTO THE HIDDEN CREVICES BETWEEN TEETH — HELPS CLEAN OUT DECAYING FOOD PARTICLES — STOP STAGNANT SALIVA ODORS — REMOVE THE CAUSE OF MUCH BAD BREATH. AND COLGATE'S SOFT POLISHING AGENT CLEANS ENAMEL THOROUGHLY, GENTLY, SAFELY!"

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM DOES A SUPER JOB OF POLISHING TEETH, TOO! AND HOW I GO FOR COLGATE'S GRAND WAKE-UP FLAVOR!

LATER — THANKS TO COLGATE DENTAL CREAM

SINCE WE HAD THAT COLGATE TALK JOE'S WON JULIE — IN A WALK!

IT CLEANS YOUR BREATH WHILE IT CLEANS YOUR TEETH!

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Synopsis: SLOWLY THE HIDEOUS AFREET DRAWS BACK OUT OF SIGHT, WHILE COM FOOYAT, THE FAT LITTLE WIZARD, CLAPS HIS HANDS AND SQUEALS: "SUCCESS, SUCCESS! I'VE CONJURED UP A DEMON!"

WHILE HIS OTHER COMPANIONS STAND FROZEN IN HORROR, PRINCE VALIANT CLAMBERS UP THE CLIFF. HIS HEART IS SICK WITH DREAD, BUT HE MUST PUT MERLIN'S TEACHING TO THE TEST!

NO SIGN IS THERE OF THE AWFUL CREATURE, BUT IN A GROVE SOME DISTANCE AWAY HE SEES A PEASANT WOMAN GATHERING WOOD.

"DID YOU SEE AUGHT OF DJINN OR DEMON HEREABOUT?" HE ASKS.

"NO," SHE ANSWERS. "BUT THERE ARE MANY IN THIS DUBIOUS LAND. THEY COME AND GO, DRIVING THEIR VICTIMS TO MADNESS WITH FEAR. THEY WILL NOT HARM YOU IF YOU DO THEIR BIDDING..... WHICH OFTEN IS NOT EASY."

BUT AS HE TURNS TO GO, VAL SEES A FAMILIAR PIECE OF CLOTH STUFFED INTO A BUNDLE OF FAGGOTS. A GREAT WEIGHT OF DOUBT IS LIFTED, FOR HE KNOWS THAT SOMEWHERE IN THAT SAME BUNDLE A HIDEOUS MASK IS ALSO HIDDEN!

HE RETURNS TO HIS FEAR-HAUNTED FRIENDS, LOOKS AT THEIR FRIGHTENED FACES AND BURSTS OUT LAUGHING! ALTHOUGH HE TELLS NOTHING OF HIS DISCOVERY, THE TENSION IS BROKEN..... FOR FEAR CANNOT ABIDE WHERE THERE IS LAUGHTER.

©1949, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc., WORLD RIGHTS RESERVED.

THEY RIDE DEEPER INTO THE UNEASY DOMAIN; ALL IS QUIET EXCEPT THE WIZARD. "I CONJURED UP A DJINN, DIDN'T I?" HE BABBLES. "AM I NOT A GREAT SORCERER? MY MAGIC WORKS! I WILL DO MORE GREAT THINGS FOR YOU!"

HAL FOSTER

THAT NIGHT WHEN THEY CAMP VAL TELLS THEM: "OUR PRESENCE HERE IS KNOWN. IF YOU HEAR UNEARTHLY SCREAMS OR SEE FRIGHTFUL DEMONS..." HE SNUGGLES UNDER HIS CLOAK, "PLEASE DON'T WAKE ME!"

NEXT WEEK - lilwynde.
